Dioxin in Food

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the food products he is testing for the presence of dioxin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 28 May 1989]: My Ministry's food science laboratory has an ongoing research programme on dioxins designed to address a number of issues. Human breast milk has been examined as part of an international collaborative exercise: the analysis of composite food samples is under way in order to help confirm which classes of food are associated with dioxins: and individual retail purchases of a range of fatty foods such as milk, meat products and fish are also being examined. Finally, preliminary studies on the migration of dioxins into food from paper-based products such as milk cartons, tea bags and coffee filter papers have recently been carried out following reports that certain bleached paper products may contain dioxins. Results will be published as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the income of pensioners with no other source of income than state benefits as a proportion of the average earnings of all male workers in each year since 1974.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

Average gross income of pensioners with no other source of income than state benefits as a proportion of the average earnings of all male workers

Year
1975	27
1976	27
1977	29
1978	29
1979	28

1982	30
1984	31
1985	30
1986	29

Notes:
1. Pensioner incomes are from the family expenditure survey.
2. Earnings data are from the new earnings survey.

The average gross income of this group of pensioners as a proportion of all manual workers' earnings was 32 per cent. in 1974, 33 per cent. in 1979, increasing to 37 per cent. in 1986.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, with respect to the support grades in his Department (a) what is the number of staff employed, (b) how many vacancies there are and how many of these have existed for over one month and over three months, (c) how many temporary and casual appointments there are and (d) how much overtime was worked by them in London and elsewhere.

Mr. Scott: At 1 April 1989 there were 2,844 staff employed and 52·5 current vacancies. Information about the length of time vacancies have existed cannot be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost. There were 76 casual and temporary appointments and 1,688 hours overtime worked during March 1989. This information is provisional and does not include locally paid staff employed in the regional organisation.

Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish for each month since April 1988 the number of people submitting claims for income support and family credit and the number unsuccessful; and if the latter data can be expressed as a percentage of the former.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information is in the tables.

Source: Local office and family credit branch data collected for management information purposes. They are provisional and subject to amendment.

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are on (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) unemployment benefit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest available figures are:

	Number
(a) Income Support	4,416,000
(b) Family Credit	254,000
(c) Unemployment Benefit	500,000

Social Fund

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much the Peckham Department of Social Security offices were given from the social fund (a) in 1988-89 and (b) in 1989-90; whether this has increased in line with inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The details of the social fund allocations are as follows:

	1988-89		1989-90
	Loans £	Grants £	Loans £	Grants £
Camberwell AO	442,473	186,487	409,866	175,936

Peckham ILO	343,582	145,406	329,774	145,861

A note explaining the basis on which the social fund allocations for 1989-90 were calculated is in the Library.

Pensioners

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to how many pensioners receive only the state retirement pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As at 30 September 1988, 2,168,320 pensioners in Great Britain were receiving only the basic state retirement pension, that is they were not in receipt of graduated pension or additional pension. However, these pensioners may also have been receiving other contributory and non-contributory benefits. In particular, a pensioner who has only the basic state pension and little or no other income or savings may be entitled to income support and housing benefit.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the percentage of pensioners on incomes on or below 140 per cent. of income support level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The low income families statistics, which show the number and characteristics of pensioners not receiving supplementary benefit but with incomes within 140 per cent. of the supplementary benefit scale rates have been discontinued. Alternative measures of net income before and after housing costs have been introduced. Figures on this alternative basis covering the years 1981, 1983 and 1985 can be found in "Households Below Average Income", copies of which are in the Library.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the percentage of pensioners in the lowest quintile of the national income distribution; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the causes of the reduction in the percentage of pensioners in the lowest quintile in recent years; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how many pensioners are in the highest quintile of the population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1979, 38 per cent. of pensioner tax units (a pensioner tax unit is a single person of state pension age or over, or a couple where the man is of state pension age or over) were in the lowest fifth of the national income distribution. In 1986, the latest year for which information is available, this figure had fallen to 24 per cent. The factors contributing to this reduction include the 23 per cent. real terms increase in pensioners' average total net income between 1979 and 1986, and the fact that pensioners' incomes increased twice as fast as those of the population as a whole over the same period. In 1986, 6 per cent. of pensioners were in the highest fifth of the national income distribution.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the numbers of pensioners in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As at 30 September 1988 there were approximately 9·4 million retirement pensioners resident in Great Britain.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of pensioners receiving (a) income support and (b) housing benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest available figure for income support is 1,671,000. This relates to cases where either the claimant or his partner is aged 60 or over. Information for housing benefit recipients is not yet available.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners lost entitlement to housing benefit following the introduction of the capital cut-off limit of £8,000; what was the estimated annual saving to the Exchequer as against the previous arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The housing benefit capital limit was introduced on 14 April 1988 at £6,000, at an estimated net saving of £80 million; it was increased to £8,000 on 13 May 1988. The increase cost an estimated £35 million and restored entitlement to housing benefit to around 100,000 of the 300,000 people—almost all pensioners—who had lost entitlement in April.

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will estimate the percentage of total pensioners' income in 1988 represented by social security benefits; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will estimate the percentage of total pensioners' income in 1988 represented by occupational pensions; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will estimate the percentage of total pensioners' income in 1988 represented (a) by savings and (b) by investments; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will estimate the percentage of total pensioners' income in 1988 represented by earnings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1986, the latest year for which information is available, 59 per cent. of pensioners' average gross income was derived from social security benefits, 20 per cent. from occupational pensions, 14 per cent. from savings and investments, and 7 per cent. from earnings.

Note: There is no generally agreed distinction between savings and investments.

SOCIAL SECURITY

DSS Leaflets

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Bradford Gingerbread centre is going to receive leaflets ordered from DSS Leaflets, PO Box 21, Stanmore, on 7 December 1988; when the last batch of leaflets ordered by Bradford Gingerbread centre on 10 August last were dispatched; if he has any plans to improve the service offered by DSS Leaflets, Stanmore; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that the DSS leaflets unit has no record of an order dated 7 December 1988. The order dated 10 August 1988 was dispatched on 4 April 1989.

The principal factors causing delay in the distribution of some orders from Canons Park leaflets unit are the considerably increased demand for bulk orders, and the physical constraints of the unit which preclude an immediate expansion of capacity or the recruitment of more staff to cope with this demand.

From 1 May requests for bulk orders of leaflets and forms from organisations such as Gingerbread, will be supplied within 48 hours from receipt of order.

The Department will be testing a service giving a 48-hour turnround for members of the public. People will be able to order leaflets by telephone using the Department's Freeline or by preprinted card.

Income Support

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of (a) pregnant women on income support and (b) free milk and vitamin awards to women on income support.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Provisional figures for May 1988 show that approximately 41,000 pregnant women on income support were claiming free welfare milk and vitamins. No separate information is available about the total number of pregnant women on income support.

Earnings

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes there have been to the definition of earnings for national insurance calculation purposes since the last fiscal year; and under what authority such changes were made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Section 3(1) of the Social Security Act 1975 defines earnings so as to include any remuneration or profit derived from an employment. In May 1988 the Social Security (Contributions) Amendment (No. 3) Regulations 1988 (SI 1988/No. 860) came into force. These regulations, which were made by exercising powers in section 3(2) and 3(3) of the 1975 Social Security Act, provided that payments to employed earners in the form of a wide range of securities but not equities, should be included in earnings for contributions purposes.

Paragraph 1 of schedule 7 to the Social Security Bill will also amend section 3 of the Social Security Act 1975 to provide that earnings will include payments which are consideration for restrictive undertakings specified in subsection (1) and (2) of section 313 of the Income and Taxes Act 1988.

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what differences there are between the definitions of earnings for national insurance and PAYE purposes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: National insurance contributions are charged on gross earnings and only earnings of all employees, with the exception of those employees who are over pensionable age. National insurance contributions are not charged on occupational pensions, and investment income. Further information on what is included in gross pay for national insurance purposes is included in the recently published "Employers Manual on National Insurance Contributions", which I have placed in the Library.

Income tax is deducted under PAYE on income from offices and employments, occupational pensions, certain social security benefits and lump sum payments.

Hillsborough Disaster Fund

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what effect payments from the Hillsborough disaster fund will have on the level of benefits for bereaved families.

Mr. Scott: No payments have yet been made by the Hillsborough disaster fund and therefore it is not possible to say whether and how they might affect benefits. Officials have been in touch with the fund's administrators to advise them on the social security rules. The majority of social security benefits would not in any case be affected by any payment from the fund.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide figures for (a) the number of individuals and (b) the number of families facing marginal tax rates in excess of (i) 70 per cent., (ii) 80 per cent., and (iii) 90 per cent. from 1973 to the present day.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish estimates of the numbers of individuals or families facing marginal tax rates in excess of 70 per cent., 80 per cent., 90 per cent., 100 per cent., and above 100 per cent., for each year from 1979-80 to 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 11 April 1989]: Table 15.15 on page 16 of Cm. 615 sets out estimates for November 1985 and April 1988. Information on the numbers of individuals and families by different marginal deduction rates is not available for earlier years. I also refer the hon. Members to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hornchurch (Mr. Squire) on 17 February, at column 393. The table sets out the latest estimates of the numbers of working heads who might face combined rates of deduction of 70 per cent. or more. The figures reflect the March 1989 Budget and include the effects of the employees' national insurance reform which takes effect in October.

Combined marginal income tax and benefit withdrawal rates 1989-90
Working heads of tax units (000) Great Britain numbers facing combined rates of over 70 per cent.—in bands

	Families with children	Couples and single people	Total
Over 100 per cent.	—	—	—
Over 90 per cent.	40	5	45
Over 80 per cent.	195	15	210
Over 70 per cent.	365	50	415

Notes:

1. Marginal deduction rates shown are for heads of tax units in receipt of family credit/housing benefit where at least one partner works 24 hours or more a week.
2. All estimates are for 1989-90 and are based on combined 1985 and 1986 family expenditure survey data and are consistent with this year's Government expenditure White Paper.
3. Some totals may not sum because of rounding.
4. Denotes an estimate of fewer than 2,500.
5. The total number of working heads of tax-units with more than 24-weekly remunerative hours is approximately 17 million. Those shown in the table therefore represent only 2·5 per cent. of the total.

Retirement Incomes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if, on the basis of data in the family expenditure survey for 1986, he will state the average percentage income of (a) all retired households, (b) single retired households, (c) retired one-man households and (d) retired one-woman households, in each case in all five quintile groupings, which is derived from (i) original income, (ii) contributory retirement pension, (iii) supplementary benefit and (iv) housing benefit; and what is the total average income of each qroup in each quintile.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 12 April 1989]: On the basis of data in the family expenditure survey pensioners' average income cannot be broken down separately into the proportions derived from contributory retirement pensions, supplementary benefit and housing benefit. These sources of income are taken together in column 2.

[1] Original income consists of occupational and personal pensions, income from savings and investment, and any earnings from employment or self-employment.

[2] A pensioner tax unit is a single person of state pension age or over, or a married couple where the man is of state pension age or over. Each group has been divided into quintiles on the basis of equivalised gross income.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members Dining Room

Mr. Ashton: To ask the Lord President of the Council on how many occasions tables have had to be removed from the Members Dining Room because of staff shortages in the last year.

Mr. Wakeham: On four occasions.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the hourly rate of pay for waitresses employed in the Members Dining Room; and what rate is paid to agencies supplying waitresses.

Mr. Beith: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons

Commission, what is the full establishment of waitresses in the Members Dining Room; and how many are currently employed.

Mr. Beith: The full establishment of waiters/waitresses (excluding those who serve only wine) is 15. The current complement is eight.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what discussions the Commission has had with trade union representatives of dining room staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Beith: None by the Commission. Formal discussions with union representatives take place with management through the Whitley committee machinery in accordance with recognised procedures.

Mr. Ashton: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, when he expects the Members Dining Room to return to a full complement of fully employed staff.

Mr. Beith: It is not possible to be precise. Four more waitresses are expected to begin duties in the very near future and efforts are being made to recruit the staff needed to fill the remaining three posts. I shall arrange for the hon. Member to be informed when the staff is back to full strength.

HEALTH

"Putting Patients First"

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information on opting out or indication of interest in opting out under the terms of his White Paper "Putting Patients First", has been required from hospitals in the south west region by 8 May; what is the significance of this date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The chief executive of the NHS management board wrote to all regional general managers on 14 March about the preparation of expressions of interest in self-governing hospital status. A copy of the letter (reference: EL(89)MB/58) has been placed in the Library. Regional returns are to be made to the Department by 31 May; expressions of interest are to reach RHAs by 8 May to give them time to comment.

Dental Services

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of weeks per year worked by the dental staff of the former Dental Estimates Board in each year during the period 1985 to 1988, excluding sick leave, leave, study leave and attendance at courses.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Weeks
1986	44·45
1988	43·05

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current time input relating to an estimate form submitted for prior approval compared with the average payment case.

Mr. Freeman: During March 1989 the dental practice board returned requests for approval of dental treatment within 18 days of receipt and took 24 days to issue payment schedules for treatment fees claimed by dentists. Both these figures are averages.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the last date when the work of the dental estimates board was subjected to an approved efficiency study; and what was the result.

Mr. Freeman: The most recent efficiency study was undertaken in 1984. A number of recommendations concerning improvements in the board's organisation and procedures were made and implemented. In line with other health service bodies the board is subject to the annual accountability review arrangements. A comprehensive review of the board's role and function is planned for later this year.

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of dental estimates authorised for payment in each quarter from the beginning of 1985 until the most recent date when figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

Number of Estimates Scheduled (England and Wales)

Quarter	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989
1st.	8,198,837	8,363,883	8,153,035	8,494,306	9,183,731
2nd.	8,000,376	8,692,834	8,615,213	8,378,456	—
3rd.	8,564,944	8,075,163	8,623,781	9,112,402	—
4th.	8,286,568	8,933,076	8,467,152	9,481,178	—
	33,050,725	34,064,956	33,859,181	35,466,342

Defibrillators

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, region by region, the number of defibrillators which have been purchased (a) by the health authority, (b) not by the health authority and (c) in the latter case, the main source of funding for each defibrillator.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available centrally. Arrangements for purchase of equipment of this kind are a matter for each separate health authority.

Nurses (Assaults)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has held, or proposes to hold, discussions with the police about assaults on nurses;

(2) what is the trend in the number of assaults on nurses;

(3) how many nurses' homes are signposted in hospital grounds;

(4) how many nurses have been issued with personal alarms by their employers;

(5) what steps he is taking to train nursing staff in violence avoidance;

(6) in how many nurses' homes full-time security staff are employed;

(7) what is his estimate of the number of nurses who have been assaulted in hospitals or hospital grounds in the last year for which figures are available;

(8) if he will set up a working party to study the incidence of violence against nurses and the reasons for it and to make recommendations;

(9) if he will provide central funding and specific grants for measures to prevent violence against nurses;

(10) if he has issued any recent circulars to health authorities about measures to be taken to cope with violence against nurses;

(11) what information he has as to how many break-ins have been reported in nurses' homes in the last year for which figures are available;

(12) what steps he has taken to ensure that nurses are provided with transport after working on late duty;

(13) if he has made any recommendations to health authorities about standards of lighting in hospital grounds.

Mr. Mellor: Although we do not hold the detailed information about nurses requested by the right hon. Member centrally, many health authorities have taken effective measures to ensure the safety of their staff. These include the employment of contract security staff; close circuit television; personal alarms; two way radios; improved lighting and the introduction of professional nurse triage to reduce waiting times in accident and emergency departments.

At national level the DHSS advisory committee on violence to staff was established in February 1987 to examine the problem throughout the caring services. The committee, which comprised management, professional bodies, family practitioners and trades union representatives from all the services, was chaired by my noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale. Its report was published in July last year. Copies were issued to all NHS general managers and placed in the Library.

The report stresses the importance of accurate reporting of incidents and its principal recommendations relate to the need for employers to recognise the fundamental place of a safe working environment in the determination of local priorities and budgets and the development of local safety and security policies. Specifically, it urges liaison with the police and with staff and their representatives; training in the avoidance and control of violent situations; local collaboration and the sharing of experiences; and the counselling of victims. A video reinforcing the committee's recommendations and in which I stressed ministerial concern about this important issue was sent to all health authorities in February this year.

I strongly endorse the theme of the report that the issue of violence to staff is one which can be most effectively tackled locally by management and staff working together.

Aluminium

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health as part of the research that is to take place into the effects of aluminium in infants, if he will include a study of the extent to which aluminium sulphate added to water supplies as a cleaning agent enters the body and is hazardous.

Mr. Freeman: The Medical Research Council, which is the main Government-funded body dealing with biomedical and clinical research, and which receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science, is sponsoring research into the uptake and biological effects of aluminium from all sources, including drinking water.

Other independent research is being undertaken into the sources of aluminium in infants' diet and its absorption and excretion.

The Department of Health's independent advisory committee on toxicity of chemicals in food, consumer products and the environment will be asked to advise on the results of this research when they are available.

Cholesterol

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost to the National Health Service of carrying out a test to establish a patient's blood cholesterol level; and whether such a test can be requested on a routine visit to a general practitioner.

Mr. Freeman: Information on actual cost of tests to establish a patient's blood cholesterol level is not collected centrally. It is known however that the cost will vary depending on whether such tests are carried out at a large NHS laboratory or elsewhere,—for example in a GP's surgery. These tests are available under the National Health Service.

Hospices

Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has yet completed his review into the funding of hospices; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. I hope to complete the review shortly.

Airline Foods

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 6 April, Official Report, columns 289-90, if he has now given consideration to the report "A Survey of Microbiological Quality of Airline Foods" by three London boroughs; and if he will now make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have recently received a copy of the survey of the microbiological quality of airline meals. It is still receiving careful consideration within the Department.

Consultants

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by each health district the number of consultants in each specialty who have merit awards; what this figure represents as a percentage of the total number of consultant posts; whether he has any proposals to change the way in which merit awards are allocated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have information by district readily available. Information for each region of England and Wales and for each specialty on the number of holders of distinction awards is given in the tables.

The working paper 7 "NHS Consultants: Appointments, Contracts and Distinction Awards", following the White Paper "Working for Patients", sets out the Government's proposals to change the way in which distinction awards are allocated, and will be discussed with the medical profession.

Cervical Cancer Tests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking urgently to review the system of cervical cancer smear tests so that no women whose tests have proved positive suffer delays of more than three to four weeks before starting treatment.

Mr. Mellor: Department of Health guidance, HC(88) 1, states that district health authorities should ensure that adequate facilities are available for the prompt investigation, treatment and follow-up of women whose smears show that this is necessary. In order to monitor health authorities' achievement in this respect we have asked them to notify us in their 1989 planning statements of waiting times for further diagnosis and treatment, particularly colposcopy, where these exceed four weeks. We shall then be pressing health authorities to take action where there are problems.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Mellor: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as can be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost as soon as possible.

Baby Food

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement about the health risk in baby food;

(2) when he was first warned of the health risk in baby food;

(3) whether he has obtained the advice of the chief medical officer about the health risk in baby food;

(4) whether he plans to issue any advice to baby food manufacturers about continuing sale of baby food;

(5) whether he plans to issue any advice to parents about the health risks in baby food;

(6) whether he plans to issue any advice to health workers about the risks in baby food.

Mr. Freeman: We first became aware of particles of glass being found in jars of baby food in March 1989, when the manufacturers arranged withdrawal of the batch concerned and advised the Department. Since then, as my hon. Friend said on 26 April at column 949, there have been growing numbers of reports which have been recognised as deliberate contamination and this is the subject of police inquiries. The Department on 28 April endorsed common-sense advice to the public which, if followed, should remove any risk. This advice is being passed also to the National Health Service and to chief environmental health officers of local authorities. The question of continuing the sale of these products is for the manufacturers in consultation with the police.

Population Statistics

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the present population of England and Wales who are over the age of 18 years.

Mr. Freeman: It is estimated that the resident population of England and Wales aged 18 and over was 38,607,700 at mid-1987. An estimate relating to mid-1988 will be available shortly.

Coastal Waters (Pollution)

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has any record of specific skin diseases and infections occurring amongst fishermen operating in British coastal waters; and what investigations his Department has carried out into the incidence of skin diseases and infections occurring amongst fishermen operating in British coastal waters.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 26 April 1989]: These diseases are not notifiable diseases and, therefore, this Department does not keep any records. No investigations have been carried out by this Department.

Stump Socks

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations have been received by his Department about stump socks for amputees;

(2) where National Health Service supplies of stump socks are listed.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 April 1989]: These are matters for the Disablement Services authority to which the hon. Member should address his question.

THE ARTS

Objects in Lieu

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Minister for the Arts which of the offers of objects in lieu of tax during the financial year 1988-89 listed in his answer on 24 April, Official Report, column 432, carried a condition as to destination; if he will give the relevant particulars; whether he will give particulars of the 10 portraits satisfying tax of £260,717; and whether he will give the total sum of tax thus satisfied during the year in question, with a breakdown into (a) the total covered by the basic provision and (b) the total covered by recourse to the reserve.

Mr. Luce: Among the items accepted in lieu of tax in the financial year 1988-89 referred to in my answer of 24 April, Official Report, c. 432, the following carried conditions:

Print by William Blake—conditional upon allocation to the Fitzwilliam Museum.
"The Artist's Studio" by Tillemans—conditional upon allocation to the Castle Museum, Norwich.
Roubiliac busts—conditional upon remaining in situ at Mellerstain House.
Kauffman portraits—conditional upon allocation to the Scottish National Portrait Gallery.
"Fabula" by El Greco—conditional upon allocation to the National Galleries of Scotland.

The £260,717 referred to in the answer of 24 April has been paid in respect of nine portraits accepted in lieu of tax (a tenth portrait was withdrawn at a late stage); further details of the acceptance of this conditional offer and allocation will be announced shortly by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland.

The total tax satisfied during the 1988-89 financial year was £6,719,816·88, of which £2 million was covered by the basic provision and £4,719,816·88 was spent from the Reserve. The total includes £30 additional tax on the Kauffman portraits, announced as £34,100 in the reply of 24 April.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Indecent and Obscene Items (Seizure)

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many indecent or obscene items have been seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise under the Customs and Excise Act 1952 and the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 in each year since 1979.

Mr. Lilley: The number of indecent or obscene items seized by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise, under these Acts, in each year since 1979 was as follows:

	Number
1979-80	98,300
1980-81	66,600
1981-82	83,500
1982-83	172,000
1983-84	170,000
1984-85	43,400
1985-86	53,100
1986-87	33,000
1988-89	24,000

The European Court of Justice ruled in 1985 that the prohibition on the importation from the European Community of indecent or obscene articles imposed by section 42 of the Customs Consolidation Act 1876 is not lawful under article 36 of the treaty of Rome, unless the domestic manufacture and sale of these articles was also prohibited by United Kingdom legislation.

The effect of the ruling was that:

(a) Customs could continue to seize obscene material but not, with the exception of material involving children, seize indecent material; and
(b) Customs could no longer seize items such as sex aids which can be legally sold on the home market.

Although the decision of the European Court of Justice related solely to material imported from the Community, Customs and Excise consider that it would be inequitable and impracticable not to apply the same standards to all imports. The changes following from this ruling account for the decline in the number of items seized since 1985.

Fuel Duty

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the duty paid on (a) aviation kerosene and (b) fuels used by commercial vehicles.

Mr. Lilley: The effective rate of duty on aviation kerosene is nil.

Most commercial vehicles use diesel fuel (DERV), some use petrol and a few use liquified petroleum gas (LPG). The rates of duty are:

DERV	0·1729
Petrol
(unleaded)	0·1772
(leaded, 4 star)	0·2044
LPG	0·1022

Exchange Equalisation Account Act

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce legislation to amend section 4 of the Exchange Equalisation Account Act 1979 so as to provide that the Comptroller and Auditor-General's certificate on the operations on and transactions in connection with the account is accompanied by information of the losses incurred each month.

Mr. Lilley: No. I see no reason to change the practice of successive Governments regarding the disclosure of details of the exchange equalisation account.

Personal Equity Plans

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from investment trusts and unit trusts about personal equity plans; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I have received representations from a number of investment trusts and unit trusts, and from the Association of Investment Trust Companies. The main concern is that investment trusts in particular will find it difficult to meet the requirement from 6 April 1990 that, to qualify for investment through a personal equity plan, 75 per cent. of their own investment must be in United Kingdom ordinary shares. The Government have therefore decided to introduce four relaxations:

(i) To help investment and unit trust PEP schemes in existence before the Budget, an investor will have the option of investing up to £750 a year in an investment or unit trust which does not satisfy the 75 per cent United Kingdom requirement. This will be an alternative to investing up to £2,400 in trusts which do satisfy the requirement.

(ii) Third market and unquoted shares of United Kingdom companies in a unit or investment trusts' portfolio will count towards the 75 per cent. test.

(iii) Unit trust "funds of funds" will be qualifying investments, provided that the unit trusts in which the fund of funds invests are authorised securities schemes. From 6 April 1990, funds of funds must also comply with the requirement to invest at least 75 per cent. in United Kingdom equities.

(iv) Investment trusts' "capital" and "income" shares will also count towards the 75 per cent. test, as will other ordinary shares issued by them. This will enable investment trusts (and unit trusts) to invest in United Kingdom investment trusts which issue capital or income shares rather than ordinary shares. But, as with unit trust "funds of funds", the underlying investments must, overall, be 75 per cent. in United Kingdom companies.

The Personal Equity Plan Regulations 1989 will be amended in due course to reflect these changes.

Exports

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has to the level of exports as a percentage of total production in the United Kingdom in 1974, 1979 and 1989; and what are the comparable figures in other Group of Seven countries.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 28 April 1989]: Figures for 1974, 1979 and 1987, the latest year for which comparable figures are available, are given in "OECD National Accounts" volume 1 1960-1987 for all the countries in question except the United Kingdom. Figures for the United Kingdom can be found in the CSO publication "Economic Trends Annual Supplement" and in the CSO press release of 17 March 1989.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Medical Schools

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what extra provision will be made in medical schools for students to receive course tuition in general practice business management; and whether such provision will be made additional to, or within, the current curriculum.

Mr. Jackson: Medical education and training follows the recommendations of the education committee of the General Medical Council. These already provide for training in administrative and managerial skills to be given as part of the postgraduate, vocational phase of medical training.

University Teachers (Early Retirement)

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many university teachers have taken early retirement in each year since 1979 (a) in total, (b) in each university and (c) in each subject.

Mr. Jackson: The available information is as given in my reply of 10 February 1989 at columns 842-842. Details for individual institutions and subjects are not held centrally.

Teacher Training

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements will apply for the approval of courses of initial teacher training when the term of office of the members of the Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education expires at the end of 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: As I announced yesterday, I am today issuing a consultation document setting out my proposals in detail and asking for comments by 30 June. I have placed a copy in the Library. I propose that the council is reconstituted, that the criteria for the approval of courses are made tougher, and that the role of local committees in the accreditation process is strengthened.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking within the European Economic Community Council of Ministers to ensure that the aid provided through Lomé conventions III and IV to the Ethiopian Government is administered in the interests of, and actually reaches, those for whom it is intended.

Mr. Chris Patten: We are actively involved in examining proposals prepared by the Commission for development assistance to Ethiopia under the Lomé conventions through our participation in the European development fund committee, on which all member states are represented. We have consistently stressed to the Commission the importance of close monitoring of such assistance to ensure that the aid reaches the intended beneficiaries.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the total British public and private overseas aid for 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: This figure is not yet available.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Whooping Cough Vaccine Cases (Legal Aid)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Attorney-General for what reason legal aid has been terminated for whooping cough vaccine cases; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: There is no policy to terminate legal aid in whooping cough vaccine cases. Each case is being re-examined individually following the judgment in Loveday v. Renton as, under the Civil Legal Aid (General) Regulations 1989, the Legal Aid Board is required to reassess legal aid certificates in the light of new information or knowledge. The Lord Chancellor may not intervene, or influence the decisions of the Legal Aid Board.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her visit to the kingdom of Morocco on 28 March 1989, she raised the matter of the non-aligned states' policy towards the 1990 nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference.

The Prime Minister: No.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her visit to Nigeria on 29 March, she raised the matter of the status of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, and the prospects for the 1990 non-proliferation treaty review conference, with Ministers of the Nigerian Government.

The Prime Minister: No.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister when the Cabinet Office started and completed the review of the 1985 conventions governing Government advertising; when the revised commentary was issued to Departments; and whether she will place a copy of them in the Library.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 May 1989]: A review of the conventions on Government publicity and advertising took place in early 1988. Consolidated supplementary guidance was issued by the Cabinet Office to Departments in March 1989 and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Namibia (Uranium)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her recent visit to Namibia, she raised with the authorities there the future of Namibian uranium procurement for United Kingdom nuclear weapons and nuclear power programmes.

The Prime Minister: No.

Sir Alan Walters

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she will publish in the Official Report a list of Sir Alan Walters' outside interests;

(2) what are Sir Alan Walters' connections with the Centre for Policy Studies.

The Prime Minister: Sir Alan Walters is a private individual who has a consulting contract with the Government. It would not be appropriate to publish or require him to publish his interests in or connections with private sector bodies.

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report the salary of Sir Alan Walters on his appointment.

The Prime Minister: Sir Alan Walters' remuneration is linked to that of a second permanent secretary.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Special Constables

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current number of special constables in England and Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There were 15,788 special constables in England and Wales on 31 December 1988, the latest date for which figures are available.

Prisons (Child Care Provision)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the prisons in Yorkshire which have child care provision for inmates; how often these are inspected by outside agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's prison Askham Grange, near York, has a mother and baby unit which provides accommodation for up to 15 mothers with their babies.

A health visitor from the local area health authority regularly visits the unit and provides child care advice to inmate mothers. Arrangements for a Department of Health team to inspect mother and baby units and report periodically on matters such as child care practice are being considered.

South Yorkshire Police

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many special constables in the South Yorkshire police force are (a) from ethnic minorities and (b) women; and if he will show these figures also as a percentage.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 31 December 1988, the South Yorkshire police special constabulary had a total of 309 members. Of this number, 11—3·6 per cent.—were from the ethnic minorities and 103—33·3 per cent.—were women.

Rugby League Clubs (Police Costs)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the hourly charges made to rugby league clubs for police officers on duty at professional rugby league matches held within areas covered by the North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire, West Yorkshire, Greater Manchester, Cheshire and Cumbria police authorities.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I understand that the present charges per hour, exclusive of VAT, for the services of each police constable provided for duty inside the grounds of rugby league clubs in the area mentioned are as follows:

Police force	Cost £ (excluding VAT)
North Yorkshire	18·30
South Yorkshire	16·20
West Yorkshire	18·30

Police force	Cost £ (excluding VAT)
Greater Manchester	17·43
Cheshire	18·97
Cumbria	15·00

Women Prisoners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women gave birth while detained in prison in the United Kingdom according to the latest available figures.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Between 1 April 1987 and 31 March 1988, 75 women in custody gave birth at outside hospitals.

Drug Offences

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last discussed with the Crown prosecution service the operation of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act.

Mr. John Patten: Home Office officials have frequent discussions with the Crown prosecution service about the operation of the Act. The most recent took place on 25 April.

Passport Controls (EC)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the legal basis of the powers under which European Community member states require nationals from other European Community states to produce a valid passport before permitting entry; and how this practice will be affected by the Single European Act.

Mr. Renton: Council directive 68/360/EEC requires member states to allow EC nationals who are exercising freedom of movement rights under the treaty of Rome to enter their territory simply on production of a valid identity card or passport. Other EC nationals entering the United Kingdom are required to produce on request a valid national passport or identity document by virtue of the Immigration Act 1971. Discussions within the Community on how effect should be given to the Single European Act in this area are still in progress, but it is the Government's present view that it will remain necessary to require EC nationals to produce on request a valid passport or identity document when entering the United Kingdom.

AIDS

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the prison service will make available the supplies recommended to prisoners in his new video on AIDS.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The videofilm "AIDS Inside and Out"' is part of a new educational resource package which aims to give prisoners essential information about AIDS and the human immunodeficiency virus. It advises how they can avoid risk to themselves and others not only while they are in custody but after their release. In the latter context the contribution which condoms can make to safer sexual practice is explained; and drug misusers are advised that if they cannot avoid injecting when they leave prison they should use only clean needles and never share injecting equipment.

Because of the special circumstances in prisons it would not be right to make drug injecting equipment available to prisoners for unsupervised use. Nor are we persuaded that it would be right to change the policy of not including condoms among the items which prisoners may have in their possession.

Police (Ethnic Minorities)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent to which the current police initial recruitment test is culturally biased to the detriment of applicants from an ethnic minority background.

Mr. Hurd: There is no evidence that the police initial recruitment test works to the detriment of applicants from the ethnic minorities. But the test may not be directed sufficiently closely to the abilities which police officers need to do the job. The case for replacing it is under consideration by the Police Advisory Board.

Hillsborough Disaster

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has had discussions with the West Midlands police authority about the percentage of the costs of the inquiry being undertaken by its officers into the Hillsborough disaster to be borne by central funding.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Mr. Beaumont-Dark) on 28 April 1989, at column 702.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 24 April, Official Report, column 406, if any information about assaults on police officers on duty at Hillsborough has been collated.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information about assaults on police officers at Hillsborough on 15 April is being collated for the South Yorkshire police as part of the inquiry being carried out by the chief constable of the West Midlands police.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his reply of 21 April, Official Report, column 342, in which he stated 19 police officers had so far been recorded as having received medical treatment for physical injuries sustained on duty at Hillsborough, he will state in each case how the physical injury was caused.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not yet possible to state how these injuries were caused. The inquiry by the chief constable of West Midlands police may cast further light on these matters.

Public Order

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested and charged, during the last 12 months, under section 5 of the Public Order Act, for displaying a symbol representing a dove within the sight of person liable to be caused harassment, alarm or distress thereby; and what sentences were given in each case where a conviction was obtained.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: If the hon. Member has any incident in mind, I should be happy to investigate. It is not possible to identify from the available criminal statistics relating to prosecutions under section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 the circumstances in which arrests were made.

Fire Service

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the pay and conditions of service of the fire service.

Mr. Hurd: The Government are fully committed to an effective fire service and to the nationally recommended standards of fire cover and in this context have been pursuing a policy of better value for money in the fire service for a number of years. The Audit Commission examined this in 1986 and made a number of suggestions for consideration. Some of these are being examined by a Home Office chaired working party under the Central Fire Brigades Advisory Council machinery. Others relate to pay and conditions of service. On these, officials wrote on my behalf in May last year to the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Fire Brigades asking what steps it had taken with regard to the Audit Commission's findings and asking that the council should set up a working party with participation by officials from the Home Departments. This was not accepted. My right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State then met each of the member bodies of the council individually and discussed with them how matters should be taken forward. When he had completed this round of consultation, my right hon. and noble Friend wrote to the various organisations summarising the Government's position and asking that the council as a body should reconsider its view on my proposal that a working party should be set up. We await a reply.

Among the issues which I wish to see examined by the proposed working party are: the ban on whole-time firefighters serving in a retained capacity in their spare time; manning practices on public holidays; the Fire Brigades Union's ban on rostered overtime; and whether the present pay formula remains the best way of determining fire service pay for the future.

The Government are resolved to have these issues properly considered and our hope is that we can carry out this important exercise with all the member bodies of the national joint council who I hope will participate fully with a positive attitude and an open mind. I would like the proposed working party to make recommendations for the national joint council to address. If such co-operation were not forthcoming, the Government would have to come to their own view on the merits of the issues and, whilst I cannot speculate on what steps we would feel compelled to take, I cannot exclude the possibility of legislation if this appears necessary and justified.

WALES

Mental Handicap

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what funds were allocated from his Department for directly commissioned research elevant to mental handicap for each of the past five years; and whether he intends those funds to be increased over the next five to 10 years.

Mr. Grist: The principal research element of the all-Wales mental handicap strategy is the work of the mental handicap applied research unit, based at the university of Wales college of medicine, Cardiff and of the centre for social policy research and developmemt, based at the university college of north Wales, Bangor. These bodies have been supported over the period in question from the funds available to Wales from the Department of Health and Social Security's research and development budget, which has provided approximately £1,008,900 for their work over the last five years. Additional funding provided for research work directly by the Welsh Office over this period has been as follows: 1986-87—£10,600; 1987-88—£20,084; 1988-89—£1,815.

It is intended that provision for the two mental handicap research teams should continue so as to enable them to continue to assist in the development of the strategy. Allocation of specific funding for individual projects would be considered if it could be shown that research proposals of sufficient quality and relevance to the development of the strategy were required outside the work of the research teams.

Health Promotion Authority for Wales

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the budget of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales for each year from 1978-79 to 1987-88, expressed as actual expenditures and as a percentage of National Health Service expenditure in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The Health Promotion Authority for Wales was not established until 1 April 1987. Its expenditure in 1987-88 was £1,295,000, which represents just over 0·1 per cent. of net National Health Service expenditure in Wales for that year.

Small Schools

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the definition of a small school for the purposes of Welsh Office circular 36/88.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: As explained in paragraphs 109 and 110 of circular 36/88, there are two factors which may affect formula funding of small primary schools.

First, authorities' schemes of local management may allow, through the formula, for any additional costs of supporting the curriculum in small schools compared with larger schools. Schemes will need to be considered individually to ensure that a case for additional support exists. Accordingly, no advice has been given on size of school.

Second, LEAs' formulae may take account of the extent of variations between the actual teaching costs of some small schools and the LEA's average cost of employing teachers. In some small schools, it may be necessary to charge average rather than actual salaries, at least in the initial years of formula funding. Circular 36/88 does not set a precise limit on the size of school. Because the great majority of primary schools in Wales are relatively small, LEAs have been advised that actual teaching costs could be used for all primary schools.

Pre-school Education

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current percentage of children of pre-school age currently enrolled in state-run pre-school education in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information in respect of pre-school age children (excludes the rising fives) as at January 1988 is as follows:

Nursery or primary schools—68·8 per cent. of which: In nursery schools or nursery classes in primary schools—36·7 per cent.

Bathing Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost for each of (a) Southendown, (b) Sandy Bay Porthcawl and (c) Swansea bay of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall, (iii) full sewage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with EEC bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solution will be put in place, giving the estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Grist: The authority is currently reviewing its programme of remedial works which aims to achieve compliance of all listed water. The full cost of the programme has yet to be evaluated.

Forests

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has concerning the extent of die-back or other forms of ill-health in Welsh forests.

Mr. Peter Walker: Wales is included in the annual forest health surveys carried out by the Forestry Commission. The results of the 1987 survey were published in Forestry Commission bulletins Nos. 74 and 79, and the preliminary results of the 1988 survey were published in the Forestry Commission's research information note 139. Copies of these publications are in the Library of the House.

Trees (Pollution Damage)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has concerning the extent of pollution damage to trees adjacent to the Welsh water authority's Beacons reservoirs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I am not aware of any pollution damage to trees adjacent to the Welsh water authority's Beacons reservoirs. The green spruce aphid (Elatobium abietinum) has, however, increased in numbers as a result of the recent mild winters. It causes browning of spruce needles and defoliation, but does not affect new growth. Evidence of aphid attack is visible throughout Wales, particularly adjacent to the Beacons reservoirs, but I am assured by the Forestry Commission that the next cold winter should reduce aphid numbers to their normal levels.

Railways (Gwent)

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will reply to the hon. Member for Newport, East concerning his letter dated 14 March, regarding rail matters affecting Gwent referred to in the Official Report on 1 March, column 304.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 17 March.

Partnership (EC)

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will be replying to the hon. Member for Newport, East concerning his letter dated 2 March, regarding the partnership arrangement between the Welsh Office, the county councils and the EEC referred to in the Official Report, 1 March, column 345.

Mr. Peter Walker: I hope, as was indicated in the interim reply to the hon. Gentleman on 20 March, to reply shortly. In the interim, all local authorities involved in EC programmes have now been consulted on the EC plans relating to their areas, and the plans have now been formally submitted to the Commission.

Local Education Authorities (Finance)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much from each local education authority's capital allocation has been spent on the improvement or replacement of existing school buildings in each of the last five years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts [holding answer 27 April 1989]: Local education authority capital expenditure on acquisition of land, existing buildings, new construction and works for the periods requested is given in the following table. Figures on improvement or replacement of existing school buildings are not collected separately.

Local authority capital expenditure on acquisition of land, existing buildings and works in respect of nursery, primary, secondary and special schools

TRANSPORT

London Buses (Security)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish such information as may be in his possession about the proportion of buses in London which have video cameras installed in order to deter assaults on staff.

Mr. Portillo: I do not believe that it would be in the interest of crime prevention to publish this information.

Railway Inspectorate (Prosecutions)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) each occasion on which there was a prosecution by the railway inspectorate in each of the years 1980 to 1988 inclusive, (b) the defendant in each case, (c) the date of the first criminal proceedings in each case, (d) the court in which criminal proceedings commenced and (e) the outcome of the proceedings in each case.

Mr. Portillo: This information is given in the following table:

Prosecution in respect of	Defendant	Date of first criminal proceedings	Court	Outcome
Craigentinny, Edinburgh	(1) BRB	25 July 1982	Sheriff's Court, Edinburgh	(1) Guilty, fined £250

Pisa Flight (Baggage)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will investigate urgently the circumstances under which baggage belonging to passengers from Stoke North on Britannia flight BY5784 15.00 to Pisa on 26 March did not travel on the same aircraft as the passengers concerned; and if he will make a further statement about aircraft security.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This matter is being investigated. I shall write to the hon. Member when the conclusions are known.

I refer the hon. Member to the replies on 24 April by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friends the Members for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Evans) and for Wealden (Sir G. Johnson Smith).

Severn Bridge (Toll Charges)

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he received the report of Mr. J. B. Fitzpatrick, CBE, LLB, following the inquiry in Bristol into the proposal to double toll charges on the Severn bridge; and how long he will be considering its findings.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This report has not been received.

Private Motor Cars

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newham, South, 13 January, Official Report, column 800, he will give the latest available figure of the estimated proportion of private motor cars using roads in the Greater London area whose costs are not met by the taxable income of their owners; and if he will state when the results of studies in hand on this and related topics will be published.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information is not available. Results of the studies are expected early next year.

Civil Aviation Authority

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has set a new financial target for the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mr. Channon: With the agreement of the Civil Aviation Authority, a new financial target of an average annual rate of return (current cost operating profit) before taking account of interest, of 8 per cent. on net assets revalued at current cost, has been set for the three-year period 1989-90 to 1991-92. The target applies only to one third of the authority's assets since en-route navigation service charges have, by international agreement, to break even and its subsidiary Highlands and Islands Airports Limited is subsidised by the Scottish Development Department.

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what terms he has agreed to capital reconstruction of the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon: As part of the company's capital reorganisation proposals, I have agreed to waive the repayment of Government grants totalling £110 million and to cancel £1·5 million of Government loans. In exchange, the company accepts that it will no longer be eligible for support under the Ports (Financial Assistance) Act 1981 and that the Department's guarantee of its overdraft will cease. The Government's shares in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company will be voted in support of the board's proposal to capitalise the company's loan stock at the extraordinary general meeting on 30 May.

If the shareholders approve the capital reorganisation, I intend to sell the whole of the Government's current holding of company shares at the earliest appropriate opportunity. Following that, I shall relinquish the special share which empowers me to appoint up to three directors to the company's board.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Plastic Explosives

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's response to the proposal made by the Czechoslovak Foreign Minister, Jaremir Johanes, inviting Her Majesty's Government to enjoin in a British-Czechoslovak initiative in the United Nations on the conclusion of a convention on the control of plastic explosives.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have kept in touch with the Czechoslovak Government since I first discussed this proposal at my meeting with Mr. Johanes on 10 January. A team of British officials visited Czechoslovakia on 26-27 April and held most useful discussions. I am arranging for a copy of a joint press statement following the talks to be deposited in the Library of the House.

Prisoners of War

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to request the Japanese Government to ratify the 1929 Geneva convention on the treatment of prisoners of war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. Japan signed but did not ratify the international convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war (Geneva, 27 July 1929), to which the hon. Gentleman refers. However, on 21 April 1953, she acceded to the Geneva convention relative to the treatment of prisoners of war (Geneva, 12 August 1949), which replaced the 1929 convention.

Brazil

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Secretary General of the Brazilian Ministry of the Interior; and what was discussed.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs did not meet the Secretary General during his visit in April, but my hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development had very useful discussions with Dr. Mello, covering a wide range of environmental issues, including urban pollution and the future of the Amazon rain forests.

Common Foreign Policy (Europe)

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next proposes to have discussions with his European Community partners concerning the development of common European foreign policies.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to meet colleagues from the Twelve to discuss political co-operation matters on 12-13 June in Luxembourg.

Security Studies

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response has been offered by Her Majesty's Government to the proposals by Mr. Rocard in regard to the establishment of a European institute of advanced security studies within the framework of the Western European Union.

Mr. Waldegrave: This question is being considered by the WEU Permanent Council, which will then report to Ministers.

Ballistic Missile Control

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to institute an examination of effectiveness of the ballistic missile control regime.

Mr. Waldegrave: As a founder member of the missile technology control regime, it is our policy to ensure, in conjunction with our MTCR partners, that the regime operates effectively. To this end we keep the effectiveness of the regime under constant review.

Panama

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the preparations for the election in Panama on 7 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have noted recent reports quoting Opposition concerns at the use of fraud by the Government to manipulate the election results in favour of the Government coalition candidate. We would deplore any such tactics, and call upon the authorities in Panama to ensure that free and fair elections are held in accordance with established democratic principles; and to allow individuals from abroad to travel to Panama to observe the elections.

Mr. Arshad Iqbal

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Mr. Arshad Iqbal is to be issued with a visa by the post in Islamabad to join his wife in the United Kingdom; when Mr. Iqbal's appeal, No. -TH/36030/87/6216, was upheld by the immigration appeal tribunal; and when the post was instructed to issue a visa to Mr. Iqbal.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to the reply 25 April 1989, c. 463]: I am now replying in full rather than referring the case to the FCO correspondence unit, in the light of the circumstances of this case.

Mr. Arshad's appeal was upheld by the immigration appeal tribunal on 9 December 1988, and a copy of the determination was sent by the Home Office to the entry clearance officer at Islamabad on 10 January 1989. Unfortunately, it appears that no covering letter was attached to the determination, which was therefore filed away to await instructions. The Home Office is now taking steps to ensure in future that appropriate instructions are attached to all determinations sent to entry clearance officers.

The hon. Member will, however, be pleased to know that instructions were sent to Her Majesty's embassy, Islamabad on 24 April directing it to issue an entry clearance to Mr. Iqbal. I should be grateful if the hon. Member could kindly convey my apologies to Mr. Iqbal's family for any distress or inconvenience caused by the delay in acting on the tribunal's determination.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Charge

51. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to extend the 56-day deadline on the backdating of rebates.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The Scottish community charge rebate scheme provides for claims made within 56 days of 1 April 1989, or of the date of receipt of the first community charge demand notice where this is later, to be treated as having been made on 1 April 1989, subject to certain prescribed conditions. The purpose of this provision is to help people at the outset of the scheme who may not realise that rebate cannot normally be awarded until it is claimed. The 56-day period allows sufficient time for the making of a claim, and we see no need for it to be extended. The scheme also provides for a claim to be backdated where the claimant can show good cause for not having claimed earlier.

Hostel Charges

Mr. Randall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to review his Department's payments used to cover hostel charges.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Details of changes in benefit payments for hostel dwellers were announced to the House by my right hon. Friend on 16 March 1989 at columns 546-48.

Doncaster and Mexborough Offices

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the present number of staff at his Department's offices in Doncaster and Mexborough; what was the number of vacancies at each of these offices on 31 March; what percentage this is of the formal complement; and what were the comparable figures five and 10 years ago.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is as follows:

	Doncaster East	Doncaster West	Mexborough NIO
31 March 1989
Staff in post	155	188	19
Complement	14	183	20
Vacancies	0	0	1

	Doncaster East	Doncaster West	Mexborough NIO
Per cent. of formal complement	—	—	5
31 March 1984 Staff in post	133	180	20
30 September 1979 Staff in post	148	212	36

Notes:
1. Records of Local Office complements and vacancies are no longer available for 1979 and 1984.
2. Staff in post figures for 31 March 1979 are not available; figures for 30 September 1979 have been provided.

Benefits

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the right hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham, Official Report, 8 February, column 713, if he will estimate the number of low-income families with children who are ineligible for either family credit or income support.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that this information is not available.

Pensions

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will indicate when he expects to publish a response to the Occupational Pensions Board report on protecting pensions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: When my right hon. Friend published the Occupational Pensions Board report, "Protecting Pensions", he launched a consultation exercise and asked for comments to be received by 30 April. We are now considering the responses to the consultation exercise and will announce decisions in the light of the comments received.

Social Fund

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether independent research has been commissioned into the extent to which the social fund is meeting its objectives.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Yes. We have commissioned the social policy research unit at the university of York to carry out this research.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the total numbers and amounts of applications for the period 5 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, inclusive, in respect of (a) social fund community care grants, (b) social fund crisis loans and (c) social fund budgeting loans.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 17 April 1989]: The information requested is set out as follows and is provisional:

	Community care grants	Budgeting loans	Crisis loans
Applications processed	296,149	867,571	468,232
Financial value (£ million)	79·029	267·437	26·899

Earnings Rule

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the abolition of the pensioner earnings rule will affect pensioners receiving income support.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Abolition of the pensioners earnings rule will affect pensioners currently having their basic pension reduced on account of earnings over £75 a week, those individuals currently deferring receipt of basic pension because of earnings over £75 a week and who may now choose to draw their pension, and those with earnings of under £75 a week who may now choose to earn more. Pensioners with earnings over £75 a week are unlikely to be entitled to income support.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Apples

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department is taking to investigate the effects of the apple crop spray known as Alar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides has advised Ministers responsible for the control of pesticides that there should be no changes to the approval of the pesticide, Daminozide. At its meeting on 20 April the advisory committee considered the information which had been submitted to the American authorities, and concluded that the use of Daminozide did not pose a health risk to consumers.

Ministers are grateful for the committee's willingness to consider the available data on a basis of such urgency, and have accepted the advice.

Monitoring will be continued to assess the occurrence of residues in apples and apple products sold in the United Kingdom.

Farming Policy

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he intends to take steps to introduce a low-input low-output system of farming, on the lines of that introduced in other European Economic Community countries.

Mr. Ryder: The Community extensification scheme envisaged incentives to farmers for less-intensive production of a range of supported agricultural products. Now that the Council has adopted the relevant legislation—which, in particular, allows extensification to be applied on a pilot basis initially—I will be considering in consultation with the interests concerned what pilot schemes might be appropriate.

Bread and Wheat

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give for each year from 1979 to 1989 (a) the price of bread to the consumer and (b) the price of wheat to the producer, in actual and at 1979 prices, showing the percentage increase or decrease in each year.

Mr. Ryder: The price information requested for bread and wheat is set out in the table. Final figures for 1988 and forecast figures for 1989 for wheat will not be available until published in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989".

Game

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice his Department issues on the preparation of game for human consumption.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The production of game meat in common with all other food sold for human consumption is subject to the provisions of Food Act 1984 and the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970. Enforcement is the responsibility of local authorities.

We were considering meat inspection provisions for deer when the EC Commission issued a consultation document on health rules for game meat. In advance of decisions in Brussels we have encouraged local authorities to introduce inspection procedures for farmed deer slaughtered in abattoirs. Officers of the state veterinary service are available to provide advice to producers and local authorities and they frequently do so.

Rendering (Exports)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what quantities of meat and bone meal were exported by the British rendering industry for each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Exports of the British rendering industry are not separately identified within the statistics on the total exports of meat meal and bone meal. The figures on these for the last three years are as follows:

	Tonnes
	1986	1987	1988
Flours, meals and pellets of meat or offal (including tankage), unfit for human consumption; greaves	10,001	12,299	13,228
Bone meal	3,902	5,061	[1]5,174

[1]From 1988, bone meal is combined in the statistics with other bones and their derivatives apart from "ossein and bones treated with acid". The tonnage of bone meal exported in 1988 could be around 2,000 tonnes lower than that shown.

Slaughterhouses (BSE)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now take steps to monitor and record the incidences of suspected bovine spongiform encephalopathy cases as between non-EEC export-approved slaughterhouses and EEC export-approved slaughterhouses.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The numbers of suspect cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy which are identified at slaughterhouses, as part of the monitoring exercise to stop animals slipping through the net, are being recorded, but I have no plans to distinguish between EC export-approved abattoirs and others.

Radioactivity

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report those radioactive substances for which his Department carries out routine exploratory tests in coastline areas; where those sites are; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested is published regularly by my Ministry in reports entitled "Radioactivity in surface and coastal waters of the British Isles", copies of which are placed in the Library of the House.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland who will be the shareholders and in what percentage under the proposed management buy-out of Messrs Harland and Wolff in co-operation with Mr. Olsen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The shareholders in the proposed management buy-out of Harland and Wolff plc will consist of present management and employees and Mr. Olsen through two of his companies. The issue of shares in the new company is a matter for those parties, but I understand that the precise allocation of shares in the new company has not yet been finally agreed.

DEFENCE

Mexe Raft Equipment

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to update the Mexe raft equipment.

Mr. Sainsbury: There are no plans to modify the design of the Mexeflote equipment currently in service, which adequately meets Army requirements.

RAF

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what aircraft have been ordered by his Department for the RAF since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to table 5 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates for 1989" (Cm 675-I), published yesterday, which lists all major equipment ordered by my Department since 1979, including aircraft.

RN (Alcohol Consumption)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the limits placed on the alcohol consumption by ratings on board Royal Navy vessels.

Mr. Neubert: The limits are:

Warrant Officers and Senior Rates

(a) Spirits—An individual's spirit consumption may not exceed an average of one-eighth of a pint a day.

(b) Beer.

(i) Warrant Officers and Chief Petty Officers—There is no mandatory restrictions on consumption.

(ii) Petty Officers—An individual's daily consumption is not to exceed:

2 pints or 4 × 12 oz cans when at sea; in harbour when at four hours notice or less for sea; on duty in harbour, or required for duty as a watchkeeper.

4 pints or 8 × 12 oz cans when in harbour not on duty nor required for duty as a watchkeeper.

Junior Rates—Daily consumption of beer is not to exceed 3 × 12 oz cans.

These are maximum limits and are subject to any further restrictions laid down by commanding officers about the time and operating situation in which alcohol may be consumed.

Recruitment (Coventry)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has available as to the annual recruitment rate from Coventry into each of the armed services from 1970 to the latest date; and if he will break the figures down by service and by the age and gender of recruits.

Mr. Neubert: I will write to the hon. Member.

WEU (Defence Representations Group)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions the Defence Representations Group of the Western European Union has met; and if he will list those who have represented the United Kingdom at those meetings.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Defence Representations Group of the Western European Union has met on 11 occasions since its formation in 1987. The United Kingdom has been led by a senior official from the Ministry of Defence (the level has varied from meeting to meeting) supported by other officials from the Ministry of Defence and Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

US Aircraft (Crash)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the crash of a United States Air Force A10 aircraft at Bank farm, Benwick, on 17 April; and whether the aircraft was carrying weapons, including bombs.

Mr. Neubert: As I told the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 24 April at column 365 an A-10 aircraft crashed on 17 April 1989 during a routine training flight on open farmland one mile south of Benwick, Cambridgeshire. The pilot was killed. The aircraft was equipped with a GAU-7 anti-tank gun and practice ammunition.

ENVIRONMENT

Toxic Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will instruct Her Majesty's chief inspector of pollution to conduct an immediate evaluation of sites at Moss valley, Wrexham; Lodmoor country park, Weymouth and Comeston country park, Barry, to ascertain if hazardous toxic industrial wastes have been disposed of safely.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No. The sites in Wales were covered in a study recently carried out by the Welsh Office. This study looked at some 94 sites in Wales which had been reclaimed from old industrial sites. The study, and copies, are available from the Welsh Office.

The Lodmoor site is adjacent to an active landfill site operated by Dorset county council. As both the operator of the site and as the waste disposal authority for the area it is its responsibility to ensure that the site is operated properly. According to the information held by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution the Lodmoor landfill does not accept toxic industrial wastes.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much toxic waste was imported into the United Kingdom in 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on imports of toxic waste is currently held by the waste disposal authorities. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is in the process of collecting this information centrally. Figures will be available later this year.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in how many of the 56 toxic waste disposal sites in Doncaster, South Yorkshire, a potential danger from methane gas has been identified; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has been carrying out a postal survey of landfill sites which may need gas control measures to be installed or improved. Initially the survey set out to identify sites which may have the potential to give rise to landfill gas. The second phase was to identify sites which are giving off gas and what controls are either in place or are needed. This second phase is still under way and information is still being collected. It is not possible yet to say which particular sites in South Yorkshire are likely to require further action to be taken.

Doncaster district council is the responsible waste disposal authority which, together with South Yorkshire hazardous waste unit, should ensure that adequate control measures have been installed in accordance with waste management paper No. 27—guidance recently issued by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Football Membership Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether individuals holding identity cards will be able to check the information stored on the soccer identity card computer system;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that information fed into the national computer system on soccer identity cards will not be released to mail order and similar companies;

(3) what steps he is taking to safeguard information fed into the national computer system on soccer identity cards from being misused.

Mr. Moynihan: The Government intend that members of the scheme and applicants to it should have the full protection of the Data Protection Act 1984. This will be in relation to the collection of information to be held, access to it and the use to which such information is put. Discussions with the data protection registrar on these matters have taken place and will continue as the scheme is drawn up by the football membership authority.

Support Grades

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, with respect to the support grades in his Department (a) what is the number of staff employed, (b) how many vacancies there are and how many of these have existed for over one month and over three months, (c) how many temporary and casual appointments there are and (d) how much overtime was worked by them in London and elsewhere.

Mr. Ridley: The support grades in my Department mainly comprise staff from the messenger, reprographics and paperkeeping groups, cleaners and office keepers. For my Department, including the Property Services Agency, the information as at 1 April 1989 is:

(a) there were 856 staff in these grades;

(b) there were 38 vacancies. Nineteen had been vacant for over one month, 13 of them for over three months;

(c) vacancies were covered by casual staff when they arose. Casual staff are recruited locally and no central record is kept.

My Department and the Department of Transport shared common citizenship until 31 March 1989. Average overtime worked by the two Departments was 6·4 hours in London headquarters and 1¼ hours in regional offices. In PSA the average was 3·1 hours in London and 3·6 hours elsewhere.

Community Charge

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in which month he expects his consideration of collective local community charge registration and payment statistics to be completed and to be publicly announced.

Mr. Gummer: I shall announce my conclusions as soon as possible.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what indicative figures for the likely level of community charge in the city of Nottingham have been given by his Department over the last two years giving the date and criteria used in each case.

Mr. Gummer: The Department has not published any forecasts of the likely level of community charge in Nottingham. We have published illustrative figures based on reported expenditure levels for 1987-88 and 1988-89 and on local authority responsibilities in those years. These were placed in the Library on 29 June 1987 and 24 June 1988, respectively. Both were accompanied by a full explanation of the assumptions used to produce the figures.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the orders and regulations concerning the implementation of the community charge (a) laid before and agreed to by the House. (b) laid before, but not yet agreed to by the House and (c) yet to be laid before the House giving in each case an outline of the area of implementation affected.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The following negative resolution instruments concerning the community charge were laid on 17 March 1989:

1989 No. 438—The Community Charges (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1989. These regulations (apart from regulations 4 and 5) came into force on 7 April 1989. Regulations 4 and 5 come into force on 22 May 1989.

1989 No. 439—The Valuation and Community Charge Tribunals Regulations 1989. These regulations (apart for the purposes of regulations 4 to 8 and 11) came into force on 7 April 1989. Regulations 4 to 8 came into force on 1 May 1989.

1989 No. 440—The Valuation and Community Charge Tribunals (Transfer of Jurisdiction) Regulations 1989. These regulations came into force on 1 May 1989.

1989 No. 442—The Personal Community Charge (Exemptions) Order 1989. This order came into force on 7 April 1989.

1989 No. 443—The Personal Community Charge (Students) Regulations 1989. These regulations are coming into force on 1 October 1989.

A debate on these regulations is being arranged through the usual channels.

We intend to lay further regulations on the community charge covering cross border information, the form of the community charge demand note, and the information to accompany it, discounts, co-owners and other miscellaneous provisions.

Ark

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will seek a meeting with the organisers of the new environmentalist group, Ark to discuss environmental matters.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no present plans to do so.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Ealing, North of 4 April, Official Report, columns 151-2, when he expects the Housing Corporation to supply the information referred to in that answer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Housing Corporation is currently assembling the information needed to answer my hon. Friend's question and expects to respond by Friday 5 May.

Caravan Sites Act

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations have been received about the future of the Caravan Sites Act.

Mr. Trippier: I receive various letters, from hon. Members and the public, about the Act. The Government announced their conclusions on a review of its operation on 6 February 1987.

Inner-city Developments (Signs)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the size of signs erected on inner-city developments promoting the Government's involvement; how many such signs have been erected; how much has been spent on erecting the signs; and for what purpose the signs have been erected.

Mr. Trippier: The Department provides two sizes of signs, 8 ft by 2 ft and 4 ft by 1 ft. Since November 1987, 4,452 signs have been produced at a cost of £15,204 of which 2,864 have been issued to local authorities and other recipients of the Department's financial assistance through the urban programme, derelict land grant, estate action and urban development grant/city grant. Records are not kept of the number and cost of signs erected.

House Building

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the number of new housing starts in each region in February 1989, and February 1988, together with the percentage change in starts.

Mr. Trippier: Since monthly housebuilding figures are very variable it is advisable to consider data over three-month periods. Housebuilding starts for the regions in England in the three months to February 1989 and the corresponding period a year earlier are given in the table.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest (Norfolk)

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites of special scientific interest in Norfolk have been damaged in the last five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that over the past five years, out of a total of 129 sites of special scientific interest in Norfolk, 23 have sustained some damage to relatively small areas.

Grant-related Expenditure

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make available his Department's publications, "Grant-Related Expenditure 1989-90" and the "Technical Handbook of Grant-Related Expenditure, 1989-90".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will place copies of these documents in the Library of the House. Copies have also been sent to every local authority in England, and to the local authority associations.

Industrial Chemicals

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for the systematic evaluation of the possible harmful effects of industrial chemicals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department and the Welsh Office have recently published a consultation paper proposing that additional statutory powers should be introduced to evaluate and control the environmental hazard of existing chemicals. The consultation paper describes the powers available under existing legislation and proposes additional powers to obtain information about substances with the potential to cause environmental damage, to require testing when adequate information is not available, and to control the supply, storage or use of such substances when necessary. Interested organisations and individuals are invited to send their views to the Department or the Welsh Office by 15 June 1989.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I have today placed in the Library a table showing the major publicity campaigns undertaken by my Department since 1985-86, with intended objectives for all campaigns including those planned for 1989-90. A campaign would be required to publicise the offers of sale of the water authorities; this is still to be planned.

Tropical Hardwoods

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to refuse planning permission for landscape work using unrenewable tropical hardwoods.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 May 1989]: No. The planning system is not the proper means for regulating the choice and use of materials other than on land-use grounds.

Freemasonry

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to ensure that freemasonry does not exert secret influence in local government; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The national code of local government conduct contains provisions aimed at such matters. We have set up a working group with the local authority associations to review the code, which will be given statutory status by the Local Government and Housing Bill. This will, no doubt, be one of the problems to be considered by the group.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, in relation to the Crown Suppliers' context range of furniture, if he will provide (a) the initial forecast sales, (b) the actual sales since its introduction and (c) the estimated sale value of the amount currently unsold in store.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 21 April 1989]: The Crown Suppliers forecasts of sale for individual ranges are commercially sensitive and therefore confidential. But in the eight months since the range was launched, sales have totalled £0·52 million and negotiations are in hand to sell a further £1 million worth. The estimated sales value of stock currently held in store is £1·6 million.

Personal Social Services

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish figures showing the per capita costs, for each shire county and each metropolitan borough, of spending on personal social services, in the year 1987-88.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer, 26 April 1989]: The information based on returns made by local authorities is as follows:

Somerset Levels and Moors

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of (a) lump sum and (b) annual management agreements concluded between the Nature Conservancy Council and owners and occupiers of the area known as the Somerset Levels and Moors, the area of land involved and the total cost of agreements to the end of January 1989in 1989 prices.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 26 April 1989]: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that 184 agreements have been concluded with owners and occupiers of the Somerset Levels and Moors, covering an area of 1,968 hectares. These provide for annual payments totalling £281,685 per annum, as at January 1989.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those areas in the Somerset Levels and Moors which have been notified as sites of special scientific interest, indicating (a) where the Nature Conservancy Council owns land, and (b) the number of management agreements reached with owners and occupiers of each area so notified.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 26 April 1989]: The information requested is as follows:

North-east Hampshire structure plan

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to announce his decisions on the proposed alterations to the north-east Hampshire structure plan.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 26 April 1989]: I will send my proposed modifications to the submitted alteration to Hampshire county council as soon as possible.

Population Movements (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the numbers of people who have moved (a) into and (b) out of each district authority area in the county of South Yorkshire in each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

The table gives the numbers moving (a) into and (b) out of each district of the county of South Yorkshire from/to the rest of the United Kingdom, for the years 1979 to 1987. These figures have been derived from the National Health Service central register recording of patient re-registration with doctors involving a change of family practitioner committee.

In preparing population estimates of the district, account is also taken of migration from countries outide the United Kingdom and of the effect of movement of United Kingdom and foreign armed forces. Such flows in each direction are small and only the net effect is estimated using data from various sources.

1987	4,222	5,166	7,349	7,898	5,782	6,596	14,518	16,864

Note: Numbers in the table are National Health Service central register records of moves into and out of family practitioner committee areas (conterminous with districts in the county of South Yorkshire) from rest of the United Kingdom. Data are based on a 10 per cent. sample for the years 1979 to 1983 and a 100 per cent. count thereafter.

EMPLOYMENT

Training Consultants

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what percentage of internal training for employees within his Department was carried out by private sector training consultants in each of the last five years; and what was the cost to his Department in each of those years;

(2) what percentage of training under his Department's human resources development strategy has been carried out by private sector training consultants; what private sector companies are involved; and what fees have been paid by his Department in each case;

(3) if he will list all firms providing training consultancy services for his Department in each of the last five years; and what fees were paid to each company in each of the years.

Mr. Cope: This information is not collected in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what method of assessment of quality of service provided is used when his Department awards private sector training consultancies.

Mr. Cope: Quality is assessed by departmental tutors attending training events delivered by training consultants, and by comments and feedback through structured questionnaires completed by trainees and their line managers.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what method of tendering is used by his Department when selecting private sector training consultants.

Mr. Cope: Appointment of private sector training consultants is made on the basis of competitive tender within the guidelines applicable to Civil Service departments generally.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claims for unemployment benefit have been received, since the increase in the maximum number of weeks' suspension of unemployment benefit from 13 weeks to 26 weeks, at unemployment benefit offices in (a) Doncaster, and (b) Mexborough; and what were the comparable figures for the period April 1987 to April 1988.

Mr. Lee: The table shows the total inflow to the claimant count at unemployment benefit offices in Doncaster and Mexborough in the 11 months to March 1989. Figures for the year to April 1988 are not currently available analysed according to unemployment benefit office, as suitable computer programmes have only recently been developed.

Coal Dust Pollution

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress has been made with the development of the optical scattering instantaneous respirable dust indicating system to reduce coal dust pollution in mines.

Mr. Nicholls: The laboratory development of the optical scattering instantaneous respirable dust indicating system (OSIRIS) by the Health and Safety Executive is complete. The technology has been transferred to industry through the British Technology Group and the system is now available commercially. The only continuing HSE involvement is provision of technical advice to licensees.

HEALTH

Nurses and Midwives

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses and midwives were employed in National Health Service hospitals in each year since 1959, expressed in terms of whole-time equivalents.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the table.

Notes:

1. Includes qualified nurses and midwives, learners and unqualified nursing staff.
2. The England and Wales figures are based on a slightly different definition to those for England. In addition, because of changes and improvements in the collection and processing of the data between 1959 and 1987 the information is not strictly comparable. England only figures are not available prior to 1971.
3. The figures have not been adjusted for changes in the working week introduced over the period shown.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, for the latest available year, the total number of hospital beds in each district health authority in England for each of the following service: (a) general medical services, (b) general surgical services, (c) all non-psychiatric acute services, (d) geriatrics, (e) maternity, (f) mental illness, (g) mental handicap and (h) all hospital beds.

Mr. Mellor: The available information for England is given in the table.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reviews he is planning to ensure that all private hospitals have an expert ethical and oversight committee; and if he will ensure that there is no malpractice in respect of donor operations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is for the medical profession itself, and in particular the General Medical Council to lay down ethical guidance and to ensure that it is followed. Such guidance applies equally to private practice as to the National Health Service. Under the recently introduced Human Organ Transplants Bill, regulations will specify conditions which must be satisfied before transplantation can take place of an organ from a living person who is not a close natural relative of the recipient.

Drug Abuse

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was allocated by his Department in respect of health education in relation to drug abuse in 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Mellor: Expenditure by the Department on drug misuse was as follows:

1986-87	1,707
1987-88	[1]5,419
1988-89	1,918

[1] Includes major joint drugs misuse/AIDS anti-injecting campaign

Research Institutes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by standard region the research institutes operated for or on behalf of his Department and the total employment thereat; if he will give for each region the total number of such institutes and the employment therein; and if he will express the regional totals as a percentage of the national totals.

Mr. Freeman: The information is not readily available in the form requested, but I will write to the hon. Member when it has been assembled.

Halton DHA

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the rate of patients receiving (a) hip replacements and (b) cataract operations (i) nationally and (ii) in Halton district health authority.

Mr. Freeman: The estimated numbers of (a) total hip replacements and other arthroplasy of hip and (b) eye lens operations per 10,000 population in England in 1986 (the latest year for which the information is available centrally) were 8·7 and 13·5 respectively. We do not yet have available centrally the rates of these operations for individual authorities. Such operations for residents of the Halton district health authority are available only in proximate districts.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the elderly (a) nationally and (b) in Halton district health authority are seen by a district nurse on a regular basis.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have the information precisely in the form requested. Information is available centrally on the proportion of the elderly treated at all by a district nurse and is given in the table. We do not have information centrally on what proportion are seen by a district nurse on a regular basis.

District nursing: 1987-88

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on trends in death and discharges per bed in general medicine and general surgery and urology in the Halton district health authority area.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the table.

Discharges and deaths per available bed, Halton district health authority

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on neonatal mortality and perinatal mortality rates in the area of Halton district health authority.

Mr. Freeman: The latest available annual rates are shown in the table.

Perinatal[1] and neonatal[2] mortality rates, Halton DHA, 1987

	Persons
Perinatal	10·7
Neonatal	5·4

[1] Deaths in the first week of life plus stillbirths per 1,000 live and stillbirths

[2] Deaths at ages 0-27 completed days of life per 1,000 livebirths.

Toxoplasmosis

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether screening for pregnant women is to be introduced for toxoplasmosis.

Mr. Mellor: I have nothing to add to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Torridge and Devon, West (Miss Nicholson) on 21 March at column 576.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients were treated in National Health Service hospitals as in-patient, out-patient and day patient in the north-west in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures for 1978.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the table.

National Health Service Hospitals activity, North Western Regional Health Authority, 1978, 1986 and financial year 1987-88

	1978	1987-88	Percentage change between 1978-1987-88
In-patient cases treated	511,674	644,540	26·0
Day case treated	68,080	120,400	76·9
New out patients	707,676	780,283	10·3
Total out-patient attendances	3,149,423	3,605,422	14·5
Ward attenders[1]	n/a	42,548	—

[1] This new category of patient was introduced in 1987-88. Some patients previously classified as out-patients or day cases may now be classified as ward attenders.

Eye Tests and Dental Examinations (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update the figures on the number of eye tests and dental examinations in the Nottingham health authority area, provided in his answer of 12 April 1988, Official Report, column 115.

Mr. Mellor: I assume that as before, the hon. Member is referring to eye tests which have been carried out under the general ophthalmic services and dental examinations under the general dental service. These are the responsibility of the family practitioner committee. The table gives the latest figures available for Nottingham family practitioner committee which includes the area covered by Nottingham health authority.

Nottingham Family Practitioner Committee

Year	Number of eye tests[1]	Number of dental examinations
1979	n.a	500,900
1980	n.a	538,660
1981	n.a	570,690
1982	n.a	591,490
1983	180,578	591,810

1987	221,955	[2]651,480
1988	[3]254,825	n.a

[2] The Dental Estimates Board altered its collection of statistics from calendar year to financial year as from 1986-87 and these figures relate to the financial years 1986-87 and 1987-88 respectively.

[3] The Ophthalmic Section of the Department of Health's Statistics and Management Information Division altered its collection of statistics from calendar year to financial year as from 1988-89 and this figure relates to the financial year 1988-89.

Gluten-free Products

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there has been any change in his Department's guidelines to doctors concerning the National Health Service prescription of gluten-free products for coeliacs and people with dermatitis herpeti-formis; and what measures he is taking to correct misleading impressions resulting from a circular from his Department stating that gluten-free products should be available on National Health Service prescription for exceptional cases only.

Mr. Mellor: There has been no change in the Department's guidelines to doctors about the prescription of gluten-free products on the National Health Service. The guidance recently provided to general practitioners in a leaflet entitled "Guidelines for Prescribing Borderline Substances" incorporates the Department's long-standing policy on this matter.

It is not the function of the NHS to provide food for people in the community, even for those who have to follow special diets for medical reasons. However, we do recognise that in some cases it may be necessary for doctors to prescribe foods in order to enable their patients to maintain their diet. A range of specially manufactured gluten-free foods is therefore available on prescription for patients with coeliac disease or dermatitis herpetiformis where the doctor considers that his active intervention is needed to help the patient keep to a suitable diet. We have always considered that such cases would be the exception rather than the rule.

Baby Food

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued to environmental health officers concerning the need for safeguards arising out of baby food contamination.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) on 2 May. The public advice issued was copied to chief environmental health officers of local authorities who were asked to draw this to the attention of those in charge of homes and other establishments caring for children locally.

Disablement Services Authority

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many regional health authorities have submitted their plans for integration of the Disablement Services Authority to his Department; and what steps he is taking to encourage prompt submission of such plans.

Mr. Mellor: We have received plans for the integration of the Disablement Services Authority from 13 of the 14 regional health authorities. I understand that the remaining plan is at an advanced stage of preparation and will be submitted as soon as it is finalised.

Pharmaceutical Products

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings are planned between experts from various European Economic Community countries, including the United Kingdom, to discuss European Economic Community parallel importing schemes of pharmaceutical products, and the problem of counterfeiting; when these are to take place; who will represent Her Majesty's Government; and what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to meet these problems.

Mr. Mellor: We have written to the Commission and to our EC colleagues suggesting that a meeting of experts would be helpful to discuss whether any changes to parallel importing arrangements might be needed in the light of the recent incident involving counterfeit Zantac tablets. We are in touch with the Commission about how best to follow this up.

Trainee GPs

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the arrangements for determining the number of trainee general practitioners each year; what cash limits are set which would govern the number of trainees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are no manpower nor budgetary controls which determine the number of doctors training for general practice.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Her Majesty's Government have any plans to reduce the number of general practitioner trainees in England and Wales or to alter arrangements regarding duly appointed trainers' recruitment of trainees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. We have no plans to put controls on the number of doctors training for general practice, or to prescribe the standards by which trainers in general practice select their trainees.

Clinical Effectiveness

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider the merits of the proposals on measuring clinical effectiveness contained in the COHSE response to the National Health Service White Paper.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will be responding positively to the request that he meet representatives from COHSE to discuss the proposals on measuring clinical effectiveness contained in that union's response to the National Health Service White Paper.

Mr. David Mellor: I will be writing to the general secretary of COHSE shortly about his request for the meeting on his union's response to "Working for Patients".

ENERGY

Research Institutes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will (a) list by standard region the research institutes operated for or on behalf of his Department and the total employment thereat, (b) list for each region the total number of such institutes and the employment therein and (c) express the regional totals as a percentage of the national totals.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My Department operates no research establishments of its own. All research work is contracted out to a variety of institutions, including private sector companies, none of which is run on the Department's behalf.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if the staff to be employed at the main office of the electricity regulator will be drawn from seconded or transferred civil servants;

(2) if all the posts within the office of the regulator, including those which will serve the consumer organisation, will be offered to the staff of existing consumer councils;

(3) what action has been taken to identify or to secure offices or locations for officers within OFFER; and if options on leases have been taken up or offers made for the purchase of premises.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Office of Electricity Regulation (OFFER), like the existing regulatory offices, will be a non-ministerial Government Department. Its staff will therefore be classed as civil servants. It is too early to say what proportion of these may be seconded or transferred from other Departments. The staff of the existing electricity consultative councils will be able to apply for posts in OFFER.

No final decisions have been taken on the locations of offices.

Hinkley Point C

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what communications his Department has received from the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, since 1 January, in connection with the Hinkley Point C public inquiry; and whether he has assessed the content of the CND proofs of evidence presented to the Hinkley inquiry, in so far as they refer to matters for which his Department has responsibility.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Since 1 January my Department has received one letter from CND in connection with the Hinkley Point C public inquiry. The assessment of evidence submitted to the inquiry is a matter for the inspector. I shall consider the inspector's report most carefully in reaching my decision on the CEGB's application.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Timber and Wood Products

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current import cost of timber and wood products; what was the comparable cost in the years before the 1988 Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The available information on the value of imports of timber and wood products for 1984-88 is given in the table:

United Kingdom imports of timber and wood products 1984-1988
£ million

	Timber	Wood products
1984	1,008·3	968·2
1985	893·8	1,012·0
1986	999·3	1,137·9
1987	1,197·2	1,253·8
1988	1,354·5	1,490·9

2. Wood products defined as SITC R3 Division 63 less Item 633, and Items 821.16 and 821.5 in 1988; and SITC R2 Division 63 less 633 and Items 821.11 (pt), 821.19 (pt) and 821.92 for the previous years.
3. 1988 figures provisional.

Consumer Credit Act

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many responses he has received to his Department's proposals to amend the Consumer Credit Act 1974; and whether he will supply details of the nature of the responses.

Mr. Maude: The Department has recently undertaken several consultation exercises on proposed amendments to consumer credit legislation covering areas such as secured lending, advertising of credit, inclusion of broker's fees in calculation of the APR, licensing and EC proposals for a directive on a harmonised method of calculating the APR. The White Paper "Releasing Enterprise" Cm. 512 also lists proposed amendments to consumer credit legislation.

About half the bodies consulted about such proposals normally respond. The majority of the proposed amendments are to simplify and clarify the legislation, to reflect the current practices of the credit industry or to remove onerous requirements from lenders or borrowers. Many of the changes have been suggested by lenders or borrowers and the proposed changes have been generally supported by consultees.

Import Penetration

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the output of, employment in, balance of trade for, and extent of import penetration in, the optical precision instrument industry (SIC order 3732) for each year since 1983; if he will provide an estimate for 1988; and if he will express the figures in each case as an index with the latest available year as the base.

Overseas Firms

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many overseas firms are based in Warrington-Runcorn; and what proportion of these are north American in origin.

Mr. Atkins: There are more than 140 overseas-owned companies now operating in Warrington-Runcorn, of which about half are north-American owned.

Wool Textiles

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has reached a decision on the future of the wool textile industry (export promotion) levy.

Mr. Alan Clark: Yes. Following consultation with wool textile industry organisations and trades unions, and in the light of all of the views received, Ministers have decided that the levy should continue in force, administered by my Department. Under these arrangements, I look forward to the National Wool Textile Export Corporation continuing and developing the valuable range of services it provides for the industry in export markets.

Welsh Intermediate Education Act (Centenary)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has received any representations regarding the issue of commemorative stamps to note the centenary of the passing of the Welsh Intermediate Education Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I have received no such recommendations. Special stamp issues are a matter for the Post Office, but I understand that it, too, received no requests to mark this centenary in its 1989 special stamp programme.

Eastern Europe (Trade)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects to respond to the Trade and Industry Select Committee report on trade with Eastern Europe published in December 1988 (HC 51).

Mr. Alan Clark: I sent a memorandum setting out the Government response to the report to the Chairman of the Select Committee on 20 March. Publication of the memorandum is a matter for the Committee. I shall be giving further oral evidence to the Committee on 14 June.

Lead-free Petrol

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will take steps to monitor the extent to which reduced duties for lead-free petrol are passed on to the consumer by the major petrol retailers.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 25 April 1989]: No.

Petrol

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the source of the recent representations he has received concerning the level of competition in the petrol retail industry.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 25 April 1989]: I have received representations both from hon. Members and from members of the public.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has any plans to take steps to increase competition in the petrol retail industry.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Under United Kingdom competition legislation, it falls to the Director General of Fair Trading to keep competition in the United Kingdom under review. The director general referred the wholesale supply of petrol to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission on 9 November 1988. The commission is due to report to my right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State by 8 November this year, and it would be inappropriate to comment on this matter in the meantime.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has concering the current average prices charged by the major petrol retailers in (a) Macclesfield, (b) the north-west region and (c) the United Kingdom as a whole for four-star petrols.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 April 1989]: My Department does not have such information.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has concering the current prices being charged by the major petrol retailers for unleaded and leaded petrol.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 April 1989]: No such information is kept.

SCOTLAND

Ayrshire and Arran Health Board

18. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet the chairman of Ayrshire and Arran health board; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no plans at present to meet the chairman of Ayrshire and Arran health board.

ScotRail

19. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the management of ScotRail; and what subjects he discussed with them.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend discussed various topics relating to rail transport when he met the chairman of the British Rail (Scottish) board, Mr. John Cameron, on 26 April 1989.

The Union

20. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any proposals to strengthen the Scottish dimension of the Union of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Rifkind: No. We believe that the present constitutional arrangements should continue as they provide for Scotland's special interests and nationhood to be fully respected and recognised. Within them Scots and Scottish institutions play a full and very important part in all aspects of life of the United Kingdom.

NHS Reform

21. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all those organisations and individuals who have submitted responses endorsing without criticism his consultative paper on the future of the Health Service in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A number of generally positive responses and constructive comments have been received.

Glasgow

23. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to make a visit to Glasgow.

Mr. Rifkind: My next official visit to Glasgow will be on 19 May to attend the Scottish press awards lunch.

Moray

24. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to visit Moray.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no immediate plans to visit Moray.

Angus, East

25. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to visit Angus, East.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no immediate plans to visit Angus East.

Coal Industry

26. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the total number of jobs directly and indirectly dependent on Scotland's coal industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: British Coal has some 3,400 employees in Scotland at present. In addition, approximately 1,200 people are employed on opencast and deep mining by subcontractors, and there around 300 people working in licensed private mining. Figures on the number of indirectly dependent jobs are not available.

Highlands and Islands Development Board

27. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the Highlands and Islands Development Board; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met the chairman of the Highlands and Islands Development Board at a meeting of the Scottish Economic Council held on 20 January in Edinburgh when general matters relating to the board's area were discussed.

Community Charge

22. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the implementation of the community charge in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: As planned, the community charge was introduced in Scotland on 1 April 1989. Following the canvass of households which commenced in April 1988, about 99 per cent. of the adult population registered for the community charge. Community charges registration officers are now busy with the task of maintaining their registers. Local authorities have publicised the availability of rebates, found out about the method of payment that charge payers wish to use and have been working very hard to process the large number of applications for rebates which they have received. I am extremely pleased with the good progress which has been made by all concerned in implementing the community charge in Scotland.

28. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Scottish tourist industry about the standard community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations.

31. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many applications for a poll tax rebate in each of the regions of Scotland have been (a) granted and (b) refused.

Mr. Lang: This information is not held centrally.

32. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the numbers who have not paid their poll tax for April.

Mr. Lang: It will be some months before reliable information on the levels of payment of the community charge becomes available.

49. Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will carry out a study of the impact of the standard community charge since its introduction on 1 April; and if, in light of that study, he will then review the legislation in relation to the standard community charge.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans for such a study.

50. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received concerning the payment of the community charge by Scottish police officers pending determination of the final determination of the police housing allowance.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a small number of representations regarding the police rent allowance issue. In its recent award on this matter, the police arbitration tribunal concluded that the community charge payable by police officers or their spouses should not be reimbursed by police authorities.

44. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Scots will be receiving rebates of the poll tax in the current year.

Mr. Lang: It is estimated that over one million adults in Scotland will receive a community charge rebate in 1989-90.

34. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the incidence of the community charge on those in receipt of housing benefit.

Mr. Lang: A number of representations have been received about the community charge rebate scheme which is based on the previous housing benefit scheme for rate rebates.

A74 (Crash Barriers)

29. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of the A74 have been installed with crash barriers in the past year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A total of 2·2 km (1·4 miles) of central reserve safety fencing was installed in 1988-89. The provision of a further 4·4 km of fencing is in progress or planned to start shortly leaving 4·4 km to be installed thereafter. This really should be a priority on grounds of safety.

Inward Investment

30. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he plans in arrangements for encouraging inward investment in industry in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: There are no changes currently planned to the existing arrangements. Locate in Scotland will continue with its policies to encourage links with existing companies already in Scotland, and to develop new links with potential inward investors outwith Scotland, through its existing offices in the United Kingdom and overseas.

Regional Policy

33. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he proposes to regional policy as it affects Scotland.

Mr. Lang: None. An effective range of measures is in place.

High Technology Industries

35. Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to encourage the growth of new high technology industries in the longer-established industrial areas of Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Office administers directly a range of financial and advisory support for new and expanding high technology industries. These efforts, together with those of the Scottish Development Agency and of Locate in Scotland are aimed at encouraging the setting up and growth of indigenous high technology industry, as well as attracting foreign companies in this sector to Scotland.

Piper Alpha

36. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what surveys have been undertaken by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland in respect of pollution following the Piper Alpha tragedy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 11 January 1989. Monitoring by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland has been continuing and a report will be published shortly.

Sewerage Charges

37. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from organisations including Churches regarding their new liability for sewerage charges; and if he will now seek to amend the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act to remove the liability.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Representations about the new liability for sewage charges have been received from one community council.

The Government are monitoring the effect of introducing the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987 and will consider carefully any representations made.

Community Care

38. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss community care in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans at present to do so.

Bathing Waters

39. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he plans to take to bring Scotland's bathing waters up to the standards set by EEC directives.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Where identified bathing waters do not meet the standard set in the EC bathing water directive, sewage discharges from public sewers are often a contributory factor. In these circumstances, it is for the regional councils as sewerage authorities, in conjunction with the river purification authorities, to plan and execute improvement works. In other cases, it is for the river purification authority to identify the source of pollution and pursue measures to improve the water with the polluter. The latest position is set out in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) on 13 April at columns 682-83.

Electricity Privatisation

40. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the increased cost of electricity connection charges following privatisation of the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board.

Mr. Lang: There is no reason to expect such an increase. Under the Electricity Bill currently before Parliament, all owners or occupiers will have a right to a supply on reasonable terms and also a right of appeal to the Director General of Electricity Supply if they wish to dispute the terms quoted by the supplier. These arrangements will ensure that, following privatisation, electricity connection charges are fair and properly reflect the costs incurred.

Sane Automatism

41. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to change the criminal law of Scotland to allow sane automatism to be an acceptable legal defence.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have no such plans.

National Farmers Union

42. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the president of the National Farmers Union of Scotland; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend and my noble Friend have regular meetings with union representatives. My noble Friend met the president most recently at the union's annual general meeting on 10 March when a wide range of topics was discussed.

Prestwick Airport

43. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to visit Prestwick international airport.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so at present.

Schools (Representations)

45. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received on (a) self-governing schools and (b) school boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As at 18 April 1989, 90 responses have been received to the descriptive paper "Self-Governing Schools" which we published in December 1988. During the three months August to November 1987, 7,981 responses were received to the consultation paper "School Management and the Role of Parents".

Labour Statistics

46. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the number of individuals in employment in (a) north Tayside and (b) Scotland, in December 1975, December 1978 and December 1988.

Mr. Lang: The table gives the available information. For Scotland for 1975 estimates are available only for June and for Tayside, North parliamentary constituency only for 1981 and 1984 from the census of employment. The December 1988 figure for Scotland may be revised when the results of the 1987 census of employment become available later this year.

Employees in employment

		Thousands
Scotland
June	1975	2,076·1
December	1978	2,074·8
December	1988	1,943·5
North Tayside
September	1981	22·3
September	1984	21·0

Economy (Fraser of Allander Report)

47. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the recent Fraser of Allander report on the Scottish economy, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Lang: In its March 1989 "Quarterly Economic Commentary" the Fraser of Allander institute clearly recognises the current strength of the Scottish economy. According to the institute, Scottish economic growth this year is likely to be no worse than that of the United Kingdom and might be 0·5 percentage points higher.

Local Government (Competitive Tendering)

48. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has regarding competitive tendering in local government in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Local authorities are now fully engaged in implementing the competition provisions of the Local Government Act 1988. Detailed implementation regulations were made in August 1988 and the first round of work won in competition has to be under way by 1 August this year with further rounds by 1 January and 1 August in subsequent years.

From the limited information available so far it would appear that local authorities have themselves been winning contracts in a number of cases. But where any anti-competitive practice is alleged by contractors my officials will follow up the cases with the local authorities concerned.

Forth Valley Health Board

17. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many members of the Forth Valley health board reside in (a) the parliamentary constituencies of (a) Stirling, (b) Clackmannan, (c) Falkirk, West and (d) Falkirk, East.

Mr. Rifkind: The number of members who reside in each of the following parliamentary constituencies is as follows:

(a) Stirling 10
(b) Clackmannan 1
(c) Falkirk West 4
(d) Falkirk East 0.

Elton Committee

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the implications for the Scottish Education Department arising from the Elton committee's report on indiscipline in English and Welsh schools.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The report does not extend to Scotland. many of the key recommendations are, however, paralleled in existing Scottish initiatives or practices.

Teachers Salaries

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to review the status and future of the SJNC (TSSE).

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following a recommendation of the Main committee of inquiry into the pay and conditions of service of school teachers in Scotland, the present negotiating machinery remains to be reviewed.

In response to recent representations by the professional associations representing headteachers in Scotland, the Government are considering making an amendment to the Self-Governing Schools Etc. (Scotland) Bill which would enable my right hon. and learned Friend to remove certain categories of staff from the statutory ambit of the Scottish joint negotiating committee for teaching staff in school education.

Teaching (Environment)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to collate a full report on the physical environment of teaching in Scottish schools, arising from the regular references made to such matters by Her Majesty's inspectors in their reports on schools.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. It is for individual authorities to ensure that the physical environment of their schools is conducive to good teaching. They have substantial financial resources, both current and capital, at their disposal for this purpose.

Radioactive Substances

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those radioactive substances for which his Department carries out routine exploratory tests in coastline areas; where those sites are; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information sought is included in the statistical bulletins: "Environmental Monitoring for Radioactivity in Scotland" published by the Scottish Development Department, the most recent covering the years 1981-1985 having been published in April 1987. A further edition for the period 1983-1987 is due to be published shortly.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to issue a special development order to permit Nirex UK Ltd. to test-drill on the Dounreay nuclear power development establishment site in Caithness to assess its suitability for a deep repository for low and intermediate-level radioactive wastes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment to the hon. Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 21 March at column 506. We expect any planning application for test drilling to go through normal planning procedures. I understand that a planning application in respect of Dounreay has recently been submitted to Highland regional council.

Schools (Expenditure)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Butcher: While local authorities' expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment show separate figures for books and equipment, these need to be treated with caution because of differing local authority practices in allocating expenditure between the two items. The table therefore shows spending figures for books and equipment as well as for books and equipment separately.

National Curriculum

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish a table showing (a) the printing and publishing costs and (b) the numbers of all the documents circulated to schools, local education authorities and the general public concerning the national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: The table lists DES documents concerning the national curriculum which have been published following the Education Reform Act 1988, with figures for printing costs and copies printed. The National Curriculum Council also publishes information and advice on the national curriculum.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) whether he will make it his policy to distribute copies to school teachers of the order for English, key stage 1 in the national curriculum, when he lays the order before the House; if he will ensure that such a distribution is completed before the end of the current school term; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that all primary school teachers with responsibility for teaching English to children in key stage 1 of the national curriculum from September will have adequate access to the relevant programmes of study and attainment targets before the end of the current school term; if he will consider the practical difficulties facing primary school teachers in the case that such access before the end of the current school term is not achieved; what is the earliest date for the end of the current school term of which his Department is aware; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what progress has been made towards making the statutory order for English, key stage 1 in the national curriculum since his reply to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) of 17 March, Official Report, columns 357-58; whether he still expects to make the final order in May; what account he has taken in his plans of the approaching end of the current school term; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that all primary school teachers with responsibility for teaching English to children in key stage 1 of the national curriculum from September will have adequate access to the relevant programmes of study and attainment targets before the end of the summer term; by what date he expects such teachers will have been provided with (a) adequate access to the relevant programmes of study and attainment targets and (b) such other relevant information as may be planned by his Department or the National Curriculum Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Following completion of consultations on the draft, my right hon. Friend aims to lay the final order for English in key stage 1 of the national curriculum before Parliament at the end of May. Immediately afterwards, he intends to send initial copies, with the accompanying statutory document and circular of guidance, direct to all maintained primary and secondary schools, nursery schools, special schools, local education authorities, teacher training institutions and other bodies. Bulk supplies will then be dispatched to local education authorities by mid-June for delivery to all primary and special school teachers. Further priced copies of the document will be available from Her Majesty's Stationery Office. This should enable schools and teachers concerned with English in key stage 1 to have details of the attainment targets and programmes of study well before the end of their summer terms. The National Curriculum Council plans to issue non-statutory guidance to schools during the summer.

Higher Education

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimate he has made of the numbers of additional students who may participate in higher education as a consequence of the proposals to increase tuition fees announced in his consultative paper.

Mr. Jackson: The impact of higher fees will be one of the factors to be taken into account in revising student number projections from time to time. It will be for individual institutions to decide how to respond to the incentives to compete for and recruit students which our proposals offer.

Encephalopathies

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the research being sponsored by his Department into transmissible encephalopathies.

Mr. Jackson: This Department is funding research on transmissible encephalopathies in animals, namely, on scrapie in sheep and bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle, at the AFRC Institute for Animal Health.

Superannuation (Employers' Contributions)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science to what extent and amount he expects local education authorities to offset the additional cost of the recommended pay increase for school teachers by means of the reduction in employers' contributions for superannuation; to what extent and amount this reduction in employers' contributions for superannuation relates to the employment of school teachers, as against other categories of employees; to what extent and amount this reduction in employers' contributions has been taken into account elsewhere in assumptions for block grant calculations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The effect of the 1·4 per cent. reduction in the cost of employers' contributions to the teachers' superannuation scheme flowing from the report of the Government Actuary will be to reduce the salary bill of local authorities in England by about £100 million, of which the savings in respect of further education lecturers and other teachers not employed to work in schools will be about £15 million. The rate support grant settlement which preceded the Actuary's report assumed savings of about 1 per cent.

Capital Projects (Kent)

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received about support for voluntary aided capital projects in Kent.

Mr. Butcher: Since the announcement of the capital allocations for education on 21 December 1988 my right hon. Friend has received two representations about voluntary-aided capital projects in Kent. These specifically concerned the Judd school in Tonbridge.

Roman Catholic Schools

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the capital loan approvals given for Roman Catholic aided schools in each of the last four years.

Mr. Butcher: Capital loans under section 105 of the Education Act 1944 have been made in respect of the following Roman Catholic voluntary aided schools:

Teachers

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list for each local education authority the total number of teachers employed, the number who hold instructor status, the number who are graduates with no formal teaching qualification, graduates with a post graduate certificate in education, graduates with a bachelor of education degree and non-graduates with a teacher training qualification; what percentage each category represents of all the teachers in each authority; and what were these figures and percentages for the same categories in 1974;

Mr. Butcher [holding answer 10 April 1989]: Information is not available in the full detail requested and is not all compiled on the same basis. Data on instructors and student teachers include both full and part-time staff, while those on the graduate status and teacher training of qualified teachers include only those in full-time service, and also relate to different time points.

Table 1 shows the total full-time equivalent of full and part-time teachers and instructors employed by each local education authority in England and Wales in maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in January 1988, and the number and percentage of these that were instructors or student teachers.

Table 2 shows the breakdown of full-time qualified teachers in these schools by graduate status and teacher training, for each authority and at March 1986 (the latest date for which these figures are available).

Tables 3 and 4 contain figures on the same basis for 1974. National totals only are available.

TRANSPORT

Nuclear Materials

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Council of Transport Ministers has received any report from the German Transport Minister, since January 1988, on irregularities discovered in the transfrontier transport of nuclear materials between the Federal Republic and Belgium.

Mr. Bottomley: We are not aware of such a report.

London Underground Ltd.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library documents or publications produced by London Underground Ltd. or its predecessors which set out the terms of employment and related matters now in dispute together with its proposals, or decisions in respect of future changes to them and a description of relevant negotiations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: This is a management matter for London Underground Limited.

Air Travel Organisers

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions were initiated by the Civil Aviation Authority in 1988 against unlicensed persons offering accommodation on charter flights from the United Kingdom in breach of the air travel organisers licensing system; how many were successful; and what was the average penalty or fine imposed for (a) first offence and (b) repeated offence.

Mr. Channon: This is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority. I shall ask the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Prescott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has discussed the policing of the air travel organisers licensing system with the Civil Aviation Authority; and if he has any plans to ensure the tougher enforcement of the air travel organisers licensing regulations 1972.

Mr. Channon: The operation of these regulations is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority, which has, I understand, been increasing the resources devoted to enforcing them over the last two years.

Automatic Ticket

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will introduce legislation to prevent the computing type functions that currently check tickets and control the gates of automatic ticket machines from being developed to monitor the movements of individuals through the use of personal details recorded on the magnetic strip found on the reverse side of season tickets; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The matter of compliance with or enforcement of the Data Protection Act is a matter for the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has in relation to the instructions given to London Underground staff when congestion occurs at exit points controlled by automatic ticket machines during peak periods, and as to whether staff are instructed to open the gates of the machines to relieve congestion.

Mr. Portillo: Station staff have strict instructions to open the gates if there is any threat to safety from congestion building up behind them.

Radioactive Material

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by year for the last 10 years how many tonnes of radioactive material was imported via each of the Humber ports; how many tonnes were exported through these ports; what method of transport was used to transport the material to and from the ports; and if he will make a statement on the future plans for transporting radioactive waste through the Humber ports.

Mr. Portillo: The Department does not collect this information on a routine basis, but I am advised that the following shipments (in tonnes) were made through Immingham/Hull:

1978	—	91	—	—	—	—
1979	—	180	—	—	—	3
1980	—	236	—	—	34	1
1981	2	285	—	—	31	2
1982	3	575	—	—	19	2
1983	5	859	—	10	35	—
1984	1	968	528	30	19	—
1985	2	260	960	44	17	2
1986	3	116	—	74	19	2
1987	2	1,066	—	152	—	2
1988	0·6	740	156	—	17	—

All movements to and from the ports were by road except irradiated fuel which travelled by rail.

Transatlantic Flights

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussion he has had with the United States Transportation Secretary at his meeting last week about new transatlantic flights out of Manchester airport; what was the outcome; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: My right hon. Friend stressed that Her Majesty's Government are anxious to make progress on negotiations over traffic rights between United States cities and Manchester; we are prepared to do any size of mutually beneficial deal. The Transportation Secretary promised that his Department and the State Department would now prepare themselves for another round of negotiations.

Traffic Surveys (London)

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will detail the objectives of his Department's central London traffic surveys;

(2) what will be the estimated cost of his Department's central London traffic surveys.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Statistical surveys of traffic are undertaken on a regular basis in London in order to monitor trends in average flows and speeds. Full details are given in the Department's "Statistical Bulletin (88) 39" which is available in the Library. The costs of these surveys are not recorded separately for the central London area, but for London as a whole the total cost for the two-year period to March 1989 was £370,000.

In addition, statistical surveys are carried out for the development of proposals for road improvements. The Department carried out surveys for this purpose last month on the A13 trunk road in the London boroughs of Tower Hamlets and Newham. The estimated cost of these surveys is £200,000.

Vehicles

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many vehicles, and of what value, were purchased by (a) his Department, (b) British Rail and (c) other public sector agencies for which he is responsible in 1988; and how many of these vehicles were British made within the definition of British as set out by the Department of Trade and Industry in its arrangement on content with the European Community.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 17 April 1989]: The Department of Transport purchased 24 new vehicles in 1988—mostly for research or other specialist use—at a cost of £737,472. Eleven of these vehicles were United Kingdom-produced, on the definition employed by the DTI for statistical purposes, under which a vehicle is classified as United Kingdom-produced if the United Kingdom content exceeds 50 per cent. of the ex-works value. These figures do not include second-hand cars used for impact studies, which are purchased at minimum cost.

Details of vehicles purchased by British Rail or other sponsored bodies are not available within the Department.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Rain Forests

113. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to have rain forest issues and policy on the financing of nuclear power stations included on the agenda of the next meeting of the World Bank.

Mr. Chris Patten: The development committee of the IMF/IBRD has already agreed to discuss environmental issues at its next meeting in September. Meanwhile, the World Bank is intensifying its work on these issues, including its role in the tropical forestry action plan.

The role of nuclear power is considered within the energy development plans of a few IBRD borrowing countries but its cost, high technology and demand on scarce human resources make it generally inappropriate at present for the vast majority of developing countries.

Third-world Debt

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs at what conferences dealing with Third-world debt reduction his Department has been represented in 1988 and 1989.

Mrs. Chalker: The FCO has been represented at international conferences which discussed debt reduction at UNCTAD in September 1988, the IMF and IBRD annual meetings in Berlin in September 1988 and the spring meetings of the IMF and IBRD in April this year. It has also been represented at a variety of meetings organised by research, academic and private sector groups.

Southern Africa

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what representations his Department has received from international bodies in relation to a possible role for Britain in finding solutions to the problems of southern Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: None.

South Africa

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, during the recent visit of the Foreign Minister of the Republic of South Africa, he discussed the prospects of South Africa joining the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: Yes. My right hon. and learned Friend stressed the importance of South Africa joining the NPT as soon as possible.

Ethiopia

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commowealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government have yet received the considered response from the Ethiopian Government on human rights concerns which they await.

Mrs. Chalker: No. We shall continue to press the Ethiopian Government on all human rights issues.

Bophuthatswana

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will recognise the state of Bophuthatswana as a self-governing country with a right of recognition similar to that of Swaziland.

Mrs. Chalker: No. Bophuthatswana is a homeland within the Republic of South Africa. Swaziland is an independent country.

EC Directives

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many European Community directives have been implemented in each year since 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Lord President of the Council to my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-West (Dr. Hampson) on 15 February, at col. 203.

Departmental Policy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the successes of implementation of policy by Her Majesty's Government in foreign policy since May 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 2 May, at col. 34 to the question from the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn).

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the failures in his Department's policy implementation since May 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the written answer of 28 April at col. 710 of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the question from the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn).

China

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received from Her Majesty's Ambassador to the People's Republic of China on recent student and workers unrest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have received regular reports from Her Majesty's Ambassador in Peking on the recent unrest in China. We are continuing to follow developments closely.

Palestine Liberation Organisation (World Health Organisation Status)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the application by the Palestine Liberation Organisation for its observer status at the World Health Organisation to be turned into full membership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We are in close touch with a wide range of fellow members of the World Health Organisation, including European Community and western partners in Geneva.

The 12 member states of the European Community have made their position clear in a formal note to the director general of the World Health Organisation. No member of the European Community has recognised the Palestine Liberation Organisation/Palestine as a state. Accordingly, we do not accept that the Palestine Liberation Organisation satisfies the criteria for membership of the World Health Organisation.

We have also strongly advised the Palestine Liberation Organisation not to pursue its application.

Death Penalty

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Amnesty International concerning the death penalty overseas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have on a number of occasions received representations from Amnesty International concerning particular cases involving the death penalty in various countries. We have recently received copies of Amnesty's new report on the death penalty worldwide. We are studying its contents carefully.

Turkey

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning Turkey's entry to the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have received a number of representations concerning Turkey's application to join the European Community. The application is currently being studied by the Commission. Once its opinion is available, the Council of Ministers will consider the application further. We shall take all relevant factors into consideration when assessing the application in the Council.

International Monetary Fund

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement explaining the criteria upon which he bases his decision whether or not to support an individual country's application to join the International Monetary Fund.

Mr. Eggar: Membership of the International Monetary Fund is open to every state that is prepared to fulfil the obligations of membership contained in the International Monetary Fund's articles of agreement (a copy of which is in the Library). That is the criterion on which we base our decision.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he has been notified of any formal application submitted by the Angolan MPLA regime to join the International Monetary Fund; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recent representations have been made to him by the MPLA regime of Angola concerning any application which it may be making to the International Monetary Fund;

(3) whether it is his policy to establish pre-conditions before supporting the acceptance by the International Monetary Fund of any application for membership made by the MPLA-PT regime of Angola; and if he will make a statement;

(4) whether he has any information about the likely date upon which any final decision may be reached by the International Monetary Fund upon any application for membership which it is currently considering from the Angolan MPLA regime;

(5) whether it is his policy to have discussions with the United States of America concerning any application for membership which may be made to the International Monetary Fund by the Angolan MPLA regime; and whether he has any information concerning United States' policy towards any such application.

Mr. Eggar: Angola formally applied to join the International Monetary Fund in October 1987. We have told the Angolan Government that we support their application in principle and consider that it should be dealt with on it technical merits. We understand that the IMF executive board is likely to make a decision on the application in the next few months. United States' policy is a matter for the United States Government but they are well aware of our view that Angola's attempts to improve its relations with the West should be encouraged. We will be restating this at the meeting of the membership sub-committee currently considering Angola's application for membership.

WALES

Bathing Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost for each of (a) Tenby north, (b) Abersoch, (c) Llandudno west shore of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewerage treatment works with a short sea outfall and (iii) full sewerage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with European Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solution will be put in place, giving the estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Grist: The authority is currently reviewing its programme of remedial works, which aims to achieve compliance of all listed waters. The full cost of the programme has yet to be evaluated.

General Practitioners

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many general practitioners worked for the National Health Service in (a) Wales and (b) Pembrokeshire in each year since 1959;

(2) what was the average number of people registered with each National Health Service general practitioner in each year since 1959 in (a) Pembrokeshire and (b) Wales.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Research Institutes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by standard region the research institutes operated for or on behalf of his Department and the total employment thereat; if he will give for each region the total number of such institutes and the employment therein; and if he will express the regional totals as a percentage of the national totals.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the research being sponsored by his Department into bovine spongiform encephalopathy and other transmissable encephalopathies.

Mr. Donald Thompson: My Department currently funds research on BSE at its central veterinary laboratory at Weybridge which covers epidemiological studies, clinico-pathology, transmission experiments using a number of animal species, chemical pathology, genetics and semen collection.

The cost of this work in 1988-89 was £764,000.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Inflation

5. Mr. Ted Leadbitter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his target rate of inflation for 12 months' time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The FSBR forecast that the inflation rate as measured by the RPI would be down to 4½ per cent. by the second quarter of 1990.

12. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries of the Group of Seven whose inflation rates, including an estimate of housing costs, are below that of Great Britain.

46. Mr. Young: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries of the Group of Seven whose inflation rates, including an estimate of housing costs, are below that of Great Britain.

Mr. Lilley: Only Canada treats owner-occupier housing costs in its measure of consumer price inflation in a similar way to the UK. The overall inflation rate in Canada is currently below that in the UK.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects the level of inflation to come down; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley The 1989 FSBR forecasts that inflation will be 5½ per cent. in the fourth quarter of 1989.

52. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what is his target rate of inflation for April 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The Government do not set specific short-term targets for the rate of inflation. Tight monetary policy will ensure that inflation moderates from its current level. My right Hon. Friend forecast in his Budget statement that the RPI inflation rate would be 5½ per cent. in the fourth quarter of 1989, and 4½ per cent. in the second quarter of 1990.

42. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries of the EEC whose inflation rates, including an estimate of housing costs, are below that of Great Britain.

77. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries of the EEC whose inflation rates, including an estimate of housing costs, are below that of Great Britain.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries of the EEC whose inflation rates, including an estimate of housing costs, are below that of Great Britain.

Mr. Lilley: Only Ireland treats owner-occupier housing costs in its measure of consumer price inflation in a similar way to the United Kingdom. The overall inflation rate in Ireland is currently below that in the United Kingdom.

31. Mr. Morley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current rate of inflation.

112. Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current rate of inflation.

Mr. Lilley: The all-items RPI inflation rate was 7·9 per cent. in March; the underlying rate (excluding mortgage interest payments) was 5·7 per cent.

Group of Seven

15. Mr. Iain Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet his counterparts in the Group of Seven; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Lawson: At the economic summit in Paris in July.

41. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Finance Ministers of the Group of Seven countries; and what subjects were discussed.

91. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met his counterparts in the Group of Seven; and what was discussed.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 6 April, at column 259.

35. Mr. Budgen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet his counterparts in the Group of Seven; and what will be discussed.

71. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet his counterparts in the Group of Seven; and what will be discussed.

107. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next intends to meet with his counterparts in the Group of Seven; and what matters are due to be discussed.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mr. Mills).

Equal Opportunities Commission

18. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives from the Equal Opportunities Commission concerning the 1989 Budget; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Brooke: My right hon. Friend has not met representatives of the Equal Opportunities Commission recently.

National Debt

20. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the net repayment of debt by the Government in 1988-89.

26. Mr. Brandon Bravo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the level of public sector debt repayment in the last year for which figures are available; and what this represented as a percentage of gross domestic product.

79. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the level of public sector debt repayment in the last year for which figures are available; and what this represented as a percentage of gross domestic product.

Mr. Lilley: The public sector debt repayment in 1988-89 is provisionally estimated at £14·3 billion, equivalent to 3 per cent. of GDP.

57. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated saving in interest payments as a result of the public sector debt repayment over the last two years.

83. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated saving in interest payments as a result of the public sector debt repayment over the last two years.

104. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated saving in interest payments as a result of the public sector debt repayment over the last two years.

Mr. Lilley: The total public sector debt repayment in 1987-88 and 1988-89 was £17·8 billion. As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer said in his Budget statement, this is expected to reduce net debt interest costs by over £1·5 billion a year.

36. Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the national debt has been paid off since June 1987.

72. Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the national debt has been paid off since June 1987.

82. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the national debt has been paid off since June 1987.

Mr. Lilley: The public sector debt repayment totalled £19·7 billion between June 1987 and March 1989.

Take-home Pay

21. Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the increase in the real take-home pay of a man on average male earnings between 1978-79 and 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier today by my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General to my hon. Friend the Member for Slough (Mr. Watts).

Labour Statistics

22. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in registered unemployment since June 1987.

70. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in registered unemployment since June 1987.

Mr. Major: Unemployment in the United Kingdom has fallen by 939,000 since June 1987.

23. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth in total employment since June 1987.

Mr. Major: Total employment in the United Kingdom has increased by 1,152,000 since June 1987.

Productivity

24. Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average increase in productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

Mr. Lilley: Whole economy productivity has increased, on average, by 2·5 per cent. a year since 1980, faster than any other major industrialised country apart from Japan.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average increase in productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind).

59. Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average increase in productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

73. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average increase in productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

98. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average increase in productivity for the whole economy since 1980.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind).

49. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the growth of manufacturing productivity in the economy.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bexhill and Battle (Mr. Wardle).

Child Poverty Action Group

25. Mr. Graham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives from the Child Poverty Action Group: and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Brooke: My right hon. Friend has not met representatives from the Child Poverty Action Group, although he has seen their Budget representation.

97. Mr. Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met representatives from the Child Poverty Action Group; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Renfrew, West and Inverclyde (Mr. Graham).

Company Profitability

27. Mr. Moss: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rise in the profitability of non-North sea industrial and commercial companies in the latest year for which figures are available.

95. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the rise in the profitability of non-North sea industrial and commercial companies in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Major: The net real rate of return for non-North sea industrial and commercial companies was estimated in the Financial Statement and Budget Report to have risen in 1988 to almost 11 per cent., its highest level for over 20 years.

Shareholders

28. Mr. Cash: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the total number of shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans).

50. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the total number of shareholders in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans).

Government Expenditure

29. Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in general Government expenditure, excluding privatisation proceeds, as a percentage of gross domestic product since 1982-83.

74. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the fall in general Government expenditure, excluding privatisation proceeds, as a percentage of gross domestic product since 1982-83.

Mr. Major: The 1989 Financial Statement and Budget Report gave a figure of 39½ per cent. for the ratio of general Government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) to gross domestic product in 1988-89. The corresponding figure for 1982-83 was 46¾ per cent.

Balance of Trade

30. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the balance of trade in manufacturing for the current year.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Middlesbrough (Mr. Bell) on 19 April, at column 168.

48. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the balance of trade deficit in the current year.

94. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the balance of trade deficit in the current year.

100. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for the balance of trade deficit in 1989.

Mr. Major: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 19 April, at column 168.

45. Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect current interest rates are having on the balance of trade.

Mr. Major: The current level of interest rates is designed to slow the growth of domestic demand. The effects of this tighter monetary policy are already apparent in, for example, recent figures for MO, retail sales and the housing market. In time, the current account deficit will also start to narrow.

43. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement on the United Kingdom's current trade deficit.

Mr. Major: The present trade deficit has primarily reflected the strength of domestic demand, particularly investment. The Government responded appropriately by tightening monetary policy and the effects of this are already apparent—for example, in recent figures for MO, retail sales and the housing market. As the growth of domestic demand slows, so the monthly current account and trade deficits are expected to fall.

Exchange Rate Policy

32. Mr. Doran: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current exchange rate policy.

63. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current exchange rate policy.

88. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on current exchange rate policy.

Mr. Peter Lilley: My right hon. Friend set out the Government's policy in his Budget speech, at column 296.

Interest Rates

33. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding the level of interest rates.

84. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding interest rates.

86. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on this subject.

Balance of Payments

34. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on his balance of payments forecast included in the current year's Budget statement.

110. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received on his balance of payments forecast included in the 1989 Budget statement.

Mr. Major: None.

Employee Share Ownership

37. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the introduction of tax relief for employee share ownership.

40. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the introduction of tax relief for employee share ownership.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Tax reliefs encouraging the spread of employee share ownership have been in operation for up to 10 years and have enjoyed great success. A wide variety of representations and suggestions on the subject have been made over this period and have contributed to the many improvements introduced in nine out of the last 10 Budgets, and notably in that presented seven weeks ago.

Company Car Taxation

38. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received concerning the proposed increase in company car taxation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received about 50 representations concerning the proposed increase in the car benefit scale charges announced in the Budget.

International Monetary Fund and World Bank

39. Mr. Malins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of the International Monetary Fund; and what was discussed.

47. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of the International Monetary Fund; and what was discussed.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bury, North (Mr. Burt).

87. Mr. Ilsley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the spring meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank.

Mr. Lilley: A wide range of matters was discussed, as set out in the interim and development committee communiqués, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

56. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of the World Bank; and what was discussed.

93. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of the World Bank; and what was discussed.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer met the president of the World Bank in London on 26 April and discussed a wide range of issues.

EC (Economic and Monetary Union)

44. Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about his response to the Delors committee report on economic and monetary union in the European Community.

Mr. Lilley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden) on 21 April, at column 327, and to the exchange between my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House and my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Butler) on 18 April, at column 181.

Pensioners

51. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the abolition of the earnings rule for pensioners announced in his Budget.

66. Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the abolition of the earnings rule for retirement pensioners which he announced in his Budget.

101. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the abolition of the earnings rule for pensioners which he announced in his Budget.

Mr. Major: The abolition of the pensioners earnings rule was widely welcomed by interested individuals and organisations. In particular, the director general of Help the Aged wrote to my right hon. Friend after the Budget statement to record his appreciation of this and other Budget measures to help pensioners.

58. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives from retirement pensioners' groups; and what matters he expects to discuss.

69. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives from pensioners' groups; and what matters he expects to discuss.

111. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives from pensioners' groups.

Mr. Major: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to meet representatives from pensioners groups.

Visible Imports and Exports

53. Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for visible imports and exports in the current year.

68. Mr Barron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for visible imports and exports in the current year.

90. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate for visible imports and exports in the current year.

Mr. Major: The Financial Statement and Budget Report for 1989-90 shows a forecast for the volume growth in both visible exports and visible imports in 1989 of 5½ per cent. Forecasts of the value of visible exports and imports in 1989 are not published.

European Finance Ministers

54. Mr. Aitken: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last attended a meeting of European Finance Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden) on 21 April 1989, at column 327.

Small Business

55. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the impact of interest rate rises since 1988 on small businesses.

102. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of interest rate rises since 1988 on small businesses.

105. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the impact of interest rate rises since last year on small businesses.

Mr. Peter Lilley: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett).

Child Care

60. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the taxation of the use of child care facilities.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on the taxation of the benefit to employees of subsidised workplace nursery facilities.

Business Investment

61. Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the growth of business investment in the economy.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chancellor gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Scarborough (Sir M. Shaw).

Contingency Reserve

62. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what allocations from the contingency reserve he is currently considering.

Mr. Major: Additions to programmes from the 1989-90 reserve have been, and will continue to be, announced after they are agreed.

Money Supply

64. Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest figure for the increase of MO.

Mr. Lilley: In the year to March 1989 MO grew by 6·2 per cent. in seasonally adjusted terms. Of this rise, 6 per cent. occurred in the six months to September. Since then the increase has been only 0·2 per cent. Though the postal dispute in the autumn may have affected the figures to some extent, there has clearly been a marked slowdown.

VAT

65. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual yield on value added tax levied on hospital radio broadcasting equipment.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) on 20 February, at column 479.

Private Medical Treatment (Tax Relief)

67. Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning his proposal to offer private medical tax relief.

96. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received concerning his proposal to offer private medical tax relief.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer the hon. Members to the reply my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary gave to the hon. Member for Barnsley, West and Penistone (Mr. McKay) earlier today.

Institute for International Economics

75. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Treasury officials last met representatives from the Institute for International Economics; and what matters were discussed.

92. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Treasury officials last met representatives from the Institute for International Economics; and what matters were discussed.

109. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Treasury officials last met with representatives from the Institute for International Economics; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Major: Treasury officials met three members of the institute on 13 April to discuss a number of international economic issues.

Job Creation

76. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the growth in total employment since June 1987.

Mr. Major: Total employment in the United Kingdom has increased by 1,152,000 since June 1987.

Drink and Tobacco Duty

78. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the reduction in taxation revenue in the event of the proposals for harmonised duties on drink and tobacco, as proposed by the Commission, being implemented; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Given the very large changes in taxation that the Commission's proposals would require, any estimates are subject to wide margins of error. In addition, the Government have made it clear on numerous occasions that they do not consider tax approximation to be necessary for the completion of the internal market, and implementation of the Commission's proposals would require unanimous agreement of the member states. With those qualifications, the latest estimate of the revenue loss in a full year from adoption of the Commission's proposals on drink and tobacco is some £3·9 billion.

National Insurance

80. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the changes in employees' national insurance contributions announced in his Budget.

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what representations he has received on the changes in employees' national insurance contributions announced in his Budget.

Mr. Lawson: The reforms of national insurance contributions that I announced in my Budget have been widely welcomed.

Personal Disposable Income

81. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the annual average rate of growth of real personal disposable income since 1983.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon. Friend the Paymaster General gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson).

Business Expenses

85. Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last considered raising the figure at which employers have to declare to the Inland Revenue the salaries, benefits and business expenses of employees and directors.

Mr. Norman Lamont: I assume that my hon. Friend is referring to the return of expenses and benefits which employers are required to make for directors and employees earning at a rate of £8,500 a year or more. All aspects of the tax system are kept under review. But the Government have at no time sought to increase the £8,500 threshold at which employees pay tax on benefits in kind since in principle all employees should pay income tax on the whole of their earnings whether received in cash or in kind.

Budget Forecast (Error)

89. Dr. Bray: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what he attributes the error in his forecast of the current balance for 1988, made in his 1988 "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Mr. Major: As noted in this year's Financial Statement and Budget Report, the difference between the published estimate of the current balance for 1988 and the forecast for 1988 made in last year's FSBR mainly reflected the unexpected strength of domestic demand, particularly investment, combined with very high levels of capacity utilisation in some industries.

Drug Smuggling

99. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what resources are now devoted by Her Majesty's customs to the prevention and detection of drug smuggling; what were the totals of class A and class B drugs seized in 1988; and what were the comparable figures for previous years.

Mr. Lilley: From April 1986 to April 1988 the number of Customs officers mainly engaged in the prevention of drug smuggling rose from 2,958 to 3,565, an increase of 20·5 per cent. 412·3kg of class A drugs were seized by Customs in 1985-86, 269·5kg in 1986-87 and 706·8kg in 1987-88, an increase of 71 per cent. over the period. The corresponding figures for class B drugs were 21,744kg in 1985-86, 20,231kg in 1986-87 and 23,448kg in 1987-88; an increase of 8 per cent. over the two years.

Third World Debt

103. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the latest Group of Seven initiative on Third world debt.

Mr. Lilley: The Finance Ministers of the Group of Seven discussed Third world debt in Washington on 2 April. A copy of the press statement is available in the Library of the House, together with a copy of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's remarks to the IMF interim committee on 3 April.

Foreign Investment

106 Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the net flows of foreign investment into the United Kingdom in the form of (a) long-term direct investment and (b) short-term banking flows.

108 Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the net flows of foreign investment into the United Kingdom in the form of (a) long-term direct investment and (b) short-term banking flows.

Mr. Major: The most recent information on flows of direct investment and banking inflows into the United Kingdom has been published by the CSO in the March edition of Economic Trends. However, it is not possible to distinguish between long-term and short-term flows.

All-seater Football Grounds

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will introduce a levy on the football pools to pay for major football grounds to install all-seating arrangements.

Mr. Lilley: Pools promoters make substantial payments, akin to a voluntary levy, to the Football Trust. The Government have no intention of introducing a statutory levy.

Football Pools

Sir John Farr: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount (a) staked on football pools in each of the past three years and (b) paid to the Government in tax in each of the past three years.

Mr. Lilley: Following is the information:

Pool Betting (£ million)

	Stakes	Duty
1986-87	598·2	254·2
1987-88	647·5	275·2
1988-89	656·1	278·9

Reply Paid Envelopes

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Departments issue reply paid envelopes to those required to supply information by law to the Executive; and what changes in policy there have been since 1979 in the issuing of reply-paid envelopes.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 2 May 1989]: There is no central policy. It is for individual Departments to decide whether it is appropriate for the cost of replies to official correspondence to fall on the sender or the general taxpayer. Information on current departmental practice is not held centrally.

Investment and Consumption

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what has been the rate of growth of (a) total investment and (b) total consumption over the past seven years.

Mr. Major: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Canterbury (Mr. Brazier).

Additionality

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government in relation to the system of additionality, by which public bodies in the United Kingdom receiving EEC money have United Kingdom taxpayers' money commensurately deducted.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 3 May 1989]: Receipts from the European Community budget are taken into account each year when the United Kingdom's public expenditure plans are decided. This enables United Kingdom public spending programmes to be set and maintained at higher levels than would otherwise have been possible.

SCOTLAND

Council House Sales

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the current monthly level of council house sales in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information returned to the Scottish Development Department shows that between October and December 1988 Scottish local authorities sold an average of 2,200 dwellings a month. Figures of sales in the first quarter of 1989 are not yet available.

Speech Therapists

Mr Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many speech therapists are available for Scottish schools; and of these how many are employed (a) in Strathclyde and (b) in Glasgow.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information is not held centrally in the form requested.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the schools in Glasgow to which speech therapy services are provided, showing the number of pupils requiring this service in each school, the number of hours of service provided to each school and the average hours given to each pupil in need.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which authorities in Scotland have statutory responsibilities for supply of speech therapists to Scottish schools; what recent discussions he has had with them; and if he will make a statement on Government policy on this matter.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Statutory responsibility rests with education authorities to secure the provision of speech therapy for children whose record of needs specifies that requirement. The service is almost exclusively provided by speech therapists employed by health boards. In February last year I met the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss therapy services, including speech therapy services, for school children, and in March I met the chairmen of health boards who undertook to review the provision of services in their areas. I have repeatedly encouraged joint assessment and planning of services and in November 1988 published a planning council report about planning effective speech therapy services.

Charities

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish his conclusions on the responses to the consultative memorandum on the supervision of charities in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Soon.

Dornoch Firth (Rail Crossing)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next anticipates discussing with the chairman of British Rail the construction of a rail crossing of the Dornoch firth.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so.

Forestry Policy

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations on forestry policy in the European Community.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A common forestry policy as such is not being negotiated in the European Community. However, negotiations on a proposed forestry action programme are approaching their final stages, and the main United Kingdom objectives are likely to be met.

Forestry Commission

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, when appointing Raymond Johnston to the position of chairman of the Forestry Commission, consideration was given to the possibility of preparing the Forestry Commission for sale.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

Rent-as-you-buy Scheme

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to announce a rent-as-you-buy scheme for council tenants in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

Electoral Register

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the percentage change in the numbers on local government electoral registers between 1987 and 1989 in (a) Edinburgh city and (b) Glasgow city; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to table 3 in the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys "Monitor EL87/1" and to table 1 in the "Monitor EL89/1", from which the percentage changes may be derived. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the percentage change in the numbers on parliamentary electoral registers between 1987 and 1989 in Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The change was 4·1 per cent. in Aberdeen, 2·2 per cent. in Dundee, 2·4 per cent. in Edinburgh and 4·4 per cent. in Glasgow.

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire North-East of 27 April, if he will list the estimated percentages of 16 and 17-year-olds missing from electoral registers as potential first-time voters in each constituency in Scotland in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information in the form requested is not available because population estimates are not calculated on a constituency basis. The estimated percentages for Scotland as a whole in 1987, 1988 and 1989 were 26, 27 and 26, respectively.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East of 27 April, whether he has any plans to increase the percentage of 16 and 17-year-olds whose names are included as potential voters on electoral registers in Glasgow, Edinburgh and Dundee;

(2) what plans he has to improve electoral registration in Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The preparation of electoral registers is the statutory duty of the electoral registration officers for the areas concerned. My right hon. and learned Friend is confident that their aim is to produce as comprehensive and accurate a register as possible, and proposes to support them as before with appropriate publicity campaigns.

Scottish Educational Trust for UN and International Affairs

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the Government's policy towards the Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what contribution the Scottish Education Department has made to the 1989-90 publications list produced by the Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Education Department has made no contribution to the 1989-90 publication list produced by the Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs. The trust's aims and activities do not come within current priorities for educational research-related funding.

PRIME MINISTER

Child Sexual Abuse

Q11. Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will establish an interdepartmental committee to examine the sexual abuse of children.

The Prime Minister: There is already in existence the inter-departmental group on child abuse, comprising senior officials in Departments with responsibilities for children. It was established to develop an inter-departmental approach to child abuse, including child sexual abuse.

Rain Forests

Q77. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Prime Minister what further action Her Majesty's Government are taking to halt the destruction of the world's tropical rain forests.

The Prime Minister: As part of the forestry initiative the Overseas Development Administration has identified more than 20 countries where we are well placed to help. Discussions are already under way with, for example, the Government of Brazil and India; we have just agreed £40 million of new aid for India largely for the local costs of forestry projects. In addition the Overseas Development Administration is increasing its funding for forestry research and is encouraging British charities to put forward more forestry projects for joint funding. We shall be encouraging multilateral and other bilateral donors to increase their support for the sector.

Monetary Union

Q106. Mr. John Browne: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding proposals for monetary union in the EEC.

Q156. Mr. Cash: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding proposals for monetary union in the European Economic Community.

Q157. Mr. Malins: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding proposals for monetary union in the European Economic Community.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of representations on this subject.

Namibia

Q119. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a further statement on the process of independence in Namibia.

The Prime Minister: We remain fully committed to the implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibian independence. We are urging all those concerned to comply fully with the terms of the United Nations plan.

EEC Commission President

Q123. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister when she next plans to meet the President of the European Economic Community Commission.

The Prime Minister: I expect to meet the President of the EC Commission at the meeting of the European Council on 26 and 27 June.

Low-Income Households

Q153. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the number of low-income households in Mountain Ash.

The Prime Minister: This information is not available.

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 4 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 4 May.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 4 May.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 4 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 4 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Female Legal Staff

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General how many female (a) barristers, (b) magistrates, (c) solicitors, (d) judges, (e) recorders and (f) court clerks are (i) employed and (ii) qualified in the United Kingdom according to the latest available figures.

The Attorney-General: Such figures as are available for England and Wales are as follows:

(a) Barristers

As at 1 October 1988 there were 940 women practising barristers. In addition, 309 women employed barristers are recorded as paying the Bar subscription, giving a total of 1,249 known active women barristers.

(b) Magistrates

As at 1 January 1989 there were 12,214 women lay magistrates. In addition, there are eight women full-time metropolitan stipendiary magistrates; four women acting metropolitan stipendiary magistrates; and three women acting provincial stipendiary magistrates.

(c) Solicitors

In 1987-88 (the latest period for which figures are available), 10,062 women solicitors held practising certificates. In 1988, there were 13,046 women solicitors on the roll.

(d) Judges

There is one woman lord justice of appeal, one woman High Court judge, and there are 17 women Circuit judges.

(e) Recorders

There are 29 women recorders.

(f) Court Clerks

As at 31 December 1988 there were 12 women clerks to the justices. There are, in addition, 112 women chief clerks of Crown and County courts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Balance of Trade

114. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the balance of manufactured trade in (a) 1978 and (b) 1988.

Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give the balance of manufactured trade in (a) 1978 and (b) 1988.

116. Mr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the balance of manufactured trade in (a) 1978 and (b) 1988.

117. Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the balance of manufactured trade in (a) 1978 and (b) 1988.

Mr. Alan Clark: Trade in manufactures on a balance of payments basis was in surplus by £5·1 billion in 1978 and in deficit by £14·4 billion in 1988.

Imports

118. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the proportion of total manufacturing imports represented by production and investment goods in (a) 1984 and (b) 1988.

119. Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the proportion of total manufacturing imports represented by production and investment goods in (a) 1984 and (b) 1988.

Mr. Bell: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will estimate the proportion of total manufacturing imports represented by production and investment goods in (a) 1984 and (b) 1988.

Mr. Alan Clark: The proportion of United Kingdom imports of manufactures on an Overseas Trade Statistics basis represented by production and investment goods was as follows:

	Per cent.
1984	76
1988	75

Notes:
(1) The figures exclude the more erratic items—ships, North sea oil installations, aircraft, precious stones and silver.
(2) Production and investment goods are taken to be semi-manufactures (SITC 5 and 6) plus intermediate finished manufactures and investment goods (part of SITC 7 and 8, based on the United Nations broad economic categories).

Poland (Investment)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if the renewed legalisation of Solidarnosc in Poland will affect United Kingdom export credit guarantees for industrial investment in Poland.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 27 April 1989]: The Government welcome many of the political and structural changes taking place in Poland. However, there will need to be a clear improvement in the economic situation too before any resumption of medium term export credit guarantees can be justified.

It is hoped that Poland can reach agreement with the IMF on an adjustment programme that can lead to such economic improvements. The Government intend to play a constructive role in seeking to establish an agreement between Poland and the IMF.

ECGD short-term credit guarantees, and investment insurance against war and expropriation risks, continue to be available.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Internal Market

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the total value to the latest available full year of public sector contracts in Northern Ireland of a character which will make them open to Communitywide bidding as part of the creation of the internal market.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The cost of assessing the value of public sector contracts in Northern Ireland to be opened to Community-wide bidding would not be justified. The EC is currently investigating the effects of applying procurement rules to contracts above various value thresholds in sectors excluded from existing Community directives.

Rates

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on measures to reduce the rate of increase in regional rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 20 April, at columns 447-48 to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East (Mr. Ross). Two exceptional factors, the change in Exchequer support and the one-off credit balance in 1988-89 together accounted for 6·6 per cent. out of the 12·6 per cent. increase in the 1989-90 regional rate. The remaining 6 per cent. reflected substantial increases in public expenditure programmes in Northern Ireland in areas such as education and roads maintenance. The level of the Government support for rate relevant expenditure in Northern Ireland is at a very high level, 82 per cent. compared with 43 per cent. in England. The Government endeavour to strike a reasonable balance between the need for expenditure on central Government rate-borne services in Northern Ireland and the burden placed on ratepayers. However, the only practical way to reduce the impact upon ratepayers would be to reduce relevant public expenditure programmes in Northern Ireland.

Mater Infirmorum Hospital, Belfast

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) whether the Mater Infirmorum hospital, Belfast, will become the main centre for gynaecology in central Belfast if the proposals of the complementarity study of the Eastern health and social services board are implemented;

(2) what assessment has been made of whether the Mater hospital can provide a full range of care;

(3) what steps are being taken to ensure that the Mater hospital can provide a service with regard to artificial techniques of contraception, sterilisation, tubal ligation, and related areas;

(4) what steps are being taken to ensure equal provision for women seeking care on a non-denominational basis under the proposals of the complementarity study of the Eastern health board;

(5) what representations he has received suggesting that the proposals of the Eastern health board's complementarity study have not taken account of the special characteristics of the Mater hospital; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The proposals for changes in the provision of acute services by the three Belfast teaching hospitals stem from the recent complementarity study report. The Eastern health and social services board has yet to decide how it wishes to proceed with the study recommendations. When it does I will wish to discuss the conclusions very fully with the board chairman.

Health Education

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the budget for health education in Northern Ireland for each year from 1978-79 to 1987-88, expressed as actual expenditure and as a percentage of total National Health Service spending in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The information is not available in the form requested as many of the services provided by health and social services boards include an element of health education which is not funded separately.

Details of the Department of Health and Social Services budget spent directly on centrally financed health education are given in the table. This consists of the Northern Ireland pro rata contribution to the former Health Education Council and an additional £200,000 in 1987-88 to fund the launch of the "Northern Ireland Change of Heart" coronary prevention programme.

1978-79	51,000
1979-80	106,000
1980-81	152,000
1981-82	200,000
1982-83	249,000
1983-84	257,000
1984-85	265,000
1985-86	270,000
1986-87	278,000
1987-88	491,000

Pre-School Education

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the percentage of children of pre-school age currently enrolled in state-run pre-school education in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

	All grant-aided schools[1] per cent.
Pre school age pupils in nursery education[2]	13·3
Three and four-year-olds in Education[3]	45·4

[1] Both figures are expressed as a percentage of the three and four-year-old population at January 1988.

[2] Includes nursery schools and nursery classes in primary schools.

[3] Covers all three and four-year-olds in education, including those in nursery schools and nursery classes but excluding those in special schools.

Social Fund

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available, for each social security office, on the highest and lowest month for social fund applications and allocations, indicating the relevant respective figures.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Information about the number of applications processed and the amounts awarded in each month is available in the Library.

Information about the highest and lowest month for social fund applications for the period 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 (the latest date for which information is available) is as follows:

Highest and Lowest Number of Social Fund Applications: 11 April 1988—31 March 1989

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available on the proportion of the social fund budget allocated in each social security office by the end of each quarter in the year April 1988-89, indicating the total monetary value involved.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Information about the amounts of awards made each month and the outstanding balance of the loans and grants budget for each social security office is available in the Library.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available for the year April 1988-89 on the total numbers of social fund applications and payments and the total value of payments in each social security office for maternity payments, funeral expenses, community care grants, budgeting loans and crisis loans.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Information about the number of community care grants, budgeting and crisis loan applications processed and the amounts awarded for each month since April 1988 is available in the Library.

The information requested about the number and value of maternity payments and funeral expenses is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Income Support

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will provide figures showing the estimated take-up rate for claims for income support payments under the severe hardship provision for 16 and 17-year-olds actively pursuing a place on the youth training programme;

(2) if he will provide figures showing the estimated take-up rate for claims for income support payments under the severe hardship provision.

Mr. Needham [holding answers 28 April 1989]: The information requested is not available.

Arms (Terrorists)

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information his Department has of countries supplying (a) arms, and (b) finance for arms to be used by terrorist groups connected with the so-called Loyalist Group in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I am not in a position to comment on the possibility that any country may have supplied arms or finance to such groups.

ENERGY

Departmental Policy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the policy areas where his Department has failed to reach its targets since May 1979; and if he will identify why these failures occurred and set out how these failures will be rectified:

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the failures in policy implementation in his Department since May 1979.

Mr. Parkinson: My Department has been successful in implementing its main policy objectives since May 1979.

Nuclear Material

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) Official Report, 22 December 1988, column 439, if he will list those bilateral agreements, by date of completion, permitting International Atomic Energy Agency inspection of nuclear material in the United Kingdom; how often these inspections have been conducted; and whether any anomalies have ever been reported.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The earlier agreements with the IAEA referred to in the answer given to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) are as follows:

United Kingdom: 14 December 1972—INFCIRC 175

Inspections under these agreements are carried out at regular intervals. After analysis of the inspection data the IAEA has always concluded that the nuclear material present was in accordance with the declarations made by the United Kingdom.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Actively Seeking Work Test

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the change in benefit requirements for the unemployed from being available for work to being actively seeking work will be used by local unemployment offices before its official implementation in October 1989.

Mr. Lee: I have been asked to reply.

No.

Income Support

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what reviews he is carrying out on women who may make a fresh or new claim for income support and housing benefit in respect of hostel accommodation after October; if he will ensure that they will not be placed on a lower benefit than currently when they claim board and lodging allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon) on 27 April, at column 652.

Social Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has under review for social fund officers to be redeployed on takeup campaigns; what resources he proposes to allocate to this purpose; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Department has no plans at present to redeploy social fund officers specifically for the purpose of dealing with take-up campaigns. There are already sufficient staff employed in local offices to deal with variable levels of demand for social fund awards. In the event of a significant unexpected local increase in the numbers of social fund applications, the local office manager would manage resources according to competing priorites.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the number of refusals for social fund applications for both grants and loans, due to (i) applicant not being on income support, (ii) amount requested below £30 minimum, (iii) applicant not considered credit-worthy, (iv) applicant did not satisfy six-month qualification rule, (v) applicant not considered a high priority group, (vi) applicant not requesting a high priority item and (vii) insufficient funds in local office budget both actual and as a percentage of all refusals for the year April 1988 to March 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Provisional figures for the period 11 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 are set out in the table. The figures relate to the number of occasions on which the particular reason for refusal was used. It is possible for an individual application to be refused for more than one reason.

Refusals of Social Fund loans and grants where selected reasons given, 1988-89

	Loans		Grants
	number of refusals where selected reason given	as a percentage of all refusals	number of refusals where selected reason given	as a percentage of all refusals

Insufficient SF funds, priority too low	83,888	22·3	11,864	8·1
No serious damage or risk to health or safety	22,455	6·0	n/a	— n/a = not applicable.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the areas in which social fund allocations increased, decreased or remained the same from April 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A list giving the information requested has been placed in the Library.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will monitor the effects of social fund loans on the living standards of income support claimants during the period when they are repaying them.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have recently commissioned the social policy research unit at York university to carry out a programme of detailed research on the social fund. This will include case studies of people who have taken out a social fund loan and will take account of the effect of repayment arrangements.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is done to ensure that deductions made from the income support allowances of claimants repaying social fund loans leave them with enough income to meet their essential needs;

(2) how quickly people who receive social fund loans are expected to repay them, assuming loans of (a) £50, (b) £100, (c) £150 and (d) £200.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The period and rate of repayments of a social fund loan do not depend solely on the amount of the loan. In agreeing repayment terms with the applicant before the loan is made, account is taken of the applicant's income, existing commitments and commitments which are likely to arise during the repayment period. Repayments are, however, expected to be completed within 78 weeks, although this can be extended to 104 weeks in certain circumstances. If an applicant finds difficulty in meeting the repayments, or if his circumstances change, he should discuss his problems with the staff of the local office.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many and what percentage of children born in England during 1988 were eligible for maternity payments through the social fund; and what was the average payment made;

(2) how many and what percentage of children born in Scotland during 1988 were eligible for maternity payments through the social fund; and what was the average payment made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not available in the form requested. During 1988, 654,000[1] and 66,000[1] children were born in England and Scotland respectively, with 141,231[1] and 18,324[1] social fund maternity payments being made. These payments were set at a flat rate—£80 before 11 April 1988 and £85 thereafter—and were payable to income support and family credit beneficiaries, subject to a £500 capital disregard, for each child expected, born or adopted.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state, for the financial year 1988-89, the proportion of social fund expenditure which has become the subject of civil legal proceedings on the ground of fraud.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 20 April 1989]: I regret that the information requested is not available.

During the year ended 31 March 1989, however, 229 social fund cases were submitted for consideration of civil proceedings in England and Wales, and 13 in Scotland.

Unemployment Benefit

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if there are any trial areas for the change in unemployment benefit policy due to be implemented in October 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There are no trial areas.

Income Support

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the minimum, net amount of income support payable to a lone-parent with three children under 11 years, after deducations for rent, rates, rent-rate arrears, gas-electricity arrears and social fund loan.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The amount of income support payable in the circumstances described would depend on a number of factors, including the level of deduction for the social fund loan, which is at the discretion of an officer acting on behalf of the Secretary of State, and on the claimant's income. However, a hypothetical assessment, assuming income of child benefit and one-parent benefit with a social fund deduction of 5 per cent. and with no deduction for current rent, rates or fuel consumption, would be:

Personal allowance	34·90
Children's allowance	35·25
Lone Parent premium	3·90
Family premium	6·50
Applicable amount	80·55
Deductions for arrears of housing costs	1·75
Deduction for arrears of fuel	3·50
Deduction for social fund loan	[1]4·02
Total deductions	9·27
Income support payable	44·33

[1] 5 per cent. of applicable amount.

HEALTH

Mental Handicap

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funds were allocated from his Department for directly commissioned research relevant to mental handicap for each of the past five years; and whether he intends for those funds to be increased over the next five to 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: The funds allocated for directly commissioned research relevant to mental handicap for the past five years were as follows:

Year	£
1984-85	679,700
1985-86	709,100
1986-87	520,700
1987-88	771,100
1988-89	659,800

The Department will continue to develop its research strategy in the field of mental handicap over the next five to 10 years.

Maternal Deaths

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the figures on the number of (a) direct and (b) indirect maternal deaths in England and Wales in 1982, 1983 and 1984 in National Health Service hospitals without consultant obstetric units, and the number of these associated with anaesthesia, are yet available.

Mr. Freeman: In England and Wales between 1982 and 1984 there were 18 maternal deaths from anaesthesia and one in which anaesthesia contributed to the death. Information on where death occurred is not available in the precise form requested. However, we do have the following details:

Type of maternal death	Total number	[1] Place of death Consultant Obstetric Unit	Intensive Care Unit	[2] Other hospital ward	[3] Home	[4] Elsewhere
Direct death	138	38	49	24	23	4
Associated with anaesthesia (all included in direct death)	19	4	14	1	0	0
Indirect death	71	22	16	13	14	6

[1] Not always the place where the anaesthetic complication occurred. (No direct or indirect deaths occurred in GP units or GP maternity homes.)

[2] Includes neurosurgical units, medical and surgical wards, accident and emergency departments.

[3] None of the deaths at home were booked home deliveries.

[4] Includes two deaths in private nursing homes approved under the Abortion Act.

Hospital Beds

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each district health authority in England in 1987 (a) the total number of beds in non-psychiatric National Health Service hospitals, (b) the total number of beds in private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Nursing Homes Act 1984 and (c) the number of beds in private institutions expressed as a percentage of the number of non-psychiatric hospital beds.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table. As the distribution of private nursing homes is not controlled by the needs of the resident community to the same extent as NHS provison of services, comparisons of bed stock may be misleading, particularly at district health authority level.

Orthopaedic Treatment, North Staffordshire

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce the time out-patients in north Staffordshire have to wait for a first available orthopaedic appointment.

Mr. Mellor: Waiting lists and waiting times for orthopaedic treatment in north Staffordshire are being investigated by an independent management team. If the team identifies the need for an injection of funds, the regional health authority will be able to apply for an allocation from the £6 million reserved from the waiting list fund for districts with particular waiting problems.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the average waiting list times in days for National Health Service operations (a) nationally, (b) by regional authorities and (c) for Halton district health authority.

Mr. Mellor: The available information in respect of in-patients treated in surgical departments in National Health Service hospitals during the financial year 1987-88 is given in the following table:

Median interval, in weeks, between the time an in-patient[1] was placed on the waiting list and admission to hospital

Halton District General Hospital

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the length of the out-patient list for Halton district general hospital; and what is the length for each specialty within it.

Mr. Mellor: We do not collect information on out-patient waiting times centrally.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths occur annually from cervical cancer; and what estimates he has made of the reduction in that number if there were a 100 per cent. response to a call and recall system.

Mr. Freeman: There have been for several years around 2,000 deaths annually in England and Wales from malignant neoplasm of the cervix uteri and there were 1,903 deaths in 1987. Cervical smears taken every five years between the ages of 20 and 64 could reduce by more than 80 per cent. the number of deaths which would otherwise occur from cancer of the cervix.

Electoral Register

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the percentage change in the numbers on local government electoral registers between 1988 and 1989 in (a) Kensington and Chelsea, (b) Manchester, (c) Liverpool, (d) Bristol and (e) Rochester upon Medway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table:

Percentage change between 1988 and 1989 local government electorates

County district/London borough	Percentage
Kensington and Chelsea	−4·3
Manchester	−4·2
Liverpool	−9·6
Bristol	−2·6
Rochester upon Medway	−11·3

Possible reasons for changes in electorates were indicated in OPCS "Monitor EL 89/1", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Encephalopathies

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the research being sponsored by his Department into transmissible encephalopathies.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health is not sponsoring any research in transmissible encephalopathies.

However, a committee has been set up by this Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under the chairmanship of Dr. David Tyrrell to advise the Departments on research in progress or required on bovine spongiform encephalopathy and other transmissible encephalopathies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hillsborough Disaster

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects Lord Justice Taylor to present his interim report on the Hillsborough disaster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: It is for Lord Justice Taylor to decide in the light of his inquiries whether there are matters which should be the subject of an interim report and if so the timing of it.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Football Supporters Association since the Hillsborough tragedy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: None. It is of course open to the association to put forward evidence to Lord Justice Taylor's inquiry, or views to the Department of the Environment or the Home Office on matters within our responsibilities.

Rapists

Mr Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research is being carried out, or is planned, into the circumstances and treatment of mentally disordered rapists in prison and into ways of seeking to prevent them from reoffending.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There is no research being carried out, or planned, which is solely concerned with mentally disordered rapists. However, a certain amount of research is being carried out (separately) on mentally disordered offenders and sexual offenders which may, inter alia, provide some information about mentally disordered rapists and possible ways of preventing them reoffending.

With regard to research on mentally disordered offenders, I refer the hon. Member to the reply to a question by the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 20 March 1989 at columns 405-06

As to research on sex offenders, the Institute of Psychiatry is carrying out a study of sex offenders in prisons. The purpose of this study (the results of which should be available later this year) is to try to identify factors in sex offenders' histories which appear to distinguish them from other types of offender and non-offender populations. It will be particularly concerned with rapists. The study may help in making decisions about which types of sexual offender are likely to benefit from treatment and which are not.

Mr Malcolm Cowburn of the Nottingham probation service is carrying out an investigation and evaluation of the work being undertaken with sex offenders (including rapists) in prisons in England and Wales. The results of this study should also be available this year.

Consideration is being given by the Department to carrying out a study of convicted rapists. The purpose of the study would be to describe the offenders and their offences in detail and to assess their treatment needs. A history of mental disorder would be noted as part of that description.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men are currently serving a sentence of imprisonment for rape; and what proportion of such prisoners are mentally disordered.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 30 June 1988 about 1,070 males were serving sentences for rape offences, including attempted rape, in prison service establishments in England and Wales. Information on the number who are mentally disordered is not recorded centrally.

Football Grounds, (Safety)

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests and (b) ejections from the ground were made by the police before, during and after the games between (i) West Ham United and Millwall and (ii) Chelsea and Leeds United, played on Saturday 22 April.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis has provided the following information. Of the 94 people arrested in connection with the match between Chelsea and Leeds United, 59 were arrested before., 12 during and 23 after the game. Twenty eight people were ejected from the ground. Of the 24 people arrested in connection with the match between West Ham United and Millwall 15 were arrested before, seven during and two after the game. Twenty four people were ejected from the ground. Police figures do not distinguish between ejections made before and during a game.

Drug Traffickers

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral answer to the hon. Member for Altrincham and Sale of 13 April, Official Report, column 1053, what account is taken of the sums confiscated from convicted drug traffickers in setting the allocations for (a) rehabilitation of drug offenders, and (b) the prevention of drug trafficking.

Mr. John Patten: We allocate funds to work against drug misuse according to needs and priorities. No direct account is taken of the varying and unpredictable sums confiscated from convicted drug traffickers in different parts of the country.

Police National Computer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will place the invitation to tender documents for the new police national computer in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Publication of these documents would be a breach of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will describe the new facilities, applications or indexes that are envisaged for the new police national computer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The new police national computer will initially provide the police with the same facilities as are provided on the current system. No decisions have yet been taken about the provision of additonal facilities on the new computer.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the indexes and the data items contained within each index of the new police national computer.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All names applications on the new police national computer may contain information in the following data classes:

The broadcast application enables forces to send messages to printer terminals in specified destination forces. The messages are stored for 24 hours after creation.

The message log application automatically records the full details of all on-line transactions. The information is retained on the log for six months.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will describe the improvements in communications between police forces computers and the new police national computer; whether all police force computers will be linked into the new network; whether police forces will be able to transmit databases to each other and search other police computer systems; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The new police national computer will be linked to all forces through the existing network, modified as necessary to ensure compatibility with the new equipment.

We are discussing with the police service its requirements for a wider police network which would permit the exchange of information between forces, but no decisions have yet been taken about the scope of this network.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the data protection registrar has been asked to comment on the facilities that will be provided by the new police national computer and network.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The data protection registrar has been consulted about the facilities which will be provided by the new police national computer.

Criminal Injury and Damage Claims

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current situation concerning the widow of a common law husband with reference to entitlement to claims for a criminal injury and damage.

Mr. John Patten: Under the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 courts in England and Wales may award damages for financial dependency and funeral expenses to a common law widow who had lived with the man continuously for at least the last two years before his death. Awards under the criminal injuries compensation scheme are confined in such cases to funeral expenses. There is no general entitlement to compensation for damage, although the courts have power to order an offender upon conviction to pay compensation for damage he has caused.

Obscene Publications Act 1959

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions there have been under section 2 of the Obscene Publications Act 1959; and of those found guilty, what sentence was imposed in England and Wales since 1979;

(2) how many orders have been made at magistrates courts in England and Wales to forfeit obscene articles under section 3 of the Obscene Publications Act 1959 in each year since 1979.

Mr. John Patten: Information held centrally for 1982 to 1987 is given in the table. Information prior to 1982 would involve disproportionate cost.

Persons proceeded against for offences under the Obscene Publications Act 1959

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many items of obscene material were seized by police under section 3 of the Obscene Publications Act 1959 in England and Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Renton: Information about seizures of items under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 is not held centrally. The only information which can be obtained without disproportionate cost relates to the Metropolitan police, and is set out in the following table:

Items seized by the Metropolitan Police under the Obscene Publications Act 1959, 1979 to 1988.

Electoral Register

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to improve electoral registration in Kensington and Chelsea, Manchester, Liverpool, Bristol and Rochester upon Medway.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The registration of persons entitled to vote is the statutory duty of the electoral registration officers for the districts or London boroughs concerned. I am confident that their aim is to produce as comprehensive and accurate a register as possible, and we intend to support them as in previous years with an appropriate publicity campaign at the time of the autumn canvass.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he holds information for any other countries on the use made by taxation authorities of electoral registers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he holds information for any other countries on the use made by local authorities of electoral registers for their own financial purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to examine the impact of the community charge on electoral registration.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 17 April at column 33.

Community Charge

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish (a) the full details of the police arbitration tribunal award of March as it relates to the introduction of the community charge and police officers' allowances and (b) the likely costs of this section of the award in 1990-91.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The terms of the arbitration award were as follows:

(a) No provision should be made by the police authorities to undertake payment of the community charge levied on police officers or their wives;

(b) the present system of rent and rates allowances and compensatory grants should be remodelled as explained in our general considerations set out above; and

(c) the process should take effect from April 1989 in Scotland and from April 1990 in England and Wales and also in Northern Ireland, as far as is practicable, bearing in mind that the community charge is not likely to be introduced there on that date.

In its general considerations the tribunal concluded that the new police housing allowance, which is to replace the present rent allowance, should be determined for each force by "taking the current bill, which has been expressed as for rent and rates, and dividing it by the number of officers concerned".

It will not be possible to calculate the costs of the award until the negotiations on a number of issues which the tribunal passed back to the police negotiating board for further consideration have been concluded.

Parliamentary Boundary Commissions

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will announce the new membership of the Parliamentary Boundary Commissions for England and Wales.

Mr. Hurd: Mr. Speaker is chairman of both boundary commissions. The other members are as follows:

	Appointed by Boundary Commission for England
The Hon. Mr. Justice Knox	The Lord Chancellor
Miss Sheila Cameron, QC	The Home Secretary
Mr. D. Macklin, MA	The Secretary of State for the Environment
Boundary Commission for Wales
The Hon. Mr. Justice Anthony Evans	The Lord Chancellor
Mr. W. P. Davey, CBE, DL, IPFA	The Home Secretary
Mr. M. P. McLaggan, JP, DL, MA	The Secretary of State for Wales

The appointment of Mr. Justice Knox will expire on 31 December 1990; the other appointments expire on 31 December 1992.

EMPLOYMENT

National Dock Labour Board

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the cost of financing the National Dock Labour Board sports activities in 1987-88; and how much of this was financed through the employers' levy.

Mr. Nicholls: A total of £59,292 in 1987, all financed through the board's management levy on employers.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the levy income for the National Dock Labour Board for 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: The board's own management levy was £4,433,636. Levy received on behalf of the national voluntary severance scheme, administered by the board, was £2,047,046.

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the legal and professional fees incurred by the National Dock Labour Board in 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: Legal fees were £94,767 and professional fees were £13,030.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the cost to the National Dock Labour Board of financing the registered dock workers' national golf competition in 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: A total of £11,019.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much was spent by the National Dock Labour Board in 1987 in legal fees on definitions of dock work.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: A total of £43,050.

Jobstart

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have used the jobstart allowance in each year since it began and for each standard economic region.

Mr. Lee: The numbers of people accepted on to the jobstart programme in each employment service region is shown in the table:

Region	From 1 July 1986 to 26 March 1987	From 27 March 1987 to 25 March 1988	From 26 March 1988 to 27 January 1989
Northern	694	1,003	765
Yorkshire and Humberside	992	1,557	1,121
East Midlands and Eastern	921	1,288	819
London	286	292	219
South East	572	708	371
South West	430	639	308
Wales	627	1,131	768
West Midlands	1,190	1,696	1,104
North West	1,890	2,884	1,794
Scotland	954	1,493	1,139
Great Britain	8,556	12,691	8,408

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the average length of stay of workers claiming the jobstart allowance.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not readily available. However, it is estimated that in 1988 two-thirds of jobstart participants completed the 26 weeks of the programme. People who do not complete 26 weeks may cease to be eligible for the allowance for a number of reasons, including the wage rising above the limit allowed.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the sectors in which jobstart allowance workers were based in 1988.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of the average jobstart allowance workers for each year since the start of the initiative; and if this includes the allowance.

Mr. Lee: The information requested is not readily available. However, an evaluation survey of the jobstart programme is currently being undertaken. Preliminary information from the study indicates that the average starting wage of jobstart workers in April and May 1988 was £67. This figure excludes the allowance.

Unemployment Benefit

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many claims of unemployment benefit have been disallowed on the grounds of refusal or premature termination of training in each month since September 1988.

Mr. Lee: Information is not collected in the form requested. However, in the six month period ending 31 December 1988, the total number of claims for unemployment benefit disallowed by adjudication officers on the grounds of refusal or premature termination of training, was 1,110.

Work Permits

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to review the work permit scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: Changes in the labour market since the current rules for granting work permits were set in 1980 make it timely to review the operation of the scheme. We are concerned to see that the scheme, taking into account the interests of the resident labour force, provides as efficient service as possible to employers who need to employ people from outside the European Community. My Department has today sent a consultation paper to interested bodies inviting their view on proposals for increasing the effectiveness of the scheme. I have placed a copy of the paper in the Library. This review will also contribute to the Government's strategy of removing burdens from business.

Industrial Action

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to the number of days lost in the United Kingdom and other Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries by industrial action in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: The available information on working days lost from industrial stoppages, expressed as a ratio per thousand employees is shown in the table. The information covers OECD countries for 1987, the latest year for which comparative data is available. Comparisons between countries should be made with considerable care because of the different coverage of each country's statistics. Countries use different criteria for the exclusion of small stoppages from the statistics; public sector strikes are excluded in some cases, and some countries exclude workers prevented from working because others at their workplace are on strike. Further details are given in the article "International comparisons of industrial stoppages for 1986" published in the Employment Gazette, June 1988, page 335, a copy of which is in the Library.

Industrial stoppages working days lost per thousand employees[1] in all industries and services 1987

	Days
United Kingdom	160
Australia	220
Austria	[2]—
Canada	370
Denmark	60
Finland	60
France[3]	30
Germany (Federal Republic)	[2]—

Switzerland	—
United States[3]	40

[1] Employees in employment: some figures have been estimated.
[2] Less than five days lost per thousand employees.
[3] Significant coverage differences, the most important of which are: France and New Zealand exclude public sector strikes; New Zealand figures are for strikes of more than 10 working days duration; United States figures exclude disputes where less than 1,000 workers involved.

DEFENCE

United Nations

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what support his Department gives to the United Nations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My Department provides the following support to the United Nations:

UNFICYP[1]
One infantry battalion, one support regiment and a company of military police.

UNTAG[2]
One signals squadron and a small RAF reception assistance team.

Republic of Korea
One platoon from the Hong Kong garrison, which contributes towards the United Nations Honour Guard, and a small number of United Kingdom personnel in the headquarters of the Commonwealth Liaison Mission to the United Nations Command.

British Forces Cyprus also provide logistic support for UNDOF[3] and UNIFIL[4] and there is currently an Army officer attached to the United Nations Field Operations Division in New York advising on logistics matters.

[1] United Nations Force in Cyprus.
[2] United Nations Transitional Assistance Group in Namibia.
[3] United Nations Disengagement Observer Force, Syria/Israel.
[4] United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon.

Condor 2 Missile

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the role played by the APV company of London, in the sale of missile propellant compounds to the Italian firm SNIA BPD via APV subsidiary APV Chemical Machinery Inc., of Saginaw, Michigan, United States of America, for use by the Argentine Institute of Aeronautic and Space Research in the development of the Condor 2 intermediate tactical missile.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have been asked to reply.

There was no export to Argentina of this type from the United Kingdom. Exports by APV's American subsidiary are a matter for the American authorities.

Defence Costs and Commitments

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the latest United States plans for burden sharing will affect United Kingdom defence costs and commitments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are not aware of any United States Governmant burden sharing plans that are likely to affect the United Kingdom's defence costs and commitments.

Trident

Mr. Andrew F. Barnett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about command and control of Trident.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Lance Missiles

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, during the recent NATO nuclear planning Group meeting, the United Kingdom delegation raised the case for consideration of obligations under article VI of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty for NATO states party to the non-proliferation treaty, when evaluating the replacement of Lance nuclear-tipped short-range missiles in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what scientific data were presented to the London dumping convention (a) in the years up to and including 1983 and (b) post 1983 on the potential environmental damage that might arise from the disposal at sea of (i) decommissioned nuclear submarine hulls, (ii) submarine reactor cores and (iii) low and intermediate-level radioactive wastes from the processing of military nuclear materials.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom has presented no such data.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, following the sinking of the Soviet Mike class nuclear submarine on 7 April, he will review the present safety of (a) United Kingdom nuclear-powered submarines and (b) United States nuclear-powered submarines afforded docking rights in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Measures to ensure the continuing safe design and operation of Royal Navy submarines are kept under constant review. In the light of what is currently known of the circumstances of the loss of the Mike class Soviet submarine on 7 April, the accident would appear to offer no specific lessons with regard to Royal Naval submarine safety. The safety of United States nuclear-powered warships is the responsibility of the United States Government. However, visits to this country by United States nuclear-powered submarines are covered by a written arrangement between the two countries.

Diversion Airfields

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the master diversion airfields used by the Royal Air Force and North Atlantic Treaty Organisation based aircraft in the United Kingdom and abroad.

Mr. Neubert: The Royal Air Force presently operates eight military emergency diversion aerodromes in the United Kingdom and one master diversion aerodrome overseas.

These are:

MEDAs

RAF Leeming
RAF Leuchars
RAF Lossiemouth
RAF Manston
RAF St. Mawgan
RAF Valley
RAF Waddington
RAF Wattisham

MDA

RAF Wildenrath

Ascension and Falkland Islands

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total tonnage of fresh vegetables supplied to the Ascension and Falklands Islands from (a) England and (b) the Isle of Wight to date.

Mr. Neubert: Last year 375 tonnes of fresh vegetables were shipped to Ascension and the Falkland Islands from the United Kingdom. Our records do not enable the origin of the vegetables to be identified in the detail requested.

Charities (Retail Prices Index Error)

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what payments were made to armed services charities from moneys arising from the error in the retail price index.

Mr. Neubert: Payments were made from Ministry of Defence funds, consequent upon the error in calculation of the retail prices index discovered in 1987, to the following charitable organisations for further distribution:

King George's Fund for Sailors	282,000
Army Benevolent Fund	498,000
Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund	418,000

Territorial Army

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence approximately how many United Kingdom employers now release staff for service in the Territorial Army.

Mr. Neubert: It is not at present possible to provide an accurate assessment of the number of employers who release staff for TA service. In addition to the willingness of men and women to offer their services, the need to harness the wholehearted support of employers has long been acknowledged. For this reason we launched a major campaign in September of last year not only with a prime aim of stressing the importance of the TA, but also of making employers aware of the benefits which may accrue from employees' participation, ie improved qualities of leadership, discipline, self-reliance, communications and the acquisition of personal skills. One of the major initiatives in the early stages of this campaign was the circulation of a letter from the chairman of the National Employer Liaison Committee, Mr. Tony MacPherson, to over 600 leading companies seeking an active commitment to the Reserve Forces. The response to this letter has been overwhelmingly positive.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Pollution

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will include in the Official Report his estimate of the proportionate contribution to the pollution of the water supply in toxic or other terms as defined by the European Economic Community regulations or otherwise made by (a) manufacturing industry, (b) agriculture, (c) sewage works and (d) domestic consumers of water.

Mr. Howard: Pollution incidents from manufacturing industry, agriculture and sewage treatments works rarely affect water supplies, because water undertakers take effective precautionary measures to prevent this. A few supplies are affected by nitrate pollution from agriculture and very low levels of pesticides have been detected in some supplies as a result of activity by a variety of bodies including local authorities, farmers and nationalised industries. Water in individual properties may have a high lead concentration because of lead communication and supply pipes. There have been occasional instances of pollution from chlorinated solvents derived from de-greasing activities or dry cleaning businesses. Further information about the quality of groundwater sources is contained in the report "Assessment of Groundwater in England and Wales" prepared for the Department by Sir William Halcrow and Partners Ltd. and published last December.

Environmental Assessment

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those proposed developments for which, since 15 July 1988, the local planning authority has given an opinion that environmental assessment is required.

Mr. Howard: The following cases in which an English local planning authority has given an opinion under regulation 5(4) of the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 that environment assessment is required have been notified to the Department in accordance with paragraph 52 of DoE circular 15/88.

Local planning authority	Proposed Development	Date of opinion
Leeds City Council	Retail, etc, development Kirkstall Valley, Leeds	11 August 1988
Calderdale D. C.	Sludge de-watering plant Bradley	7 March 1989
Newcastle City Council	Gosforth Park housing development, Newcastle	13 March 1989
Peterborough City Council	Residential and commercial development at Castor and Ailsworth, Peterborough	31 March 1989
Knowsley D. C.	Incinerator for medical and hospital wastes, Hammond Road., Kirkby, Merseyside	13 April 1989

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those developments for which an environmental statement has been provided under the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 and give the planning authority's decision in respect of each planning application with any conditions attached to the permissions.

Mr. Howard: Copies of the environmental statements have been sent to the Department under regulation 14(2)(B) in respect of the following developments:

	Proposed development	Planning decision as notified to the Secretary of State under regulation 23
Slough Borough Council	Expansion of private power station, Slough, Berkshire.	Planning permission granted 10 January 1989.
South Oxfordshire District Council	Brickworks, Southmead Industrial Estate, Didcot, Oxfordshire.	Planning permission refused 11 January 1989.

South Oxfordshire District Council	Wallingford by-pass.	Not yet notified
Devon County Council	Extension of landfill site, Kengsteignton, South Devon	Not yet notified.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those proposed developments since 15 July 1988 where (a) he has exercised his power to make a direction without an application under the Town and Country Planning (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988, (b) he has had to make a direction where a planning application has not been accompanied by an environmental assessment but the planning authority have notified the applicant that an environmental statement would be required; and if he will state the effect of those directions.

Mr. Howard: The following directions have been given by the Secretary of State:

LPA	Proposed Development	Date of Direction	Effect of Direction
	(a) Without application under the regulations:
Lincoln City Council	Business Park, Bishops Bridge, Lincoln	13 April 1989	EA required
	(b) in response to a request by a developer following a notification by a local planning authority that an environmental statement is required in respect of a planning application not accompanied by an environmental statement:
1. City of Nottingham	Retail park, hotel, etc. Babbington Colliery site, Nottingham	2 September 1988	EA not required
2. London Boroughs of Newham and Waltham Forest	Lee Cross Shopping Centre	28 October 1988	EA required
3. Wycombe D.C.	Motorway Service Area, M40, near High Wycombe	17 November 1988	EA not required
4. South Buckingham D.C.	Shopping Complex, Tanhouse Pits, Iver, Bucks.	6 December 1988	EA not required
5. Northants C.C.	Extension of sand and gravel workings, Stanwick Quarry, near Raunds, Northants	6 December 1988	EA required
6. Cambridgeshire C.C.	Extension of sand and gravel workings, Barleycroft Farm, Cambs	14 December 1988	EA not required
7. Thamesdown B.C.	Industrial estate, Stratton St. Margaret, Swindon	21 December 1988	EA not required
8. Essex C.C.	Sand and gravel workings Mana Farm, Essex	30 January 1989	EA required
9. North West Leicestershire D.C.	Retail Park, Donington Park Motor Racing Circuit	2 March 1989	EA required
10. North West Leicestershire D.C.	Business/Office Park, Donington Park	2 March 1989	EA required
11. London Borough of Lambeth	Redevelopment of County Hall, London SE1	14 March 1989	EA not required
12. Malvern Hills D.C.	New village and industrial development, adjacent to Malvern Hills	17 March 1989	EA required
13. North Devon D.C.	Proposed Motor racing circuit at Bishop's Nympton, Devon	27 April 1989	EA required
	(c) in response to a request by a local planning authority in respect of its own development:
1. Sedgfield D.C.	Heighington Lane Industrial Site, Newton Aycliffe, County Durham	13 October 1988	EA not required

LPA	Proposed Development	Date of Direction	Effect of Direction
2. North Warwickshire D.C.	Infrastructure for industrial estate, Kingsbury Colliery site, near Tamworth	17 October 1988	EA not required
3. Langbaurgh B.C.	Ski lift and ski centre, Eston Hills Normanby	9 December 1988	EA not required

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those developments where he has been required to make a pre-application direction as to whether the development should be subject to environmental assessment and give the decision in each case.

Mr. Howard: There have been no such cases.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in view of the Housing Corporation's work with tenants' transfer and co-operatives, if he has taken any steps to ensure that the housing co-operative sector is represented on the board of the Housing Corporation.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend makes appointments to the board of the Housing Corporation so as to ensure that it has at its disposal the range of skills and experience necessary to fulfil its statutory functions.

AIDS

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his guidance to local authorities in relation to their policies and practices for the housing of those with HIV and AIDS.

Mr. Trippier: Decisions have not yet been taken on any Government guidance. Advice is already available to local authorities in the Report "Housing and HIV Infection" published by the local authority associations' officers working group on AIDS.

Dioxin Levels (Devon)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to secure regular monitoring of dioxin levels from the incineration at Yelland in north Devon of sewage sludge and screenings; and if he will ensure that the results are made available to the local authorities concerned.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Dioxin emission monitoring is extremely complex and expensive and results cannot be available for some time after the sampling period. We therefore believe that the appropriate way to control dioxin formation is to ensure strict control of combustion conditions and good abatement of particulates. This is in line with the recently agreed EC directive on new municipal waste incineration plant. Local authorities are responsible for the environmental regulation of incinerators of less than one tonne per hour capacity, such as the one at Yelland.

Rating Reform

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much he plans to spend distributing leaflets to households on forthcoming changes to the system of local government finance; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how much he plans to spend on press advertising in May 1989 on the new system of local government finance.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to the answers which I gave him on 17 April.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to publicise the national non-domestic rate and the revaluation of non-domestic properties.

Mr. Ridley: I hope to announce shortly how I propose to inform the public of the effects of the statute creating the new business rate.

Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the provisions of part II of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 to the City of London.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no plans at present for designating areas of archaeological importance within the City of London. English Heritage has been reviewing the effectiveness of part II of the 1979 Act and has recently submitted advice, which we are considering.

Roman Remains (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis scheduled monument consent was granted to Hammerson Property Group for the Roman remains in Upper Thames street.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A trial excavation of the site was undertaken by the Museum of London in 1988 and the results were evaluated by English Heritage. On the basis of that excavation an evaluation scheduled monument consent was granted to the developers on 22 December 1988 on condition that the Museum of London be allowed up to six months to carry out an archaeological excavation beneath part of Dominant House.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates have been made of how much of the total Roman site under Dominant House and Fur Trade House will be destroyed if the proposed development in Upper Thames street by Hammerson Property Group proceeds.

Mrs Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 18 April 1989, column 77. It is estimated that the current area of excavation covers about 20-25 per cent. of the known area of the monument.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the extent of the damage to the Roman remains on the Hammerson site in Upper Thames street caused by the 1964-65 building construction; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Less than 10 per cent. of the area of the current excavation was removed or disturbed by the construction of Dominant House in 1964.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have taken place between his Department and the City of London regarding safeguarding the Roman remains on the Hammerson Propery Group site in Upper Thames street; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There has been no direct contact between the Department and the City of London on this matter. We have been represented throughout by our statutory advisors on archaeology, English Heritage.

Scheduled Monument Consent

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on how many occasions since 1979 he has withdrawn or suspended scheduled monument consent; and under what powers did he act in each case.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None.

Edible Doormouse

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the European distribution of the edible doormouse, or glis glis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that the edible doormouse, glis glis, has a wide-ranging distribution in central and southern Europe, including northern Spain, France, Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy and Greece. The species was introduced into the United Kingdom in 1902 and is now found in the counties of Bedfordshire, Berkshire, Buckinghamshire and Hertfordshire.

Naburn Hospital Site

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what matters he took into account in agreeing to allow Selby district council to determine the further application by Paul Sykes (Developments) Ltd. to redevelop the former Naburn hospital site into an out-of-town shopping centre, contrary to the Greater York shopping policy;

(2) what matters he took into account in reaching his original decision to allow Selby district council to determine the application by Paul Sykes (Developments) Ltd. to redevelop the former Naburn hospital site into an out-of-town shopping centre, contrary to the Greater York shopping policy.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 27 April 1989]: In considering whether to call in the application for his own determination, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, had regard to Government policy, expressed particularly in PPG6 on major retail development and also to the shopping study carried out for the Greater York authorities, as updated by its author Harvey Coles and by G. L. Hearn. After careful consideration he concluded that there was no evidence that the vitality and viability of the city as a whole would be seriously affected.

WALES

Pollution (Irish Sea)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has received from local councils in Wales concerning the pollution levels in the Irish sea; what is the general thrust of these representations; what response he has given; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The Department has received four such almost identical representations. These expressed general concern about the dumping of human and industrial waste and radioactive contamination. The replies explained the initiatives being taken to assess and determine means of reducing the pollution of the Irish sea, and reiterated the Government's decision to extend the North sea conference declaration to all United Kingdom coastal waters.

TRANSPORT

London Buses Ltd

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any intention of privatising London Buses.

Mr. Portillo: I hope to see London Buses Ltd go into the private sector in due course.

London City Airport (Security)

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of recent security breaches, he has any plans to improve security arrangements at London City airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The aircraft concerned were not in service when the incidents occurred. The aviation security programme requires aircraft to be checked before they are brought into service. These requirements are designed to protect passengers' safety and I believe that they were met.

London Transportation Studies

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements have been made for the continuation of London transportation studies services.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department's contract with the MVA consultancy has been extended. It will now run until October 1991, with an option for a further year. The earlier plan to hold a competition for a new contract proved impracticable because of additional work required for the Department's London studies and the need to maintain continuity in the model's development programme. We are, however, taking steps to involve other consultants in our use of the model.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Vagrancy

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment he has made of the annual cost to public funds of the time expended by court officials, the Crown Prosecution Service and police officers, in the metropolitan police area, in the arrest, detention and prosecution of young people under section 3 of the Vagrancy Act 1824.

The Attorney-General: None. This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost to the taxpayer.

Hosni E. Forhat

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has received regarding the implications for administrative routines within the Law Officers' Department of the case of Hosni E. Forhat.

The Attorney-General: None.

Category A Prisoners

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Attorney-General what policy is adopted by his Department as to the location of trials of category A prisoners in relation to the original hearings and holding prison; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Section 7 of the Magistrates Courts Act 1980 requires the magistrates' court to have regard to the convenience of the defence, the prosecution and the witnesses, expediting of the trial and to any directions given by or on behalf of the Lord Chief Justice with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor. The directions governing the committal of cases for trial to particular Crown court centres are made by the Lord Chief Justice and may, from time to time, be altered in detail on his behalf by presiding judges; and each petty sessional division will normally commit to a particular Crown court centre in accordance with those directions.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Old Age Programmes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report a list showing expenditure on programmes for old age as a proportion of gross domestic product at market prices, for European Community member states, for each year since 1983, excluding expenditure on support for people living in residential and nursing homes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 14 April at columns 741-42. I regret that further information as requested by my hon. Friend is not available.

Widows

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many women who were in receipt of widowed mothers allowance before September 1988 would have received a full widow's pension if the qualifying age had not been raised by five years;

(2) how many widows suffered a lowering of their income as a result of the qualifying age for the widow's pension being raised by five years in September 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Entitlement to widowed mother's allowance and widow's pension changed on 11 April 1988. All women who were in receipt of widowed mother's allowance before then will be entitled to widow's pension on the age bands that existed before the reform changes were made. The increase, by five years, of the age bands will have no effect on these women. Women widowed after 11 April will be entitled to widow's pension based on the post reforms age bands; the numbers affected between 11 April and September 1988 cannot be determined accurately. However it is estimated that some 15,000 newly widowed women will have no title or a reduced title to benefit in the first year.

Income Support

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children were in families on income support broken down into England, Scotland and Wales in 1988-89.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest estimates are:

	Numbers
England	1,830,000
Scotland	236,000
Wales	129,000

NATIONAL FINANCE

Premium Bonds

Mr. David Steel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the proposal to raise the lowest denomination of premium bond which can be purchased to £100.

Mr. Lawson: The increase is designed to secure administrative savings, following a regular review of the terms of all National Savings products. Sales of less than £100 represent only 12 per cent. of the total value of purchases but incur a disproportionate share of costs. The average purchase is now over £150. Parents, guardians or grandparents will still be able to make minimum purchases of £10 on behalf of children under 16.

Finance Bill (Notes on Clauses)

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place copies of notes on all clauses of the Finance Bill in the Library.

Mr. Major: Yes. Notes on clauses to be taken in Committee of the whole House have already been deposited in the House Library and those to be taken in Standing Committee will be deposited shortly.

Value Added Tax

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will zero rate for value added tax purposes taxi card journeys.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 2 May 1989]: No. Under article 28 of the sixth EC VAT directive, the United Kingdom is not permitted to enlarge the scope of the zero rates in force on 31 December 1975.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Incentive Allowances)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will publish the estimates for school years 1988-89 and 1989-90 mentioned in his answer to the hon. Member for Bridgend of 20 April, Official Report, columns 269-70; what evidence is available to his Department in relation to the accuracy of that estimate for school year 1988-89; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what account he took of the evidence in appendix B of Cm. 625, concerning the numbers of allowances being paid in September 1988, in preparing the estimates for school years 1988-89 and 1989-90 mentioned in his answer to the hon. Member on 20 April, columns 269-70; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The estimated numbers of incentive allowances in ordinary schools in September 1988 and September 1989 were set out in circular 3/88. They formed the basis for the table submitted in evidence to the Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions in October 1988 and reproduced in my reply to the hon. Member on 20 April 1989, at columns 269-70. The figures are as follows:

	September 1988	September 1989
A	43,000	61,000
B	59,600	50,400
C	9,300	18,700
D	27,000	25,500
E	8,000	9,500
TOTAL	146,900	165,100

The evidence reproduced in appendix B of Cm. 625 was subsequently made available to the committee by the local authorities' conditions of service advisory board (LACSAB). The data suggest that the total number of incentive allowances awarded in the 1988-89 academic year broadly reflected the number assumed for that year in circular 3/88. No further information is at present available.

Geography

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to set up a working group to recommend attainment targets and programmes of study for geography within the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I are today establishing a working group for geography. The group will advise on attainment targets and programmes of study for geography within the national curriculum in England and Wales.

I have sent supplementary guidance to the group's chairman, a copy of which I have placed in the Library. We are grateful to Sir Leslie Fielding, the vice-chancellor of Sussex university, for agreeing to take the chair of the group. The vice-chairman will be Professor David Thomas, pro-vice chancellor and professor of geography at the university of Birmingham. Other members of the group are:

Mrs. Kay Edwards—Head of Geography, Penglais Comprehensive School, Aberystwyth

Mr. Richard Lethbridge—Former chairman, Tower Steel (Holdings) plc, now a branch secretary of the Country Landowners' Association

Mrs. Wendy Morgan—Recently retired headmistress of Elmsett Primary School, Suffolk

Dr. Keith Paterson—Senior Lecturer in Geography, Liverpool Institute of Higher Education

Mrs. Eleanor Rawling—National Co-ordinator, Geography Schools and Industry Project

Mr. Michael Storm—Staff Inspector for Geography and Environmental Studies, Inner London Education Authority

Mrs. Rachel Thomas—Member of the Countryside Commission and Exmoor National Park Committee

Mr. Rex Walford—Lecturer in Geography and Education, University of Cambridge

Further appointments may be announced in due course.

The group will begin work at once. I have asked for interim advice by 31 October 1989 and final advice by 30 April 1990. This will enable attainment targets and programmes of study for geography to begin to be introduced in schools from the autumn of 1991.

The terms of reference are as follows:

NATIONAL CURRICULUM GEOGRAPHY WORKING GROUP TERMS OF REFERENCE

Background

1. The Education Reform Act 1988 provides for the establishment of a National Curriculum of core and other foundation subjects for pupils of compulsory school age in England and Wales. The Act empowers the Secretary of State to specify, as he considers appropriate for each foundation subject, including geography, that there should be clear objectives—attainment targets—for the knowledge, skills and understanding which pupils of different abilities and maturities should be expected to have acquired by the end of the academic year in which they reach the ages of 7, 11, 14 and 16; and to promote them, programmes of study describing the content, skills and processes which need to be covered during each key stage of compulsory education. Taken together, the attainment targets and programmes of study will provide the basis for assessing a pupil's performance, in relation both to expected attainment and to the next steps needed for the pupil's development.

2. Both the objectives (attainment targets divided into up to 10 levels of attainment) and the means of achieving them (programmes of study) should leave scope for teachers to use their professional talents and skills to develop their own schemes of work, within a statutory framework which is known to all. It is the task of the Geography Working Group to advise on that framework for geography.

The Task

3. The Working Group is asked to submit an interim report to the Secretaries of State by 31 October 1989 outlining and, as far as possible, exemplifying:

(i) the contribution which geography should make to the overall school curriculum and how that will inform the Group's thinking about attainment targets and programmes of study;

(ii) its provisional thinking about the knowledge, skills and understanding which pupils of different abilities and maturities should be expected to have attained and be able to demonstrate by reference to defined levels of attainment, at key ages; and the profile components into which attainment targets should be grouped; and

(iii) its thinking about the programmes of study which would be consistent with the attainment targets provisionally identified.

4. By 30 April 1990 the Working Group is to submit a final report to the Secretaries of State setting out and justifying its final recommendations on attainment targets and the programmes of study for geography.

Approach

5. In carrying out its task the Group should consult informally and selectively with relevant interests and have regard to the statutory Orders on mathematics, science and English and to the work of the other subject groups—design and technology and history. Additionally, the Group should take account of:

(i) the broad framework for assessment and testing announced by the Government on 7 June 1988 and subsequent development of it in the light of advice from the School Examinations and Assessment Council;

(ii) the contributions which geography can make to learning about other subjects and cross-curricular themes including, in particular, environmental education, and which they in turn can make to learning in geography;

(iii) best practice and the results of any relevant research and development; and

(iv) the issues covered in the supplementary guidance to the Group's Chairman.

Assessment

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has received advice from the School Examinations and Assessment Council about assessing and reporting achievement in the light of national curriculum requirements.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I received a letter from the chairman of SEAC, Mr. Philip Halsey, on 28 April conveying the council's interim views on the future evolution of assessment and reporting at age 16 to which I replied on 4 May. Copies of the exchange of correspondence have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Education Support Grant

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish his proposals for the 1990-91 ESG programme.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I have today written to the local authority associations proposing a programme to support expenditure of £140 million in 1990-91. A total of £50 million of this will be expenditure on new activities or extensions, and the remainder will represent continuing support for activities begun in 1989-90 or earlier years.

My proposals are set out in full in the following table.

My priority in drawing up the programme has again been to continue support for the implementation of the Education Reform Act. The programme that I am proposing expands the valuable work begun in 1989-90 to help LEA with the introduction of local management of schools and of the national curriculum. It also offers LEAs valuable support in other areas such as health education and provision for difficult pupils.

I am proposing to increase the resources available for local management of schools, in particular for the purchase of management and curriculum information systems. Additional money will also be made available for the training of school and college governors, and I am proposing extra support for the core and other foundation subjects of the national curriculum.

Following the report by the committee of inquiry into discipline in schools, my proposals also include £2·5 million expenditure to help LEAs with the development of support services for the most difficult pupils, and a similar sum for work to improve school attendance. £2 million will be available for measures to help combat vandalism and arson.

The ESG to help combat the misuse of drugs has produced some very valuable work, and I now propose to extend its scope to take in other aspects of preventive health education, including alcohol abuse. I am proposing £2 million expenditure on projects to improve teacher recruitment.

I am also proposing to provide further funding for IT in schools and computerised management information systems for FE colleges.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Risley Remand Centre

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost of damage at Risley remand centre following the disturbances over the bank holiday weekend; how the remedial work will be financed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are now establishing the extent of the damage caused by disturbances at HM remand centre, Risley and will then assess what repairs are justified in view of the imminent redevelopment of this establishment, what they will cost and how they should be paid for.

Prison Quarters, Wayland

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why a four-bedroomed prison quarter at Wayland prison with a historic cost of £55,942 in 1984 was given a valuation of £40,500 in 1987; and if he will urgently review his Department's procedures for making such evaluations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prison quarters at Wayland were built at the same time as the prison. Building was completed by the Property Services Agency in 1984. The valuation in 1987 was made by the district valuer of the Department of Inland Revenue to enable the Home Office to calculate a sale price, after allowing for any discount under the department's discount sale scheme. The rules of that scheme stipulate that sales should not take place at less than the cost of providing the quarter, including the cost of the land, site development works and any administration costs (the historic cost). The Property Services Agency provides details of the historic cost and this has to be ascertained from the total contract price for building the prison establishment and any ancillary items such as quarters for staff. We have already agreed that where a current valuation is less than the historic cost, an offer of sale at the valuation price can be made. Further urgent consideration is being given to whether there is scope to make any further concession in offering properties for sale where the historic cost is an impediment to granting the normal discount.

Mr. Osborne Rutherford

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why Mr. Osborne Rutherford, prisoner No. C42357, Her Majesty's prison Wandsworth was kept without clothes in a strong box from 9 February to 23 February; and which doctor sanctioned his detention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 9 February, whilst Mr. Rutherford was at Parkhurst prison, he was placed in a special cell on the authority of the governor in charge under prison rule 45 which empowers the temporary confinement in a special cell of a refractory or violent prisoner. The decision was taken because of Mr. Rutherford's threatening behaviour towards staff.

In accordance with standard procedures, the medical officer was advised of the decision and indicated that there were no medical grounds why Mr. Rutherford should not be so confined. Subsequently, Mr. Rutherford engaged in a dirty protest and it was considered necessary to continue to hold him in the special cell until 23 February. The requirements in respect of the use of a special cell were followed during this period. After the initial 24 hours, the need for continued confinement was authorised periodically by members of the board of visitors who visited Mr. Rutherford. Mr. Rutherford was also visited regularly by a governor and by a medical officer.

Although Mr. Rutherford's normal prison clothing was removed, he was provided with a suit of protective clothing to wear whilst in the special cell.

Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped Prisoners

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent to which mentally ill and mentally handicapped people are in prison as a result of under-provision of community care facilities.

Mr. Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to earlier replies given to questions from the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 20 March at columns 405-7. These gave details of studies at present taking place on the profile of mentally disordered offenders in the prison system and on the use made by the courts of hospital and restriction orders when sentencing mentally disordered offenders. When a court considers that an offender needs psychiatric treatment but not to be detained in a hospital, it may make a probation order with a requirement that the probationer undergoes psychiatric treatment, or it may make a guardianship order, which places the offender under the authority of a local authority social services department or approved person. The guardian may then require the patient to live at a specified place and attend a place for treatment. The availability of care facilities in the local community is only one of a range of factors which courts have to consider when deciding on the most suitable sentence for such an offender.

Prisoners (Police Cells)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of prisoners held in police cells at the most recent available date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Sixty six, on 28 April.

Rapists

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what treatment is available within prison for mentally disordered inmates serving sentences for rape; and what steps are taken to seek to prevent such men reoffending when they leave prison.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Sex offenders would normally be identified early in the prison reception process as requiring psychiatric assessment. Such assessment may be carried out by a suitably qualified prison medical officer or by a visiting specialist. Not all sex offenders are found to be grossly disturbed or in need of treatment whether from doctors, psychiatrists or psychologists. Where the diagnosis does suggest that the inmate's behaviour was the result of an underlying mental illness, specific treatment would be provided for that illness. If the behaviour was secondary to an aspect of personality disorder, the inmate might be offered psychotherapy, group therapy, behaviour therapy or a combination of these. Some prisoners are transferred to Grendon prison where the entire regime is that of a therapeutic community for such help.

The prison medical and probation services would be concerned in making arrangements for the continuing care, medical or other, of such inmates on release. The appropriate police force would be notified.

Prison Medical Officers

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the working group, chaired by the president of the Royal College of Physicians, set up to advise the director of prison medical services on qualifications and training for prison medical officers, to complete its work; and if he will place a copy of its report in the Library.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The report was completed recently and submitted by the president of the Royal College of Physicians to the chief medical officer. At this early stage there are no plans for its release.

Crowd Pressure (Deaths)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list in the Official Report the total deaths reported in the decades 1959 to 1968, 1969 to 1978 and 1979 to 1988, inclusive, resulting from crowd pressures or public disorder in the following circumstances (a) political demonstrations, (b) queueing for places of entertainment, other than sports meetings, (c) queueing for or occurring at sports meetings, other than football matches and (d) queueing for public transport.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

The exact information requested is not available.

Prior to 1979, the international classification of diseases (ICD) did not allow for sufficiently detailed information of this nature; the current (ninth) revision includes the code E917.1:

"Striking against or struck accidentally by objects or persons, caused by a crowd, by collective fear or panic."

In the period 1979-87 inclusive there were three deaths where this code was assigned as the underlying cause of death, but there is insufficient information on the death certificate to allocate them to any of the categories requested.

HEALTH

Ambulances

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of ambulances for each regional health authority.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the table.

Ambulance Services
Total number of ambulance service vehicles used to transport patients

The following types of vehicles have been included in the above figures:
2—trolley emergency.
2—trolley dual purpose.
Sitting case seats only (under 14).
Sitting case seats stretcher capacity.
Sitting case seats + lift mechanism.
Car (with or without stretcher capacity).
Bus—14 or more seats with or without stretcher or wheelchair capacity.

Defibrillators

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the number of ambulances for each region which carry defibrillators.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected centrally but I understand that as at March 1989, the numbers were as follows:

	Number
Northern	65
Yorkshire	75
Trent	125
East Anglian	64
North West Thames	45
North East Thames	51
South East Thames	76
South West Thames	[1]231
Wessex	147
Oxford	103
South Western	149
West Midland	104
Mersey	51
North Western	129

[1] Includes London Ambulance Service.

Clinical Effectiveness

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will consider investing resources in a major database to collect information on patient demographics, patient diagnosis, clinical findings and clinical treatment to facilitate the creation of routine monitoring systems in order to improve clinical practice and resource allocation in the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: Following implementation of the Körner recommendations in April 1987, each region now provides quarterly a set of data about every patient using a hospital bed, to a national database at the OPCS. These data include age, diagnosis and operative procedures. More detailed clinical information to assist doctors and others in their management of patient care is now being collected locally as part of the resource management initiative.

Computer Systems

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the cost of providing computer systems to (a) hospitals and (b) general practitioners to enable them to implement the National Health Service White Paper proposals will be found from additional Treasury funding or whether it will be deducted from current National Health Service provision.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have made it clear that the cost of implementing the White Paper proposals will not be met at the expense of plans for patient care.

Prescriptions

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of National Health Service prescriptions are written for (a) people aged over 65 years and (b) the chronic sick.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have information in the form requested. However, of all prescriptions dispensed in 1988, 41·2 per cent. were dispensed to people over pensionable age (men aged over 65 and women over 60).

Self-governing Hospitals

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the mechanism proposed under the National Health Service White Paper provisions to enable hospitals to become self-governing; and how a majority view of those working in the hospitals will be obtained.

Mr. Mellor: The process for establishing an NHS hospital trust will be as simple and flexible as possible. The chief executive of the NHS management board wrote to all regional general managers on 14 March about the preparation of initial expressions of interest; a copy of that letter (reference: EL(89)MB/58) has been placed in the Library of the House. Further guidance will be provided in due course. Staff will be given opportunities to express views on applications; the precise arrangements for this will be determined locally.

NHS Reform

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many phone calls have been received from doctors by those manning the contact numbers set out in working papers 3 and 4 of the National Health Service White Paper; and whether at any time the contact numbers have had to be suspended.

Mr. Mellor: Telephone contact points were not in fact supplied in the NHS review working papers, as it was envisaged that comments would be submitted in writing to the official addresses which were provided. A number of telephone calls from doctors have nevertheless been received routinely by the Department on these subjects but we hold no record of the total.

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many letters his Department has received from general practitioners expressing general support for the National Health Service White Paper proposals; and how many he has received expressing opposition to the proposals.

Mr. Mellor: We have received some 1,300 representations from general practitioners. Many have questions, many support all or some of the proposals, some only refer to specific aspects. It is not possible to distinguish the letters in the way my hon. Friend suggests.

Staff Shortages

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what records are kept of the number of occasions that anaesthetic services have been curtailed because of staff shortages; and what the number of such curtailments was.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally.

Eye Tests

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence is available to him on whether a two-tier system of eye tests would be detrimental to a patient's sight; and whether there are any specific conditions which cannot be detected by test other than the full eye test.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I must ask my hon. Friend to await my consideration of the results of the present consultations on regulations governing sight test.

Advertising Campaigns

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the expenditure by Government and Government-funded health education agencies on mass media advertising campaigns on the following issues: (a) smoking, (b) alcohol, (c) drugs, (d) dental health, (e) AIDs, (f) family planning, (g) immunisation, (h) coronary heart disease, (i) the "Look After Your Heart" campaign, and (j) others, for each year 1978-79 to 1987-88;

(2) what was the total expenditure by his Department and Government-funded health education agencies on mass media advertising campaigns on health-related issues in each financial year since 1978-79 to 1987-88;

(3) what is the total expenditure from 1979 to date by Government and Government-funded health education agencies on mass media advertising for each of the following health campaigns (a) smoking, (b) alcohol, (c) drugs, (d) AIDs, (e) dental health, (f) immunisation, (g) family planning, (h) coronary heart disease and (i) others.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 April 1989]: The total expenditure by the Department on mass media advertising is as follows:

1978-79	n/a
1979-80	337
1980-81	589
1981-82	825
1982-83	676
1983-84	1,167
1984-85	1,412
1985-86	3,259

EMPLOYMENT

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to the percentage of the work force of the United Kingdom, United States of America, France, Germany and Japan employed in the manufacturing industry.

Mr. Lee: The latest available information on common international definitions is as follows:

Manufacturing employment as a percentage of total civilian employment (1986)

	Percentages
United Kingdom	22·5
United States	19·1
France	22·6
Germany	32·2
Japan	24·7

PRIME MINISTER

French Revolution

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will send a congratulatory communication to the President of the French Republic on the 200th anniversary of the French revolution.

The Prime Minister: I hope to be able to convey an appropriate message in person.

Sultan of Brunei

Mr. Gould: To ask the Prime Minister when she last met the Sultan of Brunei; and what was discussed.

The Prime Minister: I last met the Sultan of Brunei on 27 April. Our discussions covered a number of bilateral and international issues.

Government Expenditure

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Prime Minister what is Government expenditure per head in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland.

The Prime Minister: The following table shows identifiable public expenditure per head for each of the four countries of the United Kingdom in 1987-88, the latest year for which information is available:

	£ per head
England	2,063
Wales	2,370
Scotland	2,676
Northern Ireland	3,097

The term "identifiable expenditure" refers to expenditure that can be identified from official records as having been incurred in a particular country. Total identifiable expenditure accounts for just over 80 per cent. of total departmental public expenditure; it excludes expenditure on defence, overseas aid and other overseas services which are deemed to have been incurred on behalf of the United Kingdom as a whole. It also excludes Government net lending to, and the market and overseas borrowing of, the public corporations (including nationalised industries), due to the difficulty of allocating this finance to expenditure in a particular country.

SCOTLAND

Glasgow (East End)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the adequacy of the new management structure in the east end of Glasgow which was set up following the Government's ending of the GEAR project in March 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: These successor arrangements are primarily the responsibility of Glasgow district council and Strathclyde regional council and are supported by the Scottish Development Agency and the private sector. I am not aware of any criticism of the arrangements.

Council House Sales

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to extend the right-to-buy discount; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no plans at present to make changes to the current right to buy arrangements, although we are continually monitoring the effect of our policies to determine whether any further measures are necessary to stimulate diversification of ownership.

The sustained level of interest from public sector tenants seeking to purchase their homes is evidence of the continuing success of the Government's right-to-buy policy.

ENVIRONMENT

Waste Management

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the waste disposal authorities in England have now deposited waste management plans with his Department, pursuant to the Control of Pollution Act 1974.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 2 February 1989 at columns 350-52. Since then we have received no more completed waste disposal plans, although Hampshire and Lincolnshire county councils have sent us preliminary draft plans.

My noble Friend the Minister of State, Department of the Environment wrote to waste disposal authorities who had not yet submitted plans again on 18 April.

Ocean Incineration

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given those companies currently using ocean incineration concerning waste reduction.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials have advised companies who currently hold licences for incineration of waste at sea of the need to reduce quantities of such wastes in the light of the recommendations of the North sea conference to end the dumping of polluting materials in the North sea at the earliest practical date. HM inspectorate of pollution has held discussions with the companies and further discussions are proposed.

Football Membership Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes that individuals will be able to be registered as supporters of more than one football club under the proposed membership scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: It will be for the football membership authority to draw up the details of the scheme and submit proposals to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The report of the working party which I chaired recommended that members of the scheme should have only one card but that this should be valid for any designated match including the 92 Football League clubs.

Spaying

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take urgent steps to introduce a policy of education concerning the spaying of dogs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

This is not a matter for central Government. Those who wish advice on such matters can obtain it from one of the voluntary bodies concerned with the welfare of dogs.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a specific grant allocation to assist people with the cost of having their animals spayed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has no powers to make grants for these purposes.

Football Spectators

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the current maximum spectator capacity for each of the 92 Football League clubs.

Mr. Moynihan: The following figures are the most up to date available to the Football League, though I understand that they may not be precisely accurate in every case.

Pollution (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for the county of South Yorkshire for each of the last four years, the number of pollution incidents caused by (a) silage liquor, (b) farmyard slurry and (c) other pollutants; and what action was taken in each case.

Mr. Moynihan: I understand from the Yorkshire water authority that the numbers of water pollution incidents in South Yorkshire in each of the last four years, and the action taken are as follows:

Numbers of water pollution incidents in South Yorkshire

Year	Cause of pollution: Silage	Slurry	All Other Sources	Number of prosecutions
1985	20	10	13	12
1986	2	15	9	12
1987	16	24	8	7
1988	24	11	40	7

Tree Planting

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what impact on the environment the 1988 Budget decision to end schedule D reliefs on tree planting had; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The changes to the tax and grant arrangements made last year were designed to provide a more widely acceptable system of support for private forestry. The key aims of the new woodland grant include enhancing the landscape, creating new wildlife habitats and encouraging the multipurpose management of woodlands. The increased importance of grants has strengthened the Forestry Commission's procedures as a means of controlling the environmental impact of forestry and ensuring that the right trees are planted in the right places. The effects of the changes will be carefully monitored during the transitional period, but it is too early to make a detailed assessment as yet.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what papers will be presented on behalf of his Department; and which departmental officials will be present, at the fifth summer school on radioactive waste.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No paper is to be presented on behalf of the Department. An inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will be present to deliver a paper in a personal capacity.

Rating Reform

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements are in hand to ensure adequate information flows between community charge registration officers and certification officers in educational establishments in London; and what representations on this matter he has received from the Association of London Authorities, London Boroughs Association and bodies representing educational institutions.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 4 May 1989]: Discussions are taking place, organised by my Department, between all the local authority associations and bodies representing educational institutions, on the practical aspects of registering students for the community charge. It is hoped to conclude these discussions in the near future and to issue a practice note giving advice to all parties on these matters.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to issue guidance to general practitioners on the exemptions from community charge for severely mentally impaired persons; and what discussions his Department has had with the British Medical Association on this matter.

Mr. Nicholas Ridley [holding answer 4 May 1989]: This matter is being handled on my behalf by my right hon. and learned Friend, the Secretary of State for Health, whose officials are in discussion with the general medical services committee of the British Medical Association. I understand that it is hoped to conclude the discussions shortly and to issue guidance to general practitioners as soon as possible afterwards.

Planning Permissions (Revocation)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the addresses of sites where his Department has reimbursed a local planning authority as a result of a revocation of planning permission.

Mr. Howard: With the exception of the limited circumstances set out in section 167 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, there is no provision for the Secretary of state to reimburse to local planning authorities the compensation payable when planning permission is revoked. Section 167 relates only to cases where, if planning permission had originally been refused, the Secretary of State would have been liable to pay compensation under part VII of the Act. There have been five such cases since 1979.

Business Rate

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will make further information available on the proposed reform of the business rate.

Mr. Gummer: My Department has today published a free booklet called "Time for Change: the new Business Rate". This explains the changeover to the new uniform business rate which will take place in April 1990, the up-to-date revaluation, and the Government's proposals for transitional arrangements, including those to help small businesses.

The booklet is being distributed widely to industrial and commercial organisations and others with an interest in business matters. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Council House Sales

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many dwellings each local authority has sold under the right to buy legislation, or voluntarily, since April 1979.

Mr. Trippier: I have placed in the Library a table giving available information up to December 1988. It shows year-by-year information since 1984-85 together with cumulative figures since April 1979.

Conservation Areas (Trees)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, what particulars he has specified in relation to the provision of section 61(A)(7) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 concerning the need for district councils to keep a register of trees in conservation areas.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 27 April 1989 c. 657]: Section 61(A)(7) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 places a duty on district and London borough councils to compile and keep available for inspection a register of notices served on the council of intention to carry out work on trees in conservation areas, where such trees are not already protected by tree preservation orders or otherwise exempt. It also empowers the Secretary of State to determine what particulars should be included in such registers. The following matters were specified for this purpose in DOE circular 36/78:

(a) the address of the land on which the tree stands and sufficient information to identify the tree;
(b) details of the work proposed;
(c) the date of the notice and who served it;
(d) the decision of the authority in respect of the tree (when made), the date of any decision and the name of the authority; and
(e) an index for tracing entries.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated number of settlers from Greece who are now living in the southern part of Cyprus and who have been granted Cyprus passports since 31 December 1963.

Mrs. Chalker: According to the Republic of Cyprus statistical abstract for 1985 and 1986, the number of "immigrants" from Greece (whose status is not further defined) in the period 1981-86 was 24. We have no statistics for the rest of the period covered by my hon. Friend's question.

House of Fraser

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department received any inquiries from Kleinwort Benson about the history of the Al-Fayed brothers in the course of the takeover of the House of Fraser.

Mr. Eggar: While the prosecution authorities are considering the report of the inspectors appointed on 9 April 1987 by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry under section 432 of the Companies Act 1985 to investigate the affairs of the House of Fraser Holdings plc, it would not be appropriate for me to comment.

South Africa

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will initiate collective action by European Community Governments against South Africa for its use of its embassies for illegal actions in host countries.

Mrs. Chalker: We expect all countries to abide by their obligations under the Vienna convention especially "to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving state".

There are no plans for collective EC action against South Africa.

We are carefully examining the implications of the events that led up to the arrests in Paris on 21 April.

North Atlantic Assembly

Sir Geoffrey Johnson Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have been made in the composition of the United Kingdom parliamentary delegation to the North Atlantic Assembly.

Mr. Waldegrave: The hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) has replaced the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed (Mr. Beith) as a member of the delegation.

United Kingdom Embassies

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries presently do not have a United Kingdom embassy; what is the reason for the absence; and what steps are being taken to establish an embassy in each case.

Mrs. Chalker [pursuant to the reply, 27 April 1989 c. 595]: Of those territories recognised by the United Kingdom as independent sovereign states, the United Kingdom does not have an embassy, a high commission, or a consulate-general accredited to the following:

Albania
Argentina
Bhutan
Cambodia
Iran
Libya
Syria

The United Kingdom does not have diplomatic relations with Albania or Cambodia.

The United Kingdom does not have diplomatic relations with the Kingdom of Bhutan but maintains friendly contacts and conducts official business with its embassy in New Delhi.

Iran broke diplomatic relations with the United Kingdom in March this year. British interests are represented by the Swedish embassy in Tehran, where there are no United Kingdom staff.

There are British interest sections with United Kingdom staff in the embassies of protecting powers in Argentina, Libya and Syria.

The staff of the British embassy in Afghanistan have been withdrawn for security reasons.

There are no plans at present to establish additional representative offices.

DEFENCE

Volunteer Gliding Schools

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of volunteer gliding schools which at present have no airfield in the part of the United Kingdom which they were established to serve.

Mr. Neubert: Two volunteer gliding schools established to serve the north-east and south coast of England are currently without an airfield.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he can give details of the areas of the United Kingdom which are without a volunteer gliding school; and what proposals his Department has to establish volunteer gliding schools in these areas.

Mr. Neubert: The north-east, north-west, and south coast of England are poorly served by volunteer gliding schools. We are currently examining the possibility of acquiring an ex-RAF site in the north-east.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many volunteer gliding schools are operational; and how many are currently in suspense.

Mr. Neubert: Twenty-eight are operational and two are in suspense.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of officers and instructors currently on the strength of volunteer gliding schools.

Mr. Neubert: Volunteer gliding schools currently have a strength of 235 officers and 233 civilian gliding instructors.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give details of the number of Volunteer Reserve officers on the staff of volunteer gliding schools who have over 25 years' service.

Mr. Neubert: Seven.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he can give details of the type of motor glider which has been selected to replace the Venture glider at volunteer gliding schools.

Mr. Neubert: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given to him by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement on 10 January at column 533.

Z-berths

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of a Z-berth; if Z-berths have permanent safety precautions against radiological hazards; and if he will publish in the Official Report the locations of all the Z-berths in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A Z-berth is a berth designated for occasional operational or recreational visits by nuclear-powered warships. Its safety arrangements will include a public safety scheme prepared after discussion with the local authorities and civil emergency services, which will provide for a Royal Naval incident commander and a naval emergency monitoring team in the area to stand by throughout any such visit to respond to an emergency. The monitoring team has access to a supply of potassium iodate tablets, and carries out monitoring during the visit.

The United Kingdom Z-berths are at Barrow-in-Furness, Barry, Brodick bay, Campbeltown, Cardiff, Coulport and Loch Long, Devonport and Plymouth Sound, Faslane, the Firth of Forth, Glen Mallan, Lamlash bay, Lerwick and the Shetland isles, Liverpool, Loch Ewe, Loch Fyne, Loch Goil, Loch Striven, Portland, Portree, Portsmouth, Raasay (Broadford bay), Rosyth, Rothesay, Southampton, Spithead, Thurso bay and Torbay.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many meetings there have been between his Department and local and port authorities concerning the possible locating of a Z-berth at Tilbury; when a decision is expected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) on 9 March 1989 at column 677, my officials have had preliminary discussions with port and local authorities about visits to Tilbury by Royal Navy ships, including nuclear-powered submarines. This remains the position. It would be premature to anticipate the outcome of these discussions at this stage.

Naval Emergency Monitoring Organisation

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the naval emergency monitoring organisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The naval emergency monitoring organisation is responsible within the Royal Navy for radioactive monitoring and hazard evaluation, and for advice on radiation levels in the event of an accident involving nuclear weapons or nuclear reactors.

X-berths

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of an X-berth; if X-berths have permanent safety precautions against radiological hazards; and if he will publish in the Official Report the locations of all the X-berths in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: An X-berth is a berth designated for frequent and regular use by nuclear-powered warships, or a berth in a dockyard or naval base which is suitable for the building, refit, repair or maintenance of nuclear-powered warships. All X-berths have as an integral part of their safety arrangements a permanent health physics department, a local emergency monitoring organisation and a local safety plan prepared under the auspices of a local liaison committee. The United Kingdom X-berths are at Barrow-in-Furness, Devonport, Faslane and Rosyth.

Community Charge

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's policy concerning provision of information about service personnel whose home addresses are in Scotland, but who are serving elsewhere, to poll tax registration officers in Scotland.

Mr. Neubert: It is not my Department's policy to provide information to community charge registration officers (CCROs) in Scotland other than the names and addresses of personnel serving in the areas for which the CCRO is responsible.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what provision has been made to compensate service personnel who are affected by the imposition of the poll tax in Scotland for the fact that they have to meet this cost while their colleagues from other parts of the United Kingdom do not.

Mr. Neubert: Service personnel in Scotland who pay service accommodation charges are no longer required to pay the rates element of such charges, and can offset this amount against their community charge liability. Personnel serving in Scotland who are currently not paying these charges could be in a worse financial position in the interim year to 31 March 1990, than they would be when the community charge applies in England and Wales. In such circumstances I am prepared to consider, exceptionally, claims for some financial compensation.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide advice to service personnel and to Scottish poll tax registration officers concerning the fact that personnel who are serving outwith Scotland, notwithstanding the fact that their home address is in Scotland, are not liable to register for the poll tax in Scotland.

Mr. Neubert: Comprehensive guidance about the liability of service personnel for the community charge has been agreed with community charge registration officers and issued to service personnel. It is based on the general assumption that the sole or main residence of service personnel is where they live in respect of their work, although individuals may seek alternative treatment if their circumstances justify it.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the security implications of the publication of poll tax registers which show the Northern Ireland addresses of personnel who are serving in Northern Ireland, but who may be liable to pay the poll tax in respect of home addresses in Scotland.

Mr. Neubert: In such circumstances, community charge registers will include only the address in Scotland in respect of which community charge liability arises, and not the temporary address in Northern Ireland. All entries for service personnel will be in the same style as those for civilians and will not include their rank.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Rates

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average rate of increase in (a) the non-domestic regional rate and (b) the domestic regional rate.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The regional rate for 1989-90, as published in the Rates (Regional rate) Order (Northern Ireland) 1989, is 138·07p, an increase of 12·63 per cent. on last year's rate of 122·59p. This rate applies unadjusted to all non domestic ratepayers.

Domestic ratepayers have benefited, for many years, from an allowance of 12p in the pound in the form of a domestic rate aid grant. This has the effect of reducing the charge on them this year to 126·07p, an increase of 14 per cent. on last year's rate of 110·59p. Since the domestic rate is set at a level 12p lower than the regional rate, its percentage increase is calculated on a lower base and will, therefore, always be higher than the percentage rise in the regional rate.

ENERGY

DIDO Reactor Harwell

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what plans there are to install a secondary borated water shutdown system into the DIDO reactor at Harwell.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I understand that the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority are considering the installation of a borated water injection system for the DIDO reactor at Harwell. This would supplement the normal and emergency shutdown systems which the reactor already has.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Animal Health

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what animal health issues have been discussed by the Council of Ministers during the second half of 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The following issues have been discussed during this period:

the recognition of parts of the Community as officially free from classical swine fever;

the recognition of parts of Spain as free from African swine fever;

the socio-economic implications of the use of antibiotics and Bovine Somatrophin in dairy production;
and the combating of Aujeszky's Disease.

Meat and Bone Meal

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has had discussions with other European Economic Community member states about the export of meat and bone meal from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information he has on European regulations concerning the incorporation of meat and bone meal in ruminant feedstuffs;

(2) what information he has on regulations governing the incorporation of meat and bone meal in animal feedstuffs in each individual European Community member state.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have no detailed information on legislation which applies in other member states but the incorporation of meat and bone meal into animal feedingstuffs is permitted in all member states. In the United Kingdom statutory controls prohibit the feeding of ruminants with ruminant protein and all meat and bone meal which is added to feedingstuffs is required to be salmonella free.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European quality standards apply to the production of meat and bone meal.

Mr. Donald Thompson: There are at present no European Community rules applying to the production of meat and bone meal.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has received representations from any other country concerning the quality of meat and bone meal exported from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: France, West Germany and Israel have requested additional certification to accompany meat and bone meal exported from the United Kingdom. For France, fresh arrangements have been agreed which are being used by exporters. Certification intended to meet Germany's need is currently being devised. Specific requirements made by Israel are being examined to establish whether suitable measures can be offered their authorities.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has issued any advice to countries which import meat and bone meal rendered in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the quantities of sheep carcases used by the United Kingdom rendering industry; and what proportion of those quantities are rendered into meat and bone meal.

Mr. Donald Thompson: An estimated 15·3 per cent. of material used by the rendering industry comes from sheep. Most of this is slaughterhouse waste, so only a small part would be carcases. The proportion of carcases rendered into meat and bone meal is not known.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the United Kingdom feedstuffs industry first started using meat and bone meal in dairy rations.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The date when such material was first used is not known but meat and bone meal have been included in feedstuffs for at least 40 years.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department has any new information on the destruction of the agent causing bovine spongiform encephalopathy by rendering.

Mr. Donald Thompson: No new information is yet available beyond that contained in the Southwood report.

Consultation

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, following the report of the National Consumer Council on food policy and the consumer, he intends to alter his Department's arrangements for making public responses to consultation exercises.

Mr. Ryder: I am pleased to announce that, following a recommendation by the National Consumer Council, we will, in future, arrange for a list of names and addresses of respondents to all formal consultation exercises in the food area to be made available to anyone on request. This will enable people to contact relevant organisations if they want to examine responses in detail. We will also consider issuing summaries of the responses, whenever we can.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 8 May 1989

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime (Greater London)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the trends in crime in Greater London during 1987 and 1988.

Mr. John Patten: Information is published in table 7 of Home Office statistical bulletin 7/89, a copy of which is in the Library. More detailed figures for each borough in the Metropolitan police district are also available in the Library. My right hon. Friend has also sent some further details of the figures for their local police force area to all right hon. and hon. Members for constituencies in England and Wales and placed copies of those further details in the Library.

DNA Testing

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further representations he has received regarding the use of DNA testing.

Mr. Renton: We continue to receive various representations from Members of Parliament and others concerning the use of DNA testing in immigration cases.

Drugs (International Co-operation)

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to strengthen international co-operation against drugs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are pursuing a wide range of initiatives to strengthen international co-operation. We are working to enable the United Kingdom to ratify the new United Nations Convention against the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances. We are negotiating bilateral agreements on the confiscation of drug traffickers' assets. Five such agreements have now been concluded and more are in the pipeline. We are holding a ministerial conference of the Council of Europe's drug co-operation group (the Pompidou Group), under my right hon. Friend's chairmanship, in London on 18-19 May, to discuss the threat posed by cocaine and "crack", confiscation of proceeds derived from illicit trafficking and the problems of AIDS and drug misuse.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions he has had with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis, concerning the police role in coping with traffic congestion in London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend has had no recent discussions with the commissioner on this subject but he has drawn to the commissioner's attention a number of points raised with him by hon. Members representing constituencies in London.

Exeter Prison

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Exeter prison was built; what was the originally intended maximum number of prisoners; what is the number on remand or serving custodial sentences there now; and for how many hours daily an inmate is confined to his cell.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's prison Exeter was opened in 1853 to accommodate about 280 inmates and the young offender remand centre there was added in 1964 to accommodate a further 53. At 28 April 1989 the numbers held compared with the certified normal accommodation were as follows:

	Numbers held	Certified normal accommodation
Exeter Prison
Adult Male	236 sentenced 12 convicted not sentenced 90 unconvicted	254
Female	Nil	3
	338	257
Exeter Remand Centre
Young Offender	11 sentenced 20 convicted not sentenced 30 unconvicted	53
	399	310

Inmates are confined to their cells for 8-19 hours a day; the average is 16 hours a day.

Jersey (Housing)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the laws governing housing in Jersey.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There have been three such cases during the last year.

Firefighters

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about changes he proposes to the pay and conditions of firefighters.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 3 May to the similar question from my hon. Friend the Member of Stafford (Mr. Cash) at column 113.

Police Drivers

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the training of drivers of fast response cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Police driver training has recently been reviewed by a working party set up by the Association of Chief Police Officers. I understand that the working party's report will be published within the next few weeks.

Immigration

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister of State expects to reply to the hon. Member for Stretford's letter of 7 February last regarding Mr. M. F. (Ref. EBO762).

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I wrote to the hon. Member on 28 April.

Street Lighting

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals for the introduction of a statutory obligation to provide adequate street lighting, as a measure to protect against mugging or rape, he is considering.

Mr. John Patten: There is widespread concern, which we share, about the level of violent crime. Improved street lighting may have a part to play in tackling this and other problems, and many local authorities have undertaken improved lighting schemes, a significant number of which have been funded through the Department of the Environment estate action programme. I await with interest the results of the major research study being carried out in Wandsworth on our behalf by Southampton university, assessing the impact of street lighting on crime and the fear of crime.

Summer Time

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement spelling out the differences in summer time by comparison with last year in consequence of the Summer Time Order, 1989; if the order stems from a decision of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Summer Time Order 1989 is necessary to set out the dates of the summer time period for the years 1990 to 1992 inclusive. It also gives effect to the Fifth Council Directive on summer time arrangements in the European Community which was formally adopted by the Council of Ministers in Brussels on 21 December 1988. The effect of the order is to continue the present summer time system for a further three years.

Police Vehicles

Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fatal accidents involving motor vehicles driven by police in the course of their duties have occurred from 1 January 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information about accidents involving police vehicles is collected and published annually by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary. Full information will, therefore, not be available until returns are submitted by individual forces to Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary after the end of the year. However, I am aware of nine specific accidents which have occurred since 1 March 1989 arising from police vehicle pursuits, or responses to emergency calls, which have resulted in a total of 12 fatalities.

Mr. Beaumont-Dark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any intention of issuing new guidelines in respect of pursuit by police vehicles; and if he has any plans to meet chief constables to discuss the matter.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Police driver training, including police pursuit management, has recently been reviewed by a working party set up by the Association of Chief Police Officers. I understand that its report will be published within the next few weeks. We shall consider it carefully when it is published.

Breath Tests

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library copies of the representations that he has received following his recent consultation about police powers to stop motorists and administer breath tests; and how many of those representations supported (a) consolidation of existing powers as no change, (b) unfettered discretion to administer breath tests and (c) spot checks by the police administered on a random basis.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following the reply given by my right hon. Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Derby, North (Mr. Knight) on 1 February, at column 252, we have received some 3,400 letters from individuals, letters from organisations and petitions on the subject of police powers to require roadside breath tests. Of these, approximately 3,000 express support for extended powers in the form of unfettered discretion, random breath testing or other forms. The remainder suggest that there should be no change to current powers. We shall consider these responses carefully, including whether they should be placed in the Library.

Sunday Trading

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether his proposed new working party on small shops and Sunday trading will include representatives of the National Chamber of Trade;

(2) if he will make a statement outlining the constitution and purpose of his proposed new working party on small shops and Sunday trading.

Mr. Renton: No working party has been established but I propose to hold a meeting on 24 May with representatives of the Shopping Hours Reform Council at its request and of the Association of District Councils to seek a way forward on shopping hours reform. Representatives of the National Chamber of Trade will not be present.

National Stadium

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations his Department has received concerning proposals to build a national stadium to improve the safety of sports spectators in the light of events at Hillsborough on 15 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: My Department has not received any representations about proposals to build a national studium. Responsibility for the safety and comfort of spectators rests with the individual sports ground operator or event organiser, who must comply with the terms and conditions of any safety certificate in force for the ground in question.

Hillsborough Disaster

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Yorkshire outlining the interviewing criteria and procedures to be used by West Yorkshire police in response to telephone calls and their investigations following the Hillsborough disaster on 15 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The interviewing critera and procedures are a matter for the investigating officers in consultation with Lord Justice Taylor. I understand that anyone who telephoned the police on the special telephone lines and who has relevant information will be interviewed by the investigating team.

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Yorkshire, as to on what basis and by whom the decision was taken to allow only one week for members of the public to contact West Yorkshire police, by special 'phone lines, after the Hillsborough disaster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The officer in charge of the police investigation team, in consultation with Lord Justice Taylor, decided to open the special telephone lines for three days initially. Owing to the heavy response on the first three days the lines were kept open for a further three days. The number of calls had lessened considerably by the sixth day and it was not thought necessary to keep the lines open any longer. The fact that the lines would close on the sixth day was widely publicised.

It remains open to anyone who believes that he or she has relevant information to contact the secretary to the inquiry at room 662, 50 Queen Anne's Gate, London SW1H 9AT.

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of West Yorkshire as to how many telephone calls have been received on the special telephone lines set up by West Yorkshire police, investigating events at Hillsborough on 15 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A total of 2,666 calls were received on the special telephone lines during the six-day period.

Offences (Leicestershire)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offences there were in Leicestershire in 1987 and 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Leicestershire, North-West (Mr. Ashby) on the 13 April at column 713.

Car Telephones

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been (a) charged with and (b) convicted of road traffic offences connected with the use of mobile car telephones.

Mr. John Patten: The available information relates to proceedings at magistrates courts for all offences of careless driving and so on and is published annually in "Offences relating to motor vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary tables" (table 5 of the issue for 1987, the latest available). Information is not collected centrally about the circumstances of these alleged offences.

Risley

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people currently at Risley have ever been in-patients at a psychiatric hospital or clinic.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Of the population on 5 May (322 male and 114 female prisoners) 37 male and 33 female prisoners have been in-patients at a psychiatric hosptial or clinic.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people currently at Risley were unable to give a permanent address when the order for their remand was made.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Current information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. A survey conducted in November 1988 indicated that 13 per cent. (40) of prisoners at Risley who had been remanded from Cheshire courts and 9 per cent. (46) of those from Lancashire courts had been remanded in custody because they had no permanent address or had an unsuitable address.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement concerning the level and source of funding of a new Gaelic-speaking broadcasting authority;

(2) what agreement has been reached between his Department, S4C, Scottish television companies and other interested parties concerning the use of money currently paid by Scottish ITV companies to S4C, to fund Gaelic television programming.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 5 May 1989]: Representations about the funding of Gaelic television programmes will be considered alongside the other comments which have been made in response to the Government's broadcasting White Paper.

Political Asylum

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of (a) the Soviet Union, (b) Hong Kong, (c) India, (d) Pakistan and (e) Bangladesh (i) the numbers of requests received annually since 1979 for political asylum from citizens of these countries and the number granted and (ii) the number of requests received annually since 1979 for residency from citizens of each of the countries and the number granted.

Mr. Renton [holding answer 27 April 1989]: Information on applications for, and on grants of refugee status in the United Kingdom in the years since 1979 to 1987, by nationality, is published in the annual Home Office statistical bulletins "Refugee Statistics, United Kingdom" (tables 5A-5F of issue 12/86, table 6 of issue 13/87 and table 7 of issue 16/88), copies of which are in the Library. Information for 1988 will be published in the summer of 1989.

Information on applications in the Indian sub-continent in 1979-87 for an entry clearance for settlement, and in 1985-87 for a certificate of entitlement to the right of abode, in the United Kingdom is given in tables 6, 9, 11 and 12 of "Control of Immigration Statistics, United Kingdom, 1987" (Cm. 415). The corresponding figures for the other years, and information on applications in Hong Kong in 1985-88 for an entry clearance for settlement, are given in the following tables 1 and 2. Information for earlier years for Hong Kong and similar information for the Soviet Union is not readily available.

Information on the total number of persons granted settlement in the United Kingdom in the years 1979 to 1987, by nationality, is published in table 22 of "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom 1987" (Cm. 415). The number of persons accepted in 1988 for the nationalities requested is given in the following table 3.

Assault and Battery

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions he has issued to police authorities on the recording in local crime statistics of offences committed under section 39 of the Ciminal Justice Act 1988.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 3 May 1989]: The compilation of local crime statistics is a matter for the chief constable. The information collected centrally relates to notifiable offences recorded by the police covering nearly all indictable offences and a few types of summary offence. (Full details are given in the appendices to "Criminal statistics, England and Wales", pp 180 and 184-8 of the issue for 1987, Cm. 498). The coverage of this series has not been changed since 1978, apart from its extension in 1983 to include offences of gross indecency with a child and offences of drug trafficking, currently together amounting to about 9,000 offences a year. The procedures for recording notifiable offences have also not been changed since 1980 when new counting rules were introduced to improve the consistency of recording multiple, continuous and repeated offences. Those offences made summary under the Criminal Justice Act 1988 continue to be covered, with the exception of offences of common assault made summary under section 39 of the Act. The police are being advised no longer to include offences of common assault in the count of notifiable offences reported to the Home Office, in order to avoid unduly complicating police recording practices for summary offences of assault. The average number of such offences recorded by the police in the whole of England and Wales over the last 10 years has been around 600 a year so the reduction in the coverage of the series for notifiable offences recorded will be negligible (about 0·02 per cent.).

ENERGY

Nuclear Fusion

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will make it his policy to ask the chairman of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to evaluate the feasibility of low temperature nuclear fusion, as discovered by Professor Fleischman of Southampton university and Professor Pons of the university of Utah in a joint experiment, announced in March 1989;

(2) what effort has been committed by officers in his Department to evaluate the claims by the British, American and Hungarian scientists in March and April 1989 to have produced energy from a cold fusion nuclear experiment.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has already initiated experiments to reproduce and understand the effects which have been reported. It is too early to speculate on the outcome.

Plutonium and Nuclear Waste (Soviet Union)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, during his recent visit to the Soviet Union, he discussed with his Soviet counterpart (a) the possibility of the Soviet Union sending spent nuclear fuel to the United Kingdom for reprocessing at Sellafield, (b) the possibility of the United Kingdom exporting plutonium under safeguards to the Soviet Union for use in civil nuclear fuel rods, and (c) areas of mutual interest in the development of deep geological repositories for radioactive waste disposal.

Mr. Michael Spicer: None of the topics were discussed at the meeting.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the statement made by the hon. Member for Worcestershire, South (Mr. Spicer) Official Report, 13 April, column 1135, whether the reports on plutonium production sent by reactor operators to safeguard authorities on the despatch of spent irradiated fuel to reprocessing plants, give details of plutonium content to gramme quantities.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Yes.

Coal-fired Power Stations

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his policy on the future of coal-fired power stations.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The future of coal-fired stations in the mix of generating capacity will be a commercial matter for the privatised electricity industry.

EC (Meetings)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Parkinson: Full Energy Councils were held in March, June and November of 1985 and 1986, and in June and November of 1987 and 1988. There were also three informal meetings of Community Energy Ministers during the period. Meetings of officials from member states have been held to prepare for the Councils. In addition, Councils of other Ministers have dealt with matters in which my Department has some concern and they also have been preceded by preparatory meetings of officials. The Commission has convened many meetings of Government experts on particular matters relevant to my Department's responsibilities and has also held relevant seminars, symposia etc. Finally, the European Parliament and its Committees and the Economic and Social Committee of the Community have considered relevant matters from time to time.

Preparation of a list of all such meetings could be achieved only at a disproportionate cost.

Nottinghamshire Mineworkers (Allocation Fund)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give details on the amount of moneys paid by British Coal into the Nottinghamshire and district mineworkers allocation fund for each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This is a matter for the British Coal Corporation.

DEFENCE

University Staff (Security Clearance)

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether members of staff in universities and other institutions of higher education working on research contracts or agreements currently funded by his Department are required to have security clearance.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is a condition of contract that, before anyone is employed on an MOD contract which may give access to classified information, the prior agreement of MOD is sought.

Electromagnetic Radiation

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has funded any studies since 1979 in universities and polytechnics to determine the effects of electromagnetic radiation at extremely low frequencies on human or animal life.

Mr. Sainsbury: No.

Territorial Army

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the rate of recruitment into the Territorial Army, showing which areas and which arms show the most and which the least progress in recruiting.

Mr. Neubert: Overall recruitment continues to show a satisfactory improvement with intakes during January and February showing increases, respectively, of 500 and 300 over that of August 1988. We continue to monitor the position most closely and to take stringent measures to build on this impetus including, of course, the Volunteer Reserve Forces campaign. Although this campaign is aimed primarily at improving retention, we would expect to see some sort of spin-off in the area of recruitment. The generally improved position is largely reflected throughout all arms and all areas of the country.

Defence Budget

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the United Kingdom annual defence budget is spent in Wales; and what this is in cash terms in the last three years.

Mr. Sainsbury: Defence expenditure is not accounted for on a regional basis.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the research projects undertaken for his Department by the Natural Environment Research Council during the past five years.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence has currently three research agreements and 11 research contracts placed with the Natural Environment Research Council. Comparable information for the past five years is not readily available. It is not our policy to give details of these arrangements.

RAF Upper Heyford (Flight Path)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answers of 18 April to the hon. Member for Leyton, Official Report, columns 110-12, whether it was his Department's decision to change the flight path used by F-111s taking off from RAF Upper Heyford so that these aircraft fly directly over local villages.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the Adjournment debate on 30 November 1988, Official Report columns 849-856.

Research Institutes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will (a) list by standard region the research institutes operated for or on behalf of his Department and the total employment thereat, (b) list for each region the total number of such institutes and the employment therein and (c) express the regional totals as a percentage of the national totals.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 4 May 1989]: As at 1 April 1989, the total number of staff employed at the Ministry of Defence's non-nuclear research establishments was 13,640. This was broken down as follows:

	Number
Admiralty Research Establishment (Headquarters at Portsdown)	2,931
Aeroplane and Armaments Experimental Establishment (Boscombe Down)	1,101
Chemical Defence Establishment (Porton Down)	560
Royal Aerospace Establishment (Headquarters at Farnborough)	5,200
Royal Armament Research and Development Establishment (Headquarters at Fort Halstead)	2,262
Royal Signals and Radar Establishment (Headquarters at Malvern)	1,586

Staff are employed at a variety of sites throughout the United Kingdom. It is not our policy to provide a further breakdown of these figures.

Ozone Layer

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any intention of establishing an interdisciplinary research centre in relation to ozone layer research at the Meteorological Office; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 2 May 1989]: No. Ozone layer research in the EC and EFTA countries is being co-ordinated from 1 April this year with the assistance of a special unit set up by the Department of the Environment and the European Commission. The Meteorological Office plays an important national and international advisory role through the expertise developed from work on atmospheric dynamics and chemistry. It has participated, with part funding from the Department of the Environment, in the large US-led 1987 Antarctic ozone experiment and in the similar 1989 experiment carried out in the Arctic; it is also collaborating with universities in this field.

EMPLOYMENT

Availability for Work

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what instructions claimant advisers are given to help them assess the availability for work of those unemployed claimants whom they interview; and whether these instructions will be made available in the Library.

Mr. Lee: There are no discrete instructions to claimant advisers to help them assess availability for work. Claimant advisers work within the same framework of instructions used by all employment service staff.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of unemployment.

Mr. Lee: The information is available from the Library. In March 1989 unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the United Kingdom was 1,918,100, the lowest for more than eight years on a consistent basis. Unemployment has fallen for 32 months running, giving the longest and largest continuous fall since the second world war.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he can give details of the number of people in employment in Scotland and the United Kingdom in 1978 and 1988.

Mr. Lee: The information is as follows. The figures are unadjusted for the effects of seasonal variation.

	Civilian work force in employment[1]	Work force in employment[2]
Scotland
December 1978	2,231,000	[3]
December 1988	2,211,000	[3]
United Kingdom
December 1978	24,998,000	25,315,000
December 1988	26,300,000	26,612,000

[1] The sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and participants in work related Government training programmes.
[2] The sum of the civilian work force in employment and Her Majesty's Forces. Estimates are not available for Scotland as consistent Her Majesty's Forces figures are not available below national level.
[3] Not available.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the level of employment in the south-east.

Mr. Lee: In December 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, the civilian work force in employment in the south-east region was 9,014,000. This represents an increase of 1,012,000 or 13 per cent. since December 1983. The civilian work force in employment is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and participants in work-related Government training programmes.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the level of employment in London.

Mr. Lee: In December 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, the civilian work force in employment in Greater London was 4,053,000. This represents an increase of 261,000 or 7 per cent. since December 1983. The civilian work force in employment is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and participants in work-related Government training programmes.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many job vacancies are currently registered with jobcentres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In March 1989 the number of unfilled vacancies, seasonally adjusted, at jobcentres was 222,900. Vacancies at jobcentres do not represent the total number of vacancies in the economy. The latest research shows that only about a third of vacancies are notified to jobcentres.

School Compacts

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the development of school compacts.

Mr. Cope: Most of the 30 applications for compact operational funding in England and Scotland have now been approved. I expect that all 30 will begin full operation this September. In addition, invitations have gone to the 24 urban programme areas in England that are not already covered by compacts to apply for funding for development work. I hope to be able to announce those areas awarded development funding during the summer.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales are considering how best to take forward the further development of compacts.

I continue to be impressed, not just by the very positive response from both business and education to this initiative but also by the hard work which local partnerships have put into establishing compacts in their areas.

Tourism

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the growth of employment in the catering industry as a whole and the tourism sector in particular over the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: It is estimated that, between December 1983 and December 1988, the number of employees in employment in the hotel and catering industry in Great Britain increased by 233,000. Further information from the labour force survey indicates that there was an increase of about 41,000 self-employed workers in the industry between spring 1983 and spring 1988. The estimated growth between December 1983 and December 1988 in the number of employees in employment in the sector of the hotel and catering industry directly related to tourism was 210,000. It is not possible to identify separately the growth in the number of self-employed workers in this sector.

Hendy and Miskin Quarries

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will order an immediate halt to any blasting operations at the Hendy and Miskin quarries in Taff Ely which are found to be endangering the health and property of local residents.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no such intentions. Any decision to halt blasting at the Hendy and Miskin quarries would be the responsibility of the Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarries inspectorate which is keeping the situation under review.

Technical and Vocational Education Initiative

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what methods of assessment are being used by his Department to monitor the development of the technical and vocational education initiative in the 2,000 schools and colleges already involved; and if he will make a statement as to the progress and achievement which has been made by those who are proceeding beyond the pilot stage.

Mr. Cope: The technical and vocational education initiative has been extensively assessed both nationally and within each education authority. The national evaluation undertaken by a number of independent research institutions has included statistical databases and studies of management and education issues within the technical and vocational education initiative.

Significant progress has already been made by authorities beyond the pilot stage in ensuring that the curriculum is broad, balanced and more relevant to working life.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of staff employed in employment benefit fraud investigations for each year from 1979 to the latest available year.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department's fraud investigation work was reorganised in 1984 and comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

The number of fraud investigators employed by my Department each year since 1984 is as follows:

	Number
1984-85	450
1985-86	650
1986-87	720
1987-88	785
1988-89	820

In addition a number of other staff are engaged, on either a part-time or full-time basis, as support staff to these investigations.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report the total number of prosecutions for employment benefit fraud for each of the years from 1979 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department's fraud investigation work was reorganised in 1984 and comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

The number of prosecutions for benefit fraud for each year since 1984 is as follows:

	Number
1984-85	2,250
1985-86	2,800
1986-87	3,650
1987-88	3,960
1988-89	4,045

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report an estimate of the total amount of money lost through benefit fraud in 1988.

Mr. Nicholls: No reliable figure is available of the money lost through benefit fraud in 1988 because the full extent of the fraud that is occurring is not known.

As a result of investigations during 1988, however, the estimated net savings to public funds were £65 million.

European Social Fund

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how the 1989 European social fund allocation was divided in (a) actual cash and (b) percentage terms between (i) central Government, (ii) local government, (iii) the voluntary sector and (iv) others; and what were the equivalent figures for 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 28 April 1989]: Details of the 1987 and 1988 allocations are as follows:

	1987 allocation		1988 allocation
	£ million	Per cent.	£ million	Per cent.
Central Government	323·5	74·3	263·5	63·4
Local Government	60·3	13·9	85·8	21·3
Volutary sector	16·5	3·8	23·0	5·8
Others	34·7	8·0	29·1	7·25

My Department is awaiting notification from the European Commision of the amounts allocated to individual schemes for 1989.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many European social fund projects submitted by the voluntary sector were given (a) full priority decisions, (b) part priority decisions, (c) no priority decisions and (d) not eligible decisions in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 28 April 1989]: The status given by the European Commission to projects submitted by the voluntary sector is as follows:

	1987	1988	[1] 1989
Full priority	251	372	232
Part priority including partly eligible	45	87	272
No priority	21	20	70
Not eligible	33	29	75

[1] Provisional.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many European social fund projects designed to train people in the skills required to establish new trading enterprises (a) received full priority and (b) received part priority in 1987, 1988 and 1989; and how many of these projects were devoted to training people to establish co-operatives.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 28 April 1989]: I regret that the information can be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria for cost per trainee were used in judging European social fund projects submitted by the voluntary sector in 1989; whether these criteria were published before the closing date for applications; and whether the criteria were based on those set out in any European Commission decision on management of the European social fund.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 28 April 1989]: The Commission publishes no criteria on the costs per trainee which it uses for any category of European social fund projects.

Dock Workers (Wages)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to the average wages of dockers in non-dock labour scheme ports.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: Pay rates in ports outside the dock labour scheme are determined locally, as is the case for ports covered by the scheme. Average pay therefore varies between ports, both in and out of the scheme. Detailed average pay figures for the main ports outside the scheme could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

National Dock Labour Board

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the different welfare expenses of the National Dock Labour Board in 1987.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 3 May 1989]: I refer my hon. Friend to page 17 of the board's annual report for 1987, which provides the following information on medical and welfare expenses over that year.

Medical supplies and services	19,110
First aid training	74,937
Less: amount receivable from other users	(60,649)
Rehabilitation services	22,491
Sports activities	59,292
Dock workers clubs	50,135
Other welfare expenses	9,648
	174,964

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science by what date he anticipates that all schools will be run on a local management basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend expects local management to be introduced progressively from April 1990. All secondary schools and all primary schools with 200 or more pupils in authorities outside inner London must receive delegated budgets by April 1993. For inner London boroughs, all qualifying schools must receive delegated budgets by April 1994.

Bromley Schools (Amalgamation)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the circumstances under which the London borough of Bromley was retrospectively permitted to change its section 12 notice for the amalgamation of an infant and junior school at Poverest, Orpington; and whether he will reconsider the decision to permit the amalgamation.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend approved, on 20 February 1989, section 12 proposals, published by the London borough of Bromley, to amalgamate Poverest infant and junior schools. Bromley subsequently wrote requesting a modification to the proposals relating to admissions. In accordance with section 12(9) of the Education Act 1980, my right hon. Friend approved the modification on 21 March 1989. While my right hon. Friend is empowered to modify the proposals at the request of the authority, he is not empowered to rescind his decision on the proposals. Bromley LEA is therefore under a duty to implement the proposals as approved with the modification.

AIDS

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he proposes to alter educational material distributed to schools concerning AIDS in the light of the evidence presented in the journal of the American Medical Association 1989, 261(2), pp. 244-5, that passionate kissing favours the transmission of HIV.

Mr. Butcher: On the basis of advice from the Department of Health, my right hon. Friend has no plans to alter the guidance currently given to schools concerning the risks of HIV infection from kissing.

Design

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish a table showing (a) the number of in-service training courses offered by his Department in design in each of the past five years, (b) the cost of each year's programme and (c) the number of teachers participating in such courses.

Mrs. Rumbold: The details requested are given in the table. The courses range in length from one to six days and involve not only school teachers but also lecturers and advisers. The courses are organised and run by Her Majesty's inspectorate with contributions from others knowledgeable in the field, including industrialists. The costs stated include the charges made by the venues for facilities, the fees and subsistence of speakers and the cost of materials and all tuition.

The courses are often heavily over-subscribed and attract applications from Europe as well as the United Kingdom.

Year	Number of Courses	Number of participants	Cost (£)
1984	10	746	21,629
1985	5	477	13,160
1986	7	591	16,796
1987	7	650	22,465
1988	12	1,113	29,864

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish a table showing the number of (a) teacher training colleges offering courses in design and (b) student teacher's training design courses in each of the past five years.

Mrs. Rumbold: Twenty-five institutions in England and Wales offer secondary phase initial teacher training courses in craft, design and technology. Design may also form a significant part in the subject studies element in primary phase courses and secondary phase courses in art and in art and design. The table shows the number of students recruited to secondary phase courses in craft, design and technology in each of the last five years:

Year	Number
1984	487
1985	452
1986	551
1987	754
1988	783

Source: DES annual survey of recruitment to initial teacher training.

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many local education authorities have advisers or inspectors who specialise in design.

Mrs. Rumbold: This information is not collected centrally.

Teachers

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Erith and Crayford of 15 March, Official Report, columns 221-22, if he will describe how, in 1987, his Department determined the numbers of rate B, rate D and rate E incentive allowances which would be awarded automatically as at 30 September 1987; whether the information used in making such determinations was up to date; what information subsequently became available to his Department regarding the actual numbers of teachers either on the basis of entitlement to such automatic awards or on the basis of payment of such awards; whether the numbers of actual payments exceeded the original expectations of his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Circular 8/87 assumed that 129,000 teachers in ordinary schools would be awarded an incentive allowance in October 1987, of whom 104,000 would receive a B, D or E allowance automatically as a result of being on scale 3, scale 4 or the senior teacher scale on 30 September 1987. These numbers were based on the distribution of teachers across the pay scales at March 1985 as shown on the database of teacher records. Results from the DTR are currently emerging about two years in arrears because of delays in the supply of information to the Department. The Department projected these 1985 DTR data forward to September 1987 on the basis of assumptions about wastage, recruitment and the movement of teachers on the pay scales.

DTR data for March 1987 will be available shortly. Early indications are that the numbers of teachers on scale 3, scale 4 or the senior teacher scale in March 1987 were slightly higher than had been projected at the time the system of incentive allowances was being introduced. Information about the numbers of teachers who actually received an incentive allowance in October 1987 will become available in due course from the 1988 DTR.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Erith and Crayford of 15 March, Official Report, columns 221-22, what was the total cost to employers of school teachers' incentive allowances in financial year 1987-88 (a) on the basis of his Department's plans before October 1987 and (b) on the basis of outturn figures; what amount and proportion, for each case (a) and (b) above, relates to allowances awarded automatically on 30 September 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [holding answer 24 April 1989]: The estimated cost of incentive allowances awarded to teachers in ordinary schools in the financial year 1987-88 was £113 million, of which approximately £106 million (94 per cent.) was in respect of allowances awarded automatically on 1 October 1987. Outturn figures for the cost of incentive allowances cannot be disaggregated from the total cost of teachers' pay.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Queen's Counsel

29. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General what qualities and abilities are fundamental to the appointment of an individual as a Queen's counsel; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor recommends the grant of silk only to barristers of sufficient standing who he is satisfied have reached an appropriate level of professional eminence and distinction.

Category A Prisoners (Trials)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Attorney-General what is his practice with respect to ordering the trials of category A prisoners to be held at the most cost-effective location; and under what powers he acts in such circumstances.

The Attorney-General: Should the prosecution or defence wish the place of trial to be other than that directed by the justices under section 7 of the Magistrates Courts Act 1980, application may be made to the Crown court under s.76 of the Supreme Court Act 1981, the application being heard by a judge of the High Court in open court, who may comply with or refuse the application, or give a direction not in compliance with it as the court thinks fit. Classification and allocation to judges of cases triable in the Crown court and place of trial generally are governed by a practice direction issued by the Lord Chief Justice with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor on 2 November 1987 pursuant to section 75 of the 1981 Act.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

House of Fraser

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his answer of 21 April, Official Report, column 310, what aspect of the public interest persuaded him not to refer the House of Fraser inspector's report to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. and noble Friend's decision was reached after taking into account all relevant considerations.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress has been made by the serious fraud squad in its inquiries with the House of Fraser report; when he expects it to complete its inquiries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: I cannot say.

Business Development Consultancy

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many applications were (a) received, and (b) approved for business development consultancy initiatives from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989; and what was the total amount of expenditure involved, for each of the regions of his Department, Scotland and Wales.

Mr. Forth: In the period from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, 19,691 applications were received for the business development consultancy initiatives. In the same period 14,221 applications were approved for assisted consultancy. The Department's contribution to the cost of completed consultancies totalled £14·3 million. It is estimated that those consultancies not completed by 31 March 1989 will cost the Department £20·9 million. A breakdown of numbers and cost of consultancy projects for each DTI region and for Scotland and Wales is as follows:

DTI Region/Country	(a) Number of applications received	(b) Number of applications approved for assisted consultancy	(c) DTI Expenditure on completed consultancies (£'000)	(d) Estimated expenditure on outstanding consultancies (£'000)
North East	1,003	751	686	980
North West	2,954	2,401	2,744	3,643
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,917	1,359	1,601	1,910
West Midlands	2,102	1,456	1,558	2,740
East Midlands	1,173	916	943	1,447
South West	1,933	1,141	886	1,711

Scotland	1,529	1,235	1,644	2,076
Wales	1,190	852	843	1,200
Total	19,691	14,221	14,293	20,934

Electrical Goods

Mr. Allan Roberts: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current import penetration of the market for household electrical goods.

Mr. Alan Clark: Taking the coverage of "household electrical goods" to be the same as that of Business Monitor PQ 3460—"Domestic electrical appliances"—it is estimated that in 1988 the import penetration of the market for household electrical goods was 40 per cent.

Single European Market

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a further statement on his Department's objectives for the completion of the single European market; and on what steps he is taking to ensure the attainment of those objectives.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 5 May 1989]: We strongly support progress to complete the single European market. Areas to which we attach particular priority include the liberalisation of financial services: public purchasing, transport and telecommunications services, and the removal of technical barriers to trade. In the Council of Ministers, we will continue to press for these objectives to be achieved in ways which open markets without placing unnecessary burdens on business, and which ensure that the Community remains open to the outside world.

The Government are also determined that United Kingdom industry should be as well placed as possible to meet the challenges the single market will bring. Our "Europe—Open for Business" campaign is designed to ensure that businesses are fully aware of the changes and to encourage them to take action to adapt their strategies accordingly.

Productivity (Steel and Coal)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has as to increases in productivity in (a) the steel industry and (b) the coal industry since 1979.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The official data series on productivity was published by the Department of Employment in the Employment Gazette but these do not include separately identifiable figures for the steel industry and the coal industry. The following data from the annual census of production provide the required information for the iron and steel industry and for coal extraction and the manufacture of solid fuels for the period to 1987, the most recent year for which figures are available.

Iron and steel industry[1]

Year	Production (gross value added) (1985 prices) £ billion	Employment thousands	Productivity (gross value added per head) (1985 prices) £ thousands
1979	1·4	184·8	7·3
1980	0·9	145·0	6·4
1981	1·2	111·9	10·6
1982	0·9	92·9	9·6
1983	1·2	78·6	15·8
1984	1·3	69·7	18·1
1985	1·4	67·3	20·3
1986	1·4	64·0	21·9
1987	1·7	56·0	30·6

[1] The iron and steel industry comprises group 221 of the Standard Industrial Classification (revised 1980) and covers the iron and steel industry as defined by the European Coal and Steel Community in the treaty of Paris, 1951.

Coal extraction and manufacture of solid fuels[2]

Year	Production (gross value added) (1985 prices) £ billion	Employment thousands	Productivity (gross value added per head) (1985 prices) £ thousands
1979	3·9	282·9	13·9
1980	4·1	280·5	14·6
1981	4·0	268·2	14·8
1982	3·7	256·5	14·6
1983	3·3	236·3	13·9
1984	0·9	217·3	4·2
1985	2·6	172·4	15·1
1986	2·3	157·6	14·7
1987	1·9	130·6	14·9

[2] Coal extraction and manufacture of solid fuels comprises group 111 of the Standard Industrial Classification (revised 1980).

Car Industry

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what information he has as to the numbers of cars manufactured per employee in the United Kingdom, other European countries and Japanese car plants in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The information is not available.

Child Labour (Third World)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to name those high street stores which currently sell goods whose manufacturing process has involved the use of child labour in countries of the Third world; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The issue of child labour is a distressing phenomenon of Third world commerce but one of long standing. The complexity of the problem makes indirect action of the kind the hon. Member suggests both impractical and quite possibly unjust.

THE ARTS

Northern Ballet Theatre

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many representations have been received (a) by his Office and (b) by the Arts Council on the subject of the future of the Northern Ballet theatre.

Mr. Luce: I have received more than 100 letters from hon. and right hon. Members, and a similar number from members of the public. The Arts Council has received more than 12,000 letters and postcards.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Uranium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has ever sought permission from the appropriate authorities in (a) the Republic of South Africa and (b) Namibia, to change the safeguards and use of coding on uranium from those countries, from N to P.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have been asked to reply.
No.

Chile

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Chilean Government regarding their announced reduction in the number of representatives to be elected for the Chilean Parliament in the general elections in those constituencies with an opposition majority.

Mr. Eggar: None. There have so far been no official proposals regarding the electoral law, or electoral boundaries and districts.

West Germany

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the West German Foreign Minister; what subjects were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State last met Herr Genscher on 14 and 15 April at an informal weekend meeting of European Community Foreign Ministers in Granada, where a range of European Community and other international issues were discussed.

Narcotics

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what international measures are in force to interdict supplies of chemical materials necessary for the manufacture of narcotics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The United Nations convention against illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances contains provisions designed to prevent diversion of substances for illicit drugs manufacture. A total of 64 countries, including the United Kingdom, have signed the convention. We intend to ratify it as soon as Parliament approves enabling legislation.

Drug Trafficking

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with representatives of Austria, West Germany, Holland and Turkey regarding drug trafficking through those countries into western Europe.

Mr. Eggar: Discussions on drugs with all four countries take place periodically within the Council of Europe Pompidou group. A ministerial meeting of this group will be held in London next week. In addition, we are discussing with the Federal Republic of Germany the possibility of a bilateral asset seizure agreement, and bilateral talks with the Dutch on a similar agreement are planned for later this month.

Visas

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many visa applications from Polish residents to visit relations in the United Kingdom remain outstanding at the latest available date.

Mr. Eggar: It is not possible to determine how many of the 1,991 short-term visit applications currently—28 April—under consideration at the British embassy, Warsaw originate from Polish nationals seeking to visit relations in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy for granting visas to Argentine nationals; how long applications take to be considered; and how many applications have been turned down in each of the last three years.

Mr. Eggar: Visas are normally granted to Argentine nationals, other than serving military officers, who can satisfy an entry clearance officer that they meet the requirements of the immigration rules. Straightforward applications lodged with the British interests section of the Swiss embassy in Buenos Aires are processed within three days. Figures for refusals are readily available only for visa applications lodged in Buenos Aires. These are:

1986 — five
1987 — three
1988 — two

"Britain's Voice in South Africa"

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost to public funds of publishing the pamphlet "Britain's Voice in South Africa".

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes) on 2 May.

Syria

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government in conjunction with their EEC partners are pressing to obtain Syria's withdrawal from Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have consistently called for the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon, in order that the country's national unity, integrity, full sovereignty and independence may be restored.

Middle East

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to take any action (a) unilaterally, and (b) with his European colleagues, to halt the escalation of arms sales to the middle east in order to reduce the possibility of arms falling into unauthorised hands.

Mr. Waldegrave: All exports of British defence-related equipment are considered on a strict case-by-case basis taking account of the United Kingdom's political, strategic and security interests. Each transaction is subject to stringent export licensing procedures, including where appropriate an end-user undertaking and a no transfer clause.

These strict procedures are applied uniformly to all defence equipment exports worldwide, including the middle east. In addition, special restrictions are applied to exports to certain middle eastern countries, reflecting our wish not to fuel or prolong conflicts in the region, and our determination to take a firm line on state-sponsored terrorism.

We believe that restraint can be brought about only by wider international agreement on ways to control the escalation of arms sales and to reduce tension. In that spirit we co-sponsored a resolution adopted in the UN first committee in November 1988 calling inter alia for reinforcement of national systems of control.

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he would expect a Vietnamese refugee arriving in Hong Kong today to have completed the screening procedure at the present rate of disposal; how much longer he would expect the appeal procedure to take if screened out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: At the present rate of screening, Vietnamese boat people arriving in Hong Kong today would have to wait for about four and a half years before they could be screened. Those screened out who appeal against the decision could expect to wait another year before the appeal is determined. The Hong Kong Government are aware that the present screening and appeal procedures take too long to complete: these procedures are under urgent review.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the nationality status of Vietnamese refugees in Hong Kong; what provision is made under the British Nationality Act concerning the status of children born to refugees residing in the territory of Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The nationality of Vietnamese refugees and boat people in Hong Kong will be governed by the nationality laws of Vietnam, or of any other state whose nationality they might claim.

Persons born in Hong Kong before 1 January 1983, including those born to Vietnamese refugees, were born "British subjects: citizens of the United Kingdom and Colonies" under the British Nationality Act 1948. On 1 January 1983, such persons became British Dependent Territories Citizens under the British Nationality Act 1981, which came into force on that date. After that date, persons born to Vietnamese refugees or boat people in Hong Kong do not have British nationality by virtue of their birth there.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice is given to Vietnamese refugees during the screening procedure in Hong Kong, including advice as to legal representation; whether such refugees are entitled to legal representation during the procedure; if he will place in the Library copies of the forms of all notices and documents served upon such refugees; what proportion of the refugees is represented by lawyers during the screening procedure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Asylum seekers are informed of the nature and purpose of the screening procedure before the screening interview. Those asylum seekers who, after the screening interview, are refused refugee status are informed in writing of their right of appeal, how to lodge an appeal, and the availability of legal assistance from the UNHCR in preparing their statements of appeal. Notices and documents served to asylum seekers will be obained from the Hong Kong authorities and placed in the Library.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any proposals to extend to Hong Kong the treaty obligations applicable to the United Kingdom as a result of United Kingdom ratification of the United Nations convention on refugees (1951) and the protocol (1967); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. The procedures currently being used in Hong Kong to determine whether newly arrived boat people meet the criteria for refugee status are fully in accordance with the terms of the 1951 convention and the 1967 protocol.

EC (Meetings)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mrs. Chalker: The European Council met on three occasions in both 1985 and 1988 and twice in both 1986 and 1987. The Foreign Affairs Council met on 13 occasions in 1985, 11 in 1986 and 1987 and 12 in 1988; there were also occasional informal meetings of Foreign Ministers. In addition, there were numerous meetings of officials. Information on the number of such meetings could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Embassies (Commercial Departments)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many full-time Foreign Office personnel are employed in the commercial department of British embassies in (a) the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, (b) China, (c) Japan, (d) France and (e) West Germany.

Mrs. Chalker: The total numbers of staff working in the commercial sections of our overseas posts (embassies and consulates general) by country are:

	United Kingdom based	Locally engaged
USSR	9	5
China	19	9
Japan	12	31
France	12	27
West Germany	18	54

This includes the heads of each post and other staff who have more than just commercial work responsibilities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Road Junction Safety

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what road markings exist at the junction of the Buchill Park avenue with Buchill road; whether the sight lines at this junction comply with present road design standards; when the hedges at this junction were last cut back; when a footway will be provided at this location; and what other proposals he has to improve this road junction.

Mr. Needham: I believe that the right hon. Gentleman's question refers to Beechill Park avenue and Beechill road.

As is customary with junctions of this type, road markings do not exist at the junction of Beechill Park avenue Beechill road. The sight line to the left at this junction complies with the normal standard, the sight line to the right does not. The roads service has no record of when the hedges at this junction were last cut back but can confirm that they are regularly faced by the owner. At the present time they do not overhang the road.

There are no plans to provide a footway or to carry out any improvements at this location.

Anglo-Irish Secretariat

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the total costs incurred by the siting of the Anglo-Irish secretariat at Maryfield; of this sum how much relates to wages and salaries of the staff involved, how much to security measures taken; how the rest of the sum was expended, and how much of the total under each heading was borne by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Tom King: The Secretariat is operated on a basis of shared costs for shared facilities, the Irish Government contributing to the operating expenses in varying proportions, reflecting the use made of each facility. The costs to the Irish Government of their staff, transport etc. is a matter for them. Salaries and wages for the British staff over the total period from the start in December 1985 to 30 April 1989 amounted to £401,000. Security costs fall exclusively to the British Government. Manpower costs for security were £1,666,000. Other costs, totalling three-quarters of a million pounds, comprised alterations to the building and site, and operating expenses.

Processions and Marches

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any representations have been made to him by the Government of the Irish Republic about any processions or marches which (a) have taken place, or (b) were banned by him in Northern Ireland in each year since 1984, or (c) about any scheduled to take place in the current year.

Mr. Tom King: The Irish Government have made representations from time to time about particular marches and processions in Northern Ireland, the details of which are confidential. These representations, like any others, are passed on to the Chief Constable of the RUC who has operational responsibility for this matter. Any decision by me to ban or reroute a march or procession would be made on the basis of his recommendation.

Social Fund

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what consideration has been given to the respective numbers of premium recipients at each social security office in determining the 1989-90 social fund budget.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 26 April 1989]: The characteristics of the income support caseload of each social security office were taken into account in determining its social fund budget for 1989-90—that is, the number of pensioners, people with disability premiums, unemployed and others. Details of the basis of the calculations were placed in the Library on 23 March.

Income Support

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated number of 16 and 17-year-olds who since the September 1988 changes to general income support entitlement have continued to be entitled to income support in their own right.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 28 April 1989]: The information requested is not available.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated number of school leavers affected by the September 1988 changes removing general income support entitlement and guaranteeing a YTS place and training allowance.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 28 April 1989]: The only available information about summer school leavers affected is the number who were receiving extended child benefit. The highest figure between September and December 1988 was 621.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the numbers of lower-paid families with and without children whose marginal tax rates including benefit withdrawal will be (a) 90 to 100 per cent., (b) 80 to 90 per cent., (c) 70 to 80 per cent., (d) 60 to 70 per cent., (e) 50 to 60 per cent. and (f) 40 to 50 per cent., taking into account the tax changes for 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The latest available information requested is as follows:

Combined marginal income tax and benefit withdrawal rates 1989-90
Working heads of tax units (000) Great Britain numbers facing combined rates of over 40 per cent.—in bands

	Families with children	Couples and single people	Total
100 per cent. and over	—	—	—
90 per cent. to 99 per cent.	40	5	45
80 per cent. to 89 per cent.	155	10	165
70 per cent. to 79 per cent.	170	35	205
60 per cent. to 69 per cent.	[1]	5	5
50 per cent. to 59 per cent.	[1]	5	5
40 per cent. to 49 per cent.	10	25	35

Notes:

(i) Marginal deduction rates shown are for heads of tax units in receipt of Family Credit/Housing benefit where at least one partner works 24 hours or more a week.

(ii) All estimates are for 1989-90 and are based on combined 1985 and 1986 Family Expenditure Survey data and are consistent with this year's Government Expenditure White Paper.

(iii) [1] denotes an estimate of fewer than 2,500.

(iv) The total number of working heads of tax units with more than 24 weekly remunerative hours is approximately 17 million. Those shown in the table therefore represent under 3 per cent. of the total.

Family Credit (Wales)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the cause of the low rate of claims for family credit in Wales; and what statistics he has collected on this matter.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: An assessment of the reasons why people failed to claim family credit can be found in "Family Credit: The Strategic Development of the Spring 1989 Publicity Campaign: Research Summary" which has been placed in the Library by the Central Office of Information.

Separate estimates of the eligible population, or the level of take up, are not available for Wales. At the beginning of April 1989 around 17,000 families in Wales were actually receiving family credit, but this does not include those who were still awaiting a decision on a claim and eventually received payment covering that date.

Appeals

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average total cost to his Department of the administrative procedures which occur between a refusal of benefit by an adjudication officer and the implementation of a decision by the Social Security appeal tribunal.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A typical case where, for example, income support is refused by an adjudication officer and subsequently allowed by the Social Security appeal tribunal, will incur local office administrative costs of about £90. This figure excludes administrative costs incurred by the office of the president of Social Security appeal tribunals which are the responsibility of the President, His Honour Judge Byrt QC. The hon. Member may care to contact him direct for these details.

EC (Meetings)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as can be obtained without incurring disproportionate cost as soon as possible.

Fraud

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of staff employed in his Department's benefit fraud investigations for each year from 1979 to the latest available year;

(2) if he will publish in the Official Report the total number of prosecutions for social security benefit fraud for each of the years from 1979 to the most recent year for which figures are available;

(3) if he will publish in the Official Report an estimate of the total amount of money lost through benefit fraud in 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Precise figures are not available, but it is possible to estimate the numbers of full-time equivalent posts on the basis of records of staff time expended on fraud-related work. The numbers of full-time equivalent posts each year since 1979 have been as follows:

Year	Number
1979-80	2,311
1980-81	2,336
1981-82	2,346
1982-83	2,185
1983-84	2,211
1984-85	2,204
1985-86	2,285
1986-87	2,390
1987-88	2,724
1988-89	2,940

Additional information requested is contained in my reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 31 January at column 192.

Disability Provision (Employment Training)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether a person who is in receipt of disability provision would lose their entitlement on completion of an employment training scheme.

Mr. Nicholas Scott: Subject to satisfaction of the relevant eligibility criteria, attendance allowance, mobility allowance and the disability premium with income support can be paid during and after a period of employment training. Trainees who were receiving sickness benefit, invalidity benefit or severe disablement allowance immediately before employment training can have their benefit reinstated as a linked claim if they are incapable of work and make the fresh claim within eight weeks of the end of training.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether, pursuant to his statement on 24 April, Official Report, column 725, that £9 of every £10 of means-tested benefit reaches those to whom it is intended, he will list the total sum in public expenditure allocated to each of the main means-tested benefits administered by his Department; and if he will also list the sums paid out to claimants in the last relevant financial year.

Mr. Scott: The total sums allocated to each of the main income-related benefits for forward years and the latest estimates of the sums paid out to claimants in repect of these benefits in 1988-89, the last relevant financial year, are set out in table 15·1 of Cm 615.

Living Standards

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library his calculations showing that the living standards of lone parents have risen by 10 per cent., couples with children by 9 per cent. and couples without children and single people by 6 per cent. over the period 1979 to 1985, as cited by him on 24 April, Official Report, column 725.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The figures refer to the incomes of households in the non-pensioner population. They are based on the total net incomes of individuals in households derived from all sources less income tax and national insurance. Incomes were adjusted for the differing sizes and compositions of households in order to make direct comparisions between the improvements in living standards of people with and without children. The esimates are based on the family expenditure survey and cover Great Britain as a whole.

Social Fund

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much the Aberdare Department of Social Security offices were given for the social fund (a) in 1988-89 and (b) in 1989-90; whether this has increased in line with inflation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The details of the social fund allocations are as follows:

	Loans £	Grants £
1988-89	275,645	117,197
1989-90	281,323	123,789

A note explaining the basis on which the social fund allocations for 1989-90 were calculated is in the Library.

Pensioners

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of how many pensioners have (a) an occupational pension, (b) investment income and (c) both; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 2 May 1989]: In 1986 approximately 3·4 million (50 per cent.) pensioner tax units had an occupational pension, 4·7 million (70 per cent.) had investment income, and 2·8 million (40 per cent.) had both.

Note: A pensioner tax unit is a single person of state pension age or over, or a couple where the man is of state pension age or over.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax (Dental Inputs)

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total amount of value added tax paid on dental inputs by general dental practitioners in England and Wales during the last three financial years.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that this information is not available.

Football Pools

Sir John Farr: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will earmark annually £100 million of the sum paid to the Government in tax on football pools to a fund for the purpose of bringing about all-seater stadia at the earliest possible date.

Mr. Lilley: In line with an established principle of the tax system, followed by successive Governments, and in the interests of efficient management of public expenditure, receipts from taxation are not hypothecated for particular purposes.

Child Benefit

Mr. Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the savings would be of taxing child benefit for taxpayers at the 40 per cent. tax rate in 1989-90.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The direct revenue yield in 1989-90 from taxing child benefit at 40 per cent. for those married couples and single parents facing a marginal tax rate of 40 per cent. for that year is estimated to be about £140 million.

Reply Paid Envelopes

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when it was decided that those required to supply information to the commissioners of Inland Revenue using OHMS envelopes must affix postage stamps; when the use of reply paid envelopes was discontinued; and what publicity was given to this change.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 29 January 1988 at column 420 and to the Inland Revenue press release of that date.

Allowances and Reliefs

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the savings in a full year at 1989-90 rates of restricting all allowances and reliefs to the standard rate of tax; and if he will provide a breakdown by category of allowance and relief.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 2 May 1989]: Estimates of the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1989-90 levels of income from restricting the main income tax reliefs and allowances to the basic rate are as follows:

	£ million
(a) Personal allowances	1,320
(b) Mortgage interest relief	430
(c) Employees' superannuation and personal pension contributions	200
(d) Retirement annuity relief[1]	100

[1] Including relief for retirement annuity payments made by employees.

It is not possible to provide reliable estimates for the effects of restricting other smaller reliefs to the basic rate.

The direct revenue yield from restricting all reliefs and allowances simultaneously to the basic rate is likely to be in the order of £2½ billion, somewhat more than the sum of the yields from restricting the reliefs and allowances separately; this is due to the cumulative effect of bringing more people into higher rate tax. About two thirds of those who would pay more tax as a result of this change are currently liable only at the basic rate. Estimates are based on a projection of the 1986-87 survey of personal income and are provisional. No account is taken of possible behavioural changes or the effect on receipts of capital gains tax.

Housing (Tax Exemption)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when tax-free employer grants to employees moving to higher cost housing areas were introduced; what the largest allowable size of grant to qualify for tax exemption was in each tax year of operation; and if he will provide an estimate of the number of such tax-free grants made.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Subject to certain conditions, payments of this kind have never been regarded as taxable. To be tax-free payments must be spread over a number of years and not exceed, in total, a prescribed amount. Since 1 April 1987, the maximum amount payable tax-free has varied in line with the maximum amount payable under the Civil Service additional housing costs allowance. The relevant amounts are given in the table. I regret that estimates of the number of tax-exempt payments is not available.

Moves on or after:	Total payable tax-free £
1 April 1987	18,270
1 June 1987	17,220
30 March 1988	15,750
1 October 1988	20,160
1 February 1989	21,210

Personal Borrowing

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the level of personal sector bank borrowings, gross and net, in each year since 1983 in current and standard prices;

(2) what was the personal sector consumer credit outstanding in each year since 1983 in current and standard prices.

Mr. Lilley: Figures for personal sector consumer credit outstanding and bank borrowing in current prices are available in Financial Statistics (tables 9.3 and 14.4). Figures for such debt measured in standard (ie. constant) prices are not published, and there is no unique, correct method of calculating them. But Economic Trends includes a number of price indices which could be combined with the current price data to provide estimates.

Separate Taxation

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy that when husbands and wives are taxed separately there will be no adverse effect on elderly married pensioners caused by the abolition of the married personal allowance where the wife's only taxable income is her state retirement pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No elderly married couple will be worse off as a result of the changes to allowances when independent taxation of husbands and wives is introduced in April 1990. The allowances available to an elderly husband under the new system—the personal allowance and the married couple's allowance—will be at least as great as the married age allowance which he is receiving at present, and the elderly wife will for the first time be entitled to an age-related personal allowance in her own right which she will be able to set against any of her income, from whatever source. In fact, over 85 per cent. of taxpaying elderly couples will pay less tax under independent taxation.

Profit Sharing (Luton)

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those companies in the Luton area which made a profit-sharing payment to their employees in 1988-89, showing in each case when the last such payment was made.

Mr. Norman Lamont: As information provided to the Inland Revenue about payments made by particular employers to their employees, whether under profit-related pay schemes or otherwise, is confidential, I regret I cannot publish the details requested.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to abolish the tax allowance for married couples and replace this with two single persons' allowances.

Mr. Norman Lamont: No. Under independent taxation, which begins in April 1990, both husband and wife will get their own personal allowance. The new system will continue to recognise marriage through the married couple's allowance, which will be given in the first instance to the husband. The personal allowance and the married couple's allowance will together be equivalent to the present married man's allowance.

Payroll Giving

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the percentage and number of (a) basic rate taxpayers and (b) higher rate taxpayers participating in charity payroll giving in 1988-89.

Mr. Norman Lamont: It is estimated that over 120,000 people were participating in the scheme at the end of 1988-89, but I regret that information on their marginal rate of tax is not available.

Tax Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax was remitted or written-off as irrecoverable in 1979 and 1987; and what was (a) the amount written-off and (b) the number of taxpayers for whom the ground for non-payment was (i) that they had gone abroad, (ii) that they were untraceable, (iii) insolvency and (iv) hardship.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The total amounts of tax remitted or written off as irrecoverable in 1979 and 1987 were:

	£ thousand
1979	60,310
1987	333,294

The amounts written off and number of taxpayers involved, where the grounds were (i) gone abroad, (ii) untraceable, (iii) insolvency and (iv) hardship were:

1979
(i) Gone abroad	4,631	2,491
(ii) Untraceable	14,179	23,680
(iii) Insolvency	32,564	23,032
(iv) Hardship	1,108	7,988
1987
(i) Gone abroad	9,683	2,678
(ii) Untraceable	51,448	41,067
(iii) Insolvency	241,290	68,868
(iv) Hardship	1,896	6,907

Taxable Income

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett), 4 April, Official Report, columns 9-10, he will express the figures given of taxable income as a per capita and per taxpayer figure, and if in each case he will also express the county figures in rank order in an index form taking the national average to be 100.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 17 April 1989]: I regret that the sample size of the survey of personal incomes is not large enough to provide reliable comparisons amongst individual counties of income per head. The table therefore shows a regional analysis.

Total Income[1] liable to tax 1986-87

	Per taxpayer[2]		per head of population at mid-1986
Region	£	UK=100	£	UK=100
North	11,000	95	3,800	92
Yorkshire and Humberside	11,300	98	3,700	91
North West	11,200	97	3,800	93
East Midlands	11,000	95	3,800	92
West Midlands	10,900	94	3,900	94
East Anglia	11,400	98	3,900	94
South East	12,600	109	4,800	116
South West	11,200	97	4,000	99
Wales	10,400	90	3,200	78
Scotland	10,800	94	3,600	88
Northern Ireland	10,700	93	2,900	71
United Kingdom	11,500	100	4,100	100

[1] Income liable to tax before deductions and personal allowances. The previous reply was in terms of taxable income—that is income liable to tax after deductions and allowances.

[2] Counting only those taxpayers whose incomes are large enough for them to be liable to tax.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current estimated income cost of the rebasing of capital gains tax to 1982 enacted in the Finance Act 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 24 April 1989]: Updated estimates of the effect on receipts in 1989-90 are reductions of £55 million for capital gains tax and £250 million for corporation tax.

Premium Bonds

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what public consultations were carried out by the director of savings prior to his decision to increase the minimum purchase of premium bonds from £10 to £100 and to abolish premium bond gift tokens;

(2) what consultations he carried out regarding (a) the increase in the minimum purchase of premium bonds from £10 to £100 and (b) the abolition of the premium bond gift tokens.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 28 April 1989]: These decisions were taken by Treasury Ministers in the usual way. They keep the terms of all National Savings products under constant review, and make changes whenever they consider them necessary. Minimum purchases of £10 may still be made by parents, grandparents and guardians on behalf of children under 16.

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will instruct the director of savings to defer to 1 January 1990 the increase in the minimum purchase of premium bonds from £10 to £100 and the abolition of premium bond gift tokens.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 28 April 1989]: No.

Company Pension Funds

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the value of company pension fund contribution holidays in the United Kingdom in each of the past two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 3 May 1989]: Full information in the form requested is not available. Information from large self-administered pension schemes proposing contribution holidays to reduce surpluses following the legislation in the Finance Act 1986 is as follows:

Schemes proposing a contribution holiday

	Number	Amount (£ million)
Schemes reporting in 1987-88	67	58
Schemes reporting between April 1988 and January 1989	157	236

Note:
The figures represent the total amount of surplus to be eliminated by means of a contribution holiday by schemes which have reported in each period. The contribution holiday may be spread across several years. Schemes proposing a reduction in contributions rather than a contribution holiday are not included in the above.

Electoral Register

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue makes use of the information from electoral registers for taxation purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 4 May 1989]: When appropriate the Inland Revenue uses the electoral register and other publicly available information in its efforts to ensure that everyone pays the right tax.

European Monetary System

Mr. Soames: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what assessment he has made of the advantages which would accrue to British industry by virtue of United Kingdom membership of the European monetary system.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 5 May 1989]: I have been asked to reply.

I refer my hon. Friend to the speech which my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made to the Royal Institute of International Affairs at Chatham house on 25 January and to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Holland with Boston (Sir R. Body) on 20 January 1989 at column 358.

Incomes

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest estimate for net disposal income after mortgage payments in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Major [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The most recently available figures are for 1986: these were given in my reply to my hon. Friend on 1 March 1988 at column 503. It is expected that the estimates for 1987 will be available in July.

Standard of Living

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give his latest estimate of the increase in the standard of living of (a) a single man and (b) a married man with two children and a wife who is not in paid employment on (i) half average earnings, (ii) three-quarters average earnings, (iii) average earnings and (iv) one and a half times average earnings since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 5 May 1989]: Latest estimates for increases in real take-home pay between 1978-79 and 1989-90 are given in the table.

Percentage increase in real take home pay 1978-79 to 1989-90[1]

	Multiples of average male earnings[2]
	½	¾	1	1½
Single person	31	34	36	40
Married man with wife not in paid employment and 2 children[3]	24	28	31	36

[1] Financial year average of pre- and post-October regimes for employees' National Insurance Contributions, using illustrative growth rates between 1988-89 and 1989-90 of 7½ per cent. in average earnings and 6 per cent. in prices.
[2] Full time males on adult rates (all occupations).
[3] Children assumed to be under 11, and child benefit included in figures to allow comparison with 1978-79 when child tax allowances were still being phased out.

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 May, if he will express the value of North sea oil and gas revenues in fiscal years 1979-80 to 1988-89 in current prices.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The value of North sea oil and gas revenues given in the answer of 2 May was expressed in current prices. More detailed information on North sea oil and gas revenues is published by the Department of Energy in the annual Brown Book.

National Insurance

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the distribution of the benefit of the proposed national insurance contribution changes amongst employees ranked into deciles of earnings.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The Government Actuary's Department estimate that for 1990-91, the first full year for which the new contribution rates will apply, the decile of employees with the lowest earnings will gain £80 million. The second lowest decile will gain £120 million. The remaining eight deciles will each gain £325 million; a total gain for all employees of £2·8 billion.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Prime Minister how many parliamentary questions in the past 12 months have received the answer that the requested information can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware three questions addressed to me within the past 12 months have fallen into the disproportionate cost category.

Works of Art

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Prime Minister if she will publish a table showing the works of art, objects or artefacts currently on loan from public galleries and museums at (a) Lancaster house, (b) Dorney Wood, (c) the Chevening estate and (d) Chequers.

The Prime Minister: The furnishings and other contents of Lancaster house are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for the Environment, and of the houses at Dorney Wood, Chevening and Chequers of the relevant trust bodies.

Single European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Stafford (Mr. Cash) on 2 May, Official Report column 16, if she will make a statement setting out the procedures which she has advised her Ministers to follow after the passing of the Single European Act to prevent (a) an undue volume of community directives, (b) harmonisation measures regarded by Her Majesty's Government as unnecessary and (c) the extension of the powers of the Commission beyond those envisaged by Her Majesty's Government when the Single Act was approved.

The Prime Minister: I shall ensure that the Government will continue to examine very carefully all proposals for EC legislation, to ensure that they are necessary to achieve the aims and objectives of the treaty of Rome as amended by the Single European Act and that they fall within agreed Community competence.

Government Information Officers

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will publish in the Official Report the text of Mr. Ingham's letter to Ms. Elizabeth Jenkins on a code of ethics for Government information officers.

The Prime Minister: No.

Government Agencies

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Miniser if she will list all Government agencies (a) which individuals can join as members and (b) which seek sponsorship from private companies.

The Prime Minister: This information is not held centrally.

HEALTH

General Practitioners

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements he intends to make for general practitioners to attend suitable courses in business management to enable them to implement the relevant proposals in the National Health Service White Paper "Working for Patients".

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We shall be bringing forward proposals in due course to enable eligible general practitioners who opt to have practice budgets to ensure that the practice has the necessary management skills available to it.

Drug Budgets

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what adjustments he intends to make to the concept of indicative drug budgets to ensure that general practitioners who have high cost patients, such as the elderly and the chronic sick, on their practice lists are not financially penalised for prescribing treatment.

Mr. Mellor: The amount allocated to a practice for its indicative prescribing budget will fully reflect the presence on the practice's list of patients, such as the elderly and the chronic sick, who need a greater volume of drugs or more expensive drugs than others. No doctor will be penalised for prescribing necessary treatment to any patient. We expect doctors to examine their prescribing patterns to ensure that they prescribe only when and for as long as necessary and, where there is a choice of equally effective products, to prescribe the cheapest.

Medical Accidents

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why information on awards to victims of medical accidents in respect of health authorities in England is not held centrally; and if he has any plans to gather such information.

Mr. Freeman: Awards for medical accidents in excess of £100,000 are notified to the Department. Awards below that figure fall within the delegated limits for authorities and are not notified separately to the centre. The Department is considering whether further information about medical accidents is needed and if so how it may be obtained.

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he plans to issue further advice to health authorities concerning appropriate action to be taken towards patients alleging medical accidents.

Mr. Freeman: Action in response to complaints by patients (including allegations about treatment and medical accidents) should be taken in accordance with directions issued with circular HC(88)37 on hospital complaints procedures. No further advice is contemplated.

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to review the weight given to the interests of patients in relation to negotiations between health authorities and medical insurance organisations in the event of medical accidents.

Mr. Freeman: Negotiations between health authorities and medical defence organisations occur only when there is a prospect of a successful civil claim by a patient against a health authority or a medical practitioner represented by a medical defence organisation in respect of a medical accident. These negotiations are currently regulated by the terms of the agreement contained in memorandum HM(54)32. In such matters I would expect the best interests of the litigant patient to be protected by his or own legal advisors.

However we are currently consulting interested organisations on proposals whereby health authorities would indemnify medical and dental staff working in the NHS. This would bring them into line with other NHS staff who are already so covered. It is proposed that henceforth there will be no need for clinicians to be independently insured and therefore represented by medical defence organisations (although some may still wish to do so). This will necessarily involve review of the HM(54)32 agreement and in this regard my hon. Friend may be assured that the interests of NHS patients will be fully taken into account.

Operating Department Assistants

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the National Health Service Training Authority to report on competence based training for operating department assistants.

Mr. Mellor: The NHSTA has outlined a preliminary schedule of competences for operating department assistants which has been circulated for consultation. Work on a proposal to take forward the development of a national vocational qualification for operating department assistants is planned to start next month.

Blood Products

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is (a) the volume and value of blood products imported and (b) the percentage of the total blood products supply in the United Kingdom that comes from imports in each year since 1983; and whether any checks are made as to whether such products originate from blood that is sold rather than donated.

Mr. Freeman: The information held centrally about the level of imported blood products relates only to factor VIII concentrate and is given in the table.

Blood products imported into the United Kingdom are sourced from both blood that has been donated and purchased. The manufacturing sites of overseas manufacturers of licensed blood products (imported into the United Kingdom) are routinely inspected by or on behalf of the medicines inspectorate of the medicines control agency. One aim of these inspections is to ensure that the blood used is of good quality and is acceptable for use in the manufacture of the products concerned. Furthermore, samples of all commercially imported batches of blood products are routinely submitted to the national institute for biological standards and control for testing to ensure that they conform to laid down standards of quality.

Self-governing Hospitals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in considering the issue of self-governing status in respect of hospitals falling within the Islington district, what degree of priority he will attach to (a) the views of the chairman of the district health authority and (b) the voted views of the district health authority, the community health council, and the consultants at the respective hospitals.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: When I come to consider individual applications, I aim to take proper account of the views of all those with an interest.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the list of hospitals that each regional health authority has proposed to become self-governing hospitals.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: RHAs are still receiving and considering expressions of interest from hospitals. They have been asked to submit these to the Department by 31 May.

Tranquillisers

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many complaints have been made to (a) family practitioner committees and (b) the General Medical Council regarding the prescribing of benzodiazepine drugs for periods of time greater than those recommended by the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally. The right hon. Member may wish to contact the General Medical Council direct.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South of 26 April, Official Report, column 552, if he will commission a sample survey to discover how many of the 23,185,000 prescriptions for benzodiazepines dispensed in 1987 were repeat prescriptions being given on a long or medium-term basis.

Mr. Mellor: The Government have made every effort to ensure that doctors are aware of the problems which can arise from prolonged treatment with these drugs and to encourage good prescribing habits. In addition, the most recent guidance from the Committee on Safety of Medicines issued in January 1988 is repeated in the twice-yearly British National Formulary. It is now up to all doctors using their clinical judgment to take heed of this advice when deciding on the most appropriate treatment for each individual patient. A survey of repeat prescriptions would not be of additional value.

Nurses

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) state registered nurses, (b) state enrolled nurses and (c) auxiliary nurses are employed in each health authority in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) on 16 January at columns 115-118 for the information for England.

The information relating to Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Wales.

Residential Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretry of State for Health if he will make it his policy to seek to ensure that elderly persons in residential care are encouraged and enabled to manage their own finances whenever possible rather than being made to surrender their pension books and personal allowances.

Mr. Mellor: I agree that people in residential care homes should be encouraged to manage their own financial affairs whenever they are capable of doing so. We are considering whether guidance should be issued on the conduct of residents' financial affairs, taking into account the recommendations in the Wagner report on residential care.

GPs (Overprescribing)

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretry of State for Health how many investigations of general practitioners for overprescribing have taken place in England since the National Health Service Committee Tribunal Regulations (S.I. 1974 No. 455) came into effect.

Mr. Mellor: There have been no referrals under Regulation 16 of the NHS (Service Committees and Tribunal) Regulations since 1974.

Support Tights

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make support tights available on prescription in addition to support stockings.

Mr. Mellor: No. I am satisfied that the present prescribable range of support stockings fully meets the clinical needs of most patients who require compression hosiery. If the equivalent tights were made available on GP prescription it would add to NHS costs without benefit to patients.

WALES

Inward Investment

5. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level of inward investment in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: Wales continues to attract very high levels of inward investment. In terms of related new jobs, Wales' share of inward investment to the United Kingdom was 20 per cent. in 1987. The provisional figures for 1988 indicate that this has increased to 22 per cent. This compares with 6 per cent. in 1979. Projects secured from abroad and the United Kingdom in 1988 promise over 11,000 new jobs and nearly £1·2 billion of capital investment.

Committee of Welsh District Councils

16. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last met the Association of District Councils in Wales; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the Committee of Welsh District Councils at a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government finance on 8 December to discuss the Welsh rate support grant settlement for 1989-90.

Energy Conservation

17. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his Department is doing to promote energy conservation in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department's energy efficiency plan for 1989 is published today, and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Prince of Wales Orthopaedic Hospital, Rhydlafar

18. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the future of the children's ward at the Prince of Wales orthopaedic hospital, Rhydlafar, South Glamorgan

Mr. Grist: We have received eight representations concerning the future of the ward.

British Coal

19. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next intends to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss matters relating to its operations in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: I am in regular touch with the chairman of British Coal on matters relating to the corporation's operations in Wales.

Development Control

20. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what planning guidelines his Department intends to use for development control.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office continues to have regard to the planning guidance contained in planning policy and minerals planning guidance notes, departmental circulars and development control policy notes.

Psychiatric Patients

21. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what existing or interim arrangements there are for providing medium-secure facilities for psychiatric patients from Wales.

Mr. Grist: Secure facilities are available at Whitchurch hospital, Cardiff and North Wales hospital, Denbigh. Patients may also be referred to hospitals in England. Plans for four purpose-built medium secure units have been announced and discussions are in progress for the development of the first two. Arrangements are in hand to appoint the consultant forensic psychiatrist who, with the senior nurse already in post, will have a major role in planning and running the units.

Acid Rain

22. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received regarding the problem of acid rain in Wales.

Mr. Grist: We have received a number of representations from hon. Members, and organisations such as the Welsh water authority, the Wales tourist board, Snowdonia national park, the Country Landowners Association, Friends of the Earth Cymru, the Wales Green party and indvidual members of the public.

North Wales (Strategy)

23. Mr. Raffan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress being made in developing a strategy for North Wales following the Minister of State's examination of the implications of the completion of the A55.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I am engaged in a series of meetings with the local authorities, which I hope to complete during the summer, to discuss opportunities in tourism, commerce and industry and how these can best be tackled.

Labour Statistics

24. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the change in the total number employed in Wales during the past two years.

Mr. Peter Walker: Between December 1986 and December 1988, the latest date for which information is available, the civilian work force in employment in Wales increased by 35,000. There have also been increases in the self-employed and those in higher education.

Epilepsy Association

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the Welsh Office received a grant application from the Wales Epilepsy Association; whether a reply has been sent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: An application for grant made under section 64 of the Health Service and Public Health Act 1968 was received from the Wales Epilepsy Association in November 1988. The application was considered along with bids for funding under this section of the Act received from other voluntary organisations, and a reply was sent to the association on 3 May 1989.

Quarrying (Taff Ely)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy not to sanction any new quarrying in and around Taff Ely which might result in the despoilation of the remaining ridges, skylines, visible hillsides and forests of that area.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend can give no assurances relating to decisions which he may have to take in any particular area. General planning principles and policy considerations for mineral workings are described in mineral planning guidance note No. 1, issued jointly by the Welsh Office and the Department of the Environment in January 1988.

Public Houses (Tenancies)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the likely effect of the recommendations of the recent Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the brewing industry on the livelihood of sitting tenants of public houses in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the supply of beer in the United Kingdom made a number of recommendations aimed at improving the position of tenants. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry has said that he is minded to implement the recommendations. He has also indicated that he is willing to receive representations on matters of concern.

Coal Imports

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the quantity of United States coal which has been imported via Newport docks and on its final destination.

Mr. Peter Walker: This is an operational matter for the importer, in this case the Central Electricity Generating Board. I am, however, aware of the board's announcement on 17 April of its intention to import 35,000 tonnes of American coal into Newport docks for trans-shipment to its Aberthaw power station.

River Taff (Pollution)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has assessed the extent to which the Welsh water authority's treatment plants in the Mid-Glamorgan area have been contributors to the accumulation of pollution and litter in the River Taff and its tributaries over the past three years.

Mr. Grist: No such assessment has been made.

A470-Porth Link Road

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on progress of the planned restructuring-refurbishment of the A473-A4058 link road between the A470 and Porth in Rhondda.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This is a matter for Mid Glamorgan county council as local highway authority.

Welsh Water Authority (Monitoring Building)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what sum has been allocated by the Welsh Office to help the Welsh water authority construct a reinforced, bunkered monitoring building at its south-eastern division headquarters at Nelson, Mid Glamorgan.

Mr. Grist: The Department has undertaken to make a grant of £279,959 towards the cost of construction of the control and command centre at Nelson.

Heads of the Valleys Road

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to authorise the upgrading to dual-carriageway status of the whole length of the Heads of the Valleys trunk road.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Traffic flows on the Heads of the Valleys road are well within the road's capacity. Trends in traffic growth will be kept under review.

Channel Tunnel

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to agree to any investment proposals by British Rail to upgrade its Reading-Redhill-Ashford line in order to provide south Wales with a direct, high-speed rail access for passengers and freight to the Channel tunnel.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. British Rail has not yet made proposals to the Government for Channel tunnel passenger and freight services. Careful consideration will be given to its proposals at the appropriate time.

Severn Crossing

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take steps to ensure that a second crossing of the Severn will be in place by 1995.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Subject to the present excellent rate of progress being maintained by the Department of Transport, a second crossing could be completed in 1995. My right hon. Friend will continue to give this important project his full support.

Overseas Investment

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of overseas investment into the United Kingdom Wales currently receives.

Mr. Peter Walker: In terms of related new jobs, Wales' share of inward investment was 20 per cent. in 1987. The provisional figures for 1988 indicate that this has increased to 22 per cent. This compares with 6 per cent. in 1979.

Beaches

14. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that beaches in Wales meet the European Community standards of cleanliness.

Mr. Grist: None. There are no European Community standards of cleanliness for beaches.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost of each of (a) Colwyn bay and (b) Inmel bay of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall and (iii) full sewage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with European Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solution will be put in place giving the estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Grist: The authority is currently reviewing its programme of works, which aims to achieve compliance of all listed waters. The full cost of the programme has yet to be evaluated. The hon. Gentleman will be aware that the waters at Colwyn bay have complied with the standards of the directive over the past three years.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library the detailed coliform and E. coli results of all samples collected in the summer of 1988 for each of the 48 beaches summarised in deposited document NS 4754.

Mr. Grist: This information is contained on the public registers maintained by the Welsh water authority.

Young Farmers

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the assistance which his Department makes to help young farmers.

Mr. Peter Walker: Young farmers (under 40) with an approved improvement plan under the farm and conservation grant scheme can qualify for a 25 per cent. increase in the total grant they receive. In addition officers of the agricultural development and advisory service are always ready to help young farmers who need advice.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give by area the number of cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy reported in each of the past three years and the number reported in each of the past 12 months.

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in each county in Wales during 1987, 1988 and 1989 (to 28 April) was:

County	Number of cases
	1987	1988	1989
Clwyd	0	13	19
Dyfed	8	64	79
Mid Glamorgan	0	5	5
South Glamorgan	0	8	9
West Glamorgan	0	1	1
Gwent	0	20	24

County	Number of cases 1987	1988	1989
Gwynedd	0	7	8
Powys	0	13	10

There were no reported cases in 1986.

The number of reported cases in Wales in each of the past 12 months is as follows:

	1988 May	June	July	August	September	October	November	December	1989 January	February	March	April
Clwyd	3	0	0	1	1	3	3	1	3	4	2	10
Dyfed	5	3	2	15	12	3	9	13	10	20	20	29
Mid Glamorgan	0	0	1	0	1	0	1	2	2	0	2	1
South Glamorgan	3	0	0	0	1	0	1	3	3	1	2	3
Gwent	1	1	0	3	4	0	3	5	4	9	4	7
Gwynedd	3	0	0	1	0	1	0	1	1	2	1	4
Powys	1	0	2	0	3	5	1	0	2	3	2	3

Farm and Conservation Grant

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action is being taken by his Department to ensure that farmers can obtain application forms for the new farm and conservation grant.

Mr. Peter Walker: Application forms to join the farm and conservation grant scheme are held by the divisional offices of WOAD. Claim forms are currently being printed and are expected to be available from the divisional offices this week.

Land (Planning Permission)

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the amount of land for which planning permission is granted but on which no subsequent development takes place within the permitted time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the number of applications for regional selective assistance received between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989, (b) the number of the above applications that have been processed and (c) the total amount of money paid out in that period.

Mr. Peter Walker: Two hundred and sixty-five applications for regional selective assistance grants were received by my Department and 202 of these processed in the period from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989. The total amount of grant paid out over the same period was £36·2 million[1].

Note: [1] RSA project and training grants.

Innovation Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the total number of applications received for innovation grants from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, (b) the total number of applications approved, (c) the total amount of expenditure involved and (d) the total estimated expenditure planned for that period and the estimated expenditure for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the regional enterprise grant scheme 120 applications for innovation projects were received by my Department and 31 offers of grant to the value of £598,165 were made in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 20 March 1989 for details of planned and future expenditure provision.

Investment Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the total number of applications received for investment grants from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, (b) the total number of applications approved, (c) the total amount of expenditure involved and (d) the total estimated expenditure planned for that period and the estimated expenditure for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the regional enterprise grant scheme 319 applications for investment projects were received by my Department and 135 offers of grant to the value of £818,460 were made in the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 20 March 1989 for details of planned and future expenditure provision.

Regional Development Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the number of applications for regional development grants outstanding on 31 March 1988, (b) the number of those outstanding applications that have subsequently been processed, (c) the number of applications that are still outstanding and (d) the total amount of money paid out in regional development grants to those applicants.

Mr. Peter Walker: All 1,935 applications for revised regional development grant (RDG II) outstanding on 31 March 1988 have been actioned, and decisions had been made on 1,855 by 31 March 1989 leaving a balance of 80. Payments authorised on these applications total £14·8 million. Total expenditure on RDG II during the 1988-89 financial year was £45 million.

SCOTLAND

Social Security (Glasgow, Provan)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will restore in 1989 moneys the budgets of the Department of Social Security offices in Glasgow, Provan to 1988-89 levels.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

No. Allocations were made in accordance with a national allocation formula which applied to all local offices. A note explaining the basis on which the 1989-90 allocations were calculated is in the Library.

The allocations of both Glasgow, Provan and Glasgow, Parkhead local offices represent £114 per head of their respective income support caseloads compared with the average allocation per head for Great Britain of £46.

Tree Planting

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what assessment his Department has made of the impact upon the number of trees planted of the 1988 Budget and the ending of schedule D reliefs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many trees have been planted (a) in the last year and (b) in the 10 years before the 1988 Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The amount of tree planting grant aided by the Forestry Commission since 1979 is shown in the following table. As the figures for the year to 31 March 1989 include a substantial amount of planting which was carried out before the 1988 Budget, or subsequently with the benefit of transitional tax reliefs, it is too early to say what impact the changes made in that Budget will have on planting levels.

Schools (Books and Equipment)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information available is given in the following tables which have been compiled from local authority financial returns. Expenditure on equipment was not separately identified in these returns until 1982-83. There have been some variations from year to year in the recording of expenditure under these two headings. In particular some of the figures for expenditure on library books may include some expenditure on items of equipment.

Private Roads

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department intends to implement the recommendation in the Stodart report that private roads which form part of a public highway network should be taken over by the highways authorities.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Cognisance has already been taken of the recommendation of the Stodart report in the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984. I shall write to the hon. Member explaining the details of this.

SSHA (Rent Increase)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why he recommended a minimum rent increase of 9·74 per cent. for tenants of the Scottish Special Housing Association, Scottish Homes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State recommended a minimum average rent increase of £1·80 per week, which was a 9·55 per cent. increase, to the Scottish Special Housing Association. This recommendation was based on projections of costs and income and was set at a level which would sustain a reasonable level of repairs and maintenance of the stock. It was for the association's council of management to decide on the actual rent increase.

Adam House, Edinburgh

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the ownership and state of repair of the Adam house, Mavisbank, in Edinburgh.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand that ownership of Mavisbank house is shared jointly by three citizens of the United States of America. The house is presently derelict. Emergency works were carried out in 1987, at public expense, to safeguard the stability of the house.

Social Work Department (Strathclyde Region)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of Strathclyde region social work department; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such meetings have been requested or held.

Nurses

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) state registered nurses, (b) state enrolled nurses and (c) auxiliary nurses are employed in each health board in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is set out in the table.

Agriculture Guidance and Guarantee Fund

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount of European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund moneys in respect of the various schemes from 1988-89.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Details of contributions and receipts in 1988-89 will be presented to Parliament later this year in the appropriation accounts for expenditure class XVI relating to agricultural support for which the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland has responsibility. Provisional outturn figures for the year are set out in the table. To these amounts should be added the Scottish share of market support expenditure incurred by the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce which in the United Kingdom in 1988-89 is currently estimated to be £984 million.

GPs (Overprescribing)

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions of general practitioners for overprescribing have taken place in Scotland by the health board in the last (a) five years, (b) 10 years and (c) 15 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Financial penalties for overprescribing are normally imposed by health boards on general practitioners only where advice and guidance have failed to have effect. Such penalties have been imposed in four cases in the last five years, in nine cases in the last 10 years and in 12 cases in the last 15 years.

Pre-school Education

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any proposals to assist local authorities to extend the provision of pre-school education to children in their area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The planning figure for nursery education included in the revenue support grant settlement has been increased by almost 15 per cent. between 1988-89 and 1989-90. It is, however, for local authorities to determine the level of provision of nursery education in their area in the light of local need and competing priorities.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has regarding the proportion of children aged three years and four years who are in receipt of local authority provided nursery education in each islands and regional council in Scotland; and if he will give the equivalent figures for 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish) on 17 January at column 62.

Buses (Privatisation)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which local authority bus groups public limited companies are still under the ownership of the regional councils in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The bus companies concerned are Tayside Public Transport Company Ltd, Strathclyde Buses Ltd and Lothian Region Transport plc.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to require local authority bus public limited companies to introduce schemes to encourage the privatisation of their respective companies.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The Government wish to encourage local authorities to privatise their bus companies. The possibility of seeking statutory powers to require them to do so has not been ruled out.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give assistance to the employees and management of the Tayside bus groups in its scheme to privatise the groups, along the lines of that provided to the Scottish bus groups.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The arrangements for any proposed sale of Tayside Public Transport Company Ltd are a matter for Tayside regional council. My right hon. and learned Friend's responsibility is limited to approving any such sale.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Greenhouse Effect

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy at the next Council of Agriculture Ministers' meeting to take steps to initiate a European study on the effects of sea rise from the greenhouse global warming effect on low-lying agricultural land.

Mr. Ryder: Atmospheric warming is of global significance and there will be a range of consequences. The effect on low-lying agricultural land is one of the many aspects which will need to be studied. But research into the greenhouse effect is still at a relatively early stage, and specialised studies such as this will be more appropriate later on.

For the moment there are several international studies and conferences taking place. For example, the United Kingdom is a participatory member of the intergovernmental panel on climate change, a worldwide organisation which is studying all aspects of global warming, and we are a party to joint studies with European researchers to investigate the potential effects to the coastline of a rise in sea level.

Quality of Life

Mr. P[illegible]ey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Farming and Fisheries if he will set out in the Official Report details of the policies introduced by him since 1983 with the intention of improving the quality of life for farming communities.

Mr. Ryder: Since 1983 we have introduced a wide range of measures, including those set out below, intended to further the interests of farming communities as a whole. Some measures have been designed with more remote rural areas in mind.

There have been a number of important changes in capital grant schemes since 1983. These were designed to increase assistance for investments which have a positive impact on the farm environment and the wider rural economy. On 1 December 1983 grants for hedge and shelter belt planting and traditional wall building were increased from 50 per cent. to 60 per cent. in the less-favoured areas, while grants for hedge removal were withdrawn.

The agriculture improvement scheme, introduced on 1 October 1985, extended higher rates of grant to environmental improvements in the lowlands. It also offered grants of 60 per cent. in the LFAs, and 30 per cent. elsewhere, for the installation and upgrading of facilities to prevent farm pollution.

The farm and conservation grant scheme introduced on 20 February 1989 extended the range of conservation items to include repairs to traditional buildings and the regeneration of heather moors and native woodlands. Lowland grants for facilities to handle farm effluent were increased to 50 per cent.

The farm diversification grant scheme introduced on 1 January 1988 offers grants of 25 per cent. towards the capital costs of establishing a wide range of diversified non-agricultural businesses on farms. These can bring additional employment to farmers and their families as well as broadening the farm income base.

Since 1987 we have established 10 environmentally sensitive areas in England, covering over 300,000 hectares of land. There are now 19 ESAs in the United Kingdom covering over 790,000 hectares. This represents a considerable commitment to helping to protect some of the most beautiful parts of the country. The voluntary scheme, which encourages environmentally beneficial agricultural practices, has been very popular among farmers in the designated areas and was warmly welcomed by the countryside agencies.

The farm woodland scheme launched on 1 October 1988 has several objectives, including the creation of an alternative source of income and rural employment, and the provision of environmental benefits. Initial take-up of the scheme has been very encouraging with over 5,700 hectares worth of applications in the first six months.

The set-aside scheme, introduced last year, offers support for producers reducing surplus production and new land-use opportunities for the enterprising farmer. The set-aside scheme also contains a good deal for the environment. There are statutory rules for the maintenance of land fallowed under set-aside designed to keep it in good condition and minimise the risk of nitrate leaching. Only some pesticides and fertilisers can be used and only then in special circumstances. Environmental features like trees, hedges and watercourses must be maintained.

The agricultural holdings legislation underwent major changes in 1984 following lengthy consultation with the industry. A new rent formula was introduced, statutory succession was ended for new tenancies and a number of other technical changes were made.

We have negotiated improvements in the EC milk quota system allowing producers greater flexibility to make use of available quota by leasing arrangements and other means. In conjunction with prudent market management measures, quota restraints have contributed towards the recent recovery in dairy farm incomes.

In 1984 we extended the less-favoured areas by 1·2 million hectares. As a result 26,550 holdings became eligible for hill livestock compensatory allowances and enhanced rates of capital grant. As part of the 1989-90 price fixing it was agreed that all milk producers in less-favoured areas should not pay the milk co-responsibility levy.

Pigs (Sweat Box System)

Dr. Glyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has had as a result of the Farm Animals Welfare Council's recommendations banning the sweat box system for keeping pigs; and what action he is taking.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The Government consulted a wide range of interested organisations on this and other recommendations made by the Farm Animal Welfare Council on pig production systems, and took account of their comments in preparing their response, which was published in March. We shall be seeking to have a ban implemented on a European Community basis.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his replies of Thursday 27 April, Official Report, column 678, and Friday 14 April, Official Report, column 748, to the hon. Member for Caerphilly, why information concerning ante-mortem inspections of cattle is not available for 1989.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The number of cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy identified at markets and slaughterhouses is monitored but the information is not held centrally at present. We are making arrangements to do so and will let the hon. Member have the information requested when it is available.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about increasing the compensation for bovine spongiform encephalopathy from 50 per cent. to 100 per cent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received a number of representations seeking an increase in the level of compensation. I believe however that compensation of 50 per cent. is fair, given that the animals are suffering from a terminal illness and are, for practical purposes, valueless but are in fact valued as if unaffected by the disease.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give by area the number of cases of bovine spongiform encephalophathy reported in each of the past three years and the number reported in each of the past 12 months.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The information requested for England, broken down by county, is as follows:

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received concerning the raising of the suckler cow premium to the level of the European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I have received numerous representations urging payment of the suckler cow premium at the maximum permissible amount (which would include both the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund contribution and the discretionary contribution from national funds).

These representations have been carefully considered and I hope to be in a position to make a statement shortly.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to be able to make an announcement about the amount of the Government's contribution to the new suckler cow premium; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: An announcement on the rate of the suckler cow premium will be made before the start of the new scheme year on 15 June.

TRANSPORT

Detonators and Explosives (Transport)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to strengthen the law as it relates to the transportation of detonators and high explosives in the same vehicle on roads in Wales.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 4 April, at columns 66-67.

The new Road Traffic (Carriage of Explosives) Regulations were laid before Parliament on 11 April and come into force on 3 July this year.

Western Environmental Improvement Route

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has made, or will make, an environmental impact assessment on the western environment improvement route; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No decision will be taken on the western environmental improvement route until the west London assessment study has been completed later this year. If it is then decided to proceed with the scheme, an environmental assessment will be produced in accordance with the Highways (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1988 (S.I. 1988/1241).

NERC (Research Projects)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the research projects undertaken for his Department by the Natural Environment Research Council during the past five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None.

Car Telephones

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many road accidents, for each of the last five years, mobile car telephones have been a contributory factor.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This information is not available. One case has been brought to our attention in recent correspondence where the use of an in-car telephone may have been a contributory factor. The guidance in the Highway Code is clear—do not use a hand-held phone while driving.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many prosecutions there have been for road traffic offences connected with the use of mobile car telephones.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1987 over 87,500 motorists were found guilty of careless driving. Information is not available on how many of these offences involved the use of in-car telephones.

Exhaust Emissions

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the regulations covering the emission of fumes from vehicle exhausts; and if he has any proposals to review them.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The regulations and relevant amendments are:

Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 (S.I. 1986 No. 1078), Regulation 61.
Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) (Amendment) (No. 6) Regulations 1988 (S.I. 1988 No. 1524).
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) Regulations 1982 (S.I. 1982 No. 1271), Regulation 4.
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 697).
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1986 (S.I. 1986 No. 427).
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1987 (S.I. 1987 No. 1508).
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval for Goods Vehicles) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1988 (S.I. 1988 No. 1523)
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval) (Great Britain) Regulations 1984 (S.I. 1984 No. 981), Regulation 4.
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1987 (S.I. 1987 No. 1509).
Motor Vehicles (Type Approval) (Great Britain) (Amendment) Regulations 1988 (S.I. 1988 No. 1522).

We shall amend the regulations to enforce the provisions of Community Directives 88/77/EEC and 88/436/EEC.

Tighter standards for all categories of vehicle are still under negotiation in the Community. When these are agreed, we shall make further amendments to the regulations.

Parkland Walk, Hornsey

Sir Hugh Rossi: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many letters he has received opposing the Ove Arup suggestions for use of the Parkland walk, Hornsey, as a roadway; and at what rate per week such letters are currently being received.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Many. The weekly rate varies. There is, too, opposition to the re-use of the rail line.

Air Transport

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has considered the implications for his policy on air transport of the judgment by the Court of Session in the case brought by Air 2000; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Channon [pursuant to the reply, 2 May, 1989 column 119]: I am making new traffic distribution rules for Scotland, taking proper account of the written judgment of the Court of Session, to ensure that effect continues to be given to the Government's Scottish lowland airports policy, as set out in the 1985 White Paper (Cmnd. 9542).

The White Paper said that this policy, under which Prestwick is designated as the gateway for long-haul flights, would be reviewed if by 1989 there had not been a steady improvement in Prestwick's financial results. Earlier this year, the chairman of BAA plc requested an immediate review on general grounds.

Though Prestwick's financial position has in fact enjoyed a steady improvement, I have nevertheless considered the BAA request and have consulted my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland. I have concluded that a review of current policy would not be appropriate.

The Government are, however, conscious of the belief that Prestwick would be better able to play its part in meeting demand for air transport in Scotland if it enjoyed better surface access. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is making a separate statement about this.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Overseas Students

36. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many students on Overseas Development Administration grants, and from which countries of origin, are currently studying in the United Kingdom; what is the comparable information for five, 10 and 15 years ago; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: More than 14,350 overseas students were studying in the United Kingdom on ODA grants, or held grants from organisations financed from the aid programme, in the 1988-89 financial year. I shall arrange for a list of their countries of origin to be published in the Official Report. Comparable figures for 1983, 1978 and 1973 were 11,847, 14,387 and 14,970 respectively.

The information for students on ODA grants is as follows:

West Bank and Gaza Strip

37. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has for increasing aid in the current and next financial year to the West Bank and Gaza Strip; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: We aim to increase our bilateral programme to the West Bank and Gaza to over £1 million this year. Our contribution to the budget of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian Refugees rose to £5·25 million last year and has been increased to £5·5 million this year; in addition we are providing £0·25 million for a special study of housing.

Kampuchea

38. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give figures for the level of Her Majesty's Government's aid given to Kampuchea in 1988; and if he will make a statement on future aid policy for Kampuchea.

Mr. Chris Patten: Aid to Cambodia amounted to £402,000 in the 1988-89 financial year. This comprised a contribution of £100,000 to the special FAO/World Food Programme appeal, £250,000 to the UNICEF programme, and £52,000 on projects administered by British voluntary agencies.

It is still too early to consider the provision of Government-to-Government aid. We will reconsider the position when Vietnam has fully withdrawn from its illegal occupation of Cambodia and an acceptable political settlement is in place.

43. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give figures for the level of United Kingdom aid given to Kampuchea in 1988; and if he will make a statement on future aid policy for Kampuchea.

Mr. Chris Patten: Aid to Cambodia amounted to £402,000 in the 1988-89 financial year. This comprised a contribution of £100,000 to the special FAO/World Food Programme appeal, £250,000 to the UNICEF programme, and £52,000 on projects administered by British Voluntary agencies.

It is still too early to consider the provision of Government-to-Government aid. We will reconsider the position when Vietnam has fully withdrawn from its illegal occupation of Cambodia and an acceptable political settlement is in place.

Africa (Refugees)

39. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance his Department is providing for refugees in Africa.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1988 we provided nearly £31 million for refugees and displaced persons in Africa. This included Britain's share of the European Community's refugee assistance. So far this year we have announced a total of over £14 million in assistance for refugees and displaced persons in countries including Sudan, Mozambique, Malawi, Namibia and Uganda.

Namibia

40. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the Government have for aid to Namibia.

Mr. Chris Patten: I expect our programme to Namibia to continue its present focus on English language training and scholarships, on which we are spending £1·5 million this year. I have also announced £500,000 of aid to help repatriate refugees.

Women

41. Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British aid development policy in relation to women.

Mr. Chris Patten: Our recent booklet, "Women, Development and the British Aid Programme", copies of which are in the Library, explains our women in development policy and progress in implementing it.

Ethiopia (Somalian Refugees)

42. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of aid given by the United Kingdom to Somalian refugees in Ethiopia.

Mr. Chris Patten: Since the outbreak of the civil conflict in Somalia last year, we have provided assistance totalling some £2·45 million for Somali refugees in Ethiopia. We have provided a further £2·73 million in support of programmes, run by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, for the benefit of both Sudanese and Somali refugees in Ethiopia.

Amnesty International

44. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met Amnesty International to discuss human rights aspects of Her Majesty's Government's aid policy.

Mr. Chris Patten: Amnesty International is one of a number of human rights organisations with which Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers have regular consultations to discuss all aspects of human rights policy.

Child Health Care

45. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to support immunisation and other programmes to improve child health in the developing countries.

Mr. Chris Patten: We support immunisation programmes and other measures to improve child health care through our contributions to the United Nations Children's Fund and the special programmes of the World Health Organisation; through our bilaterally-funded health-care projects, including those financed jointly with non-governmental organisations; and through our support for research.

Nicaragua

46. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the level of aid given to Nicaragua by Her Majesty's Government in 1988, expressed as per capita sum of the population of Nicaragua.

Mr. Chris Patten: The level of aid given to Nicaragua by Her Majesty's Government in 1988 through the European Community, disaster relief and other channels was around £1·05 per capita.

AIDS

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the overseas development budget is devoted to helping overseas countries in their efforts against AIDS.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have committed over £17·6 million in support of activities aimed specifically at helping to prevent the further spread of AIDS. Of this, about £11 million was spent in the past two financial years, representing some 0·4 per cent. of the overseas aid budget for those years. Much of our help is given through the World Health Organisation. We are currently the third largest donor to its global programme on AIDS. This year, subject to parliamentary approval, we shall contribute a further £4·5 million to the programme.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, in the course of his examining the case for transferring Property Services Agency staff from Newmarket in the rural district of Forest Heath to the city of Cambridge, he took account of the submissions made to him by the Cambridgeshire Small Business Group about the impact on business and jobs and of the shortage and high cost of land in Cambridge and it's environs; how much land Property Services Agency now occupies at the Brooklands avenue site in Cambridge; how many civil servants of all Departments work there; what is his policy on accommodating civil servants in town centre sites in single storey accommodation built during the second world war; and whether, in view of his study of the housing situation in Cambridge, he will invite the Property Services Agency to reconsider its intention to abandon its site in Newmarket in favour of accommodation in Cambridge.

Mr. Chope: The site at Brooklands avenue, Cambridge, comprising some 30 acres, contains offices housing about 1,100 civil servants. The decision to transfer 49 Property Services Agency staff from Newmarket to Cambridge was taken some time ago on grounds of operational efficiency. It did not necessitate the acquisition of any more land. The chairman of the Cambridgeshire Small Business Group wrote to my right hon. Friend in March this year and has received a reply to the points he made in his letter. There is no reason to change the decision about the closure of the Property Services Agency office in Newmarket.

Brooklands Site, Cambridge

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest estimate of the market value with planning consent for residential use of the Brooklands site currently occupied by Government servants in Cambridge; how many square feet of office space are occupied per civil servant employed on this site; and what is the average space per office employee in (a) the city of Cambridge, (b) the town of Newmarket and (c) the London borough of Westminster.

Mr. Chope: The market value of land for housing in the Cambridge area is estimated to be around £650,000 an acre depending on size, location and planning constraints. The 1,100 staff at Brooklands avenue occupy about 175,000 sq ft of office and circulation space, an average of 159 sq ft each. These staff, like all civil servants throughout the country, are accommodated in accordance with nationally agreed space standards.

Sea Levels

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been commissioned into the likely effect of a rise in sea levels on wild birds which depend on Britain's estuaries and soft coasts; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Government Departments are currently spending nearly £13 million on research into climate change. Whilst some of this is related to the effects of a resulting rise in sea levels, none is directed specifically at the effects on birds habitats.

The Department has commissioned research to predict the effects of reductions in shore width caused by land claim on estuarine wading bird numbers. A report on this research will be available shortly. We intend to utilise and extend these studies to examine the impacts of reductions in shore width from the seaward side, resulting from sea levels rise.

Roman Remains (London)

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply of 18 April, Official Report, column 77, what is involved in preservation by record.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Preservation by record is a general term used to describe the process of documenting by means of photographic record, written report and where appropriate the display of the important artefacts/remains that have been uncovered in the course of an excavation.

Community Charge

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy to take steps to provide protection from double charging under the community charge system for an individual, who owns his own home and who is required to live in accommodation provided for him by his employer; if he will undertake consultations for this purpose; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what guidance he has issued to local authorities on the liability to community charge after April 1990 of a teacher in an independent boarding school who owns his own home at a distance from the school and lives in school accommodation either (a) as a condition of his employment or (b) for convenience, as to whether an exemption from either personal community charge or standard community charge will apply in any such case, and as to whether a maximum limit will be prescribed for the standard community charge in any such case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The Government have no plans to make any special provision for individuals in the circumstances described by my hon. Friend. Domestic property which is not used as a sole or main residence will give rise to a standard community charge.

In determining the level of the standard charge for their areas, local authorities already have a discretion to set this at a multiple of 0, ¼, 1, 1¼ or 2 of the personal charge.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the illustrative community charge levels for each local authority in England for 1989-90.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 April at column 532.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on (a) the means of distribution being used to distribute the household community charge leaflet and (b) the cost of this distribution.

Mr. Gummer: I have written to the hon. Member.

Longford Hall, Stretford

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what representations he has received concerning Longford hall, Stretford;

(2) if he will investigate allegations that work has taken place at Longford hall, Stretford in contravention of regulations affecting listed buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Representations have been received on behalf of the Longford District Conservation Area Association. These concerned the proposed sale of Longford hall, its present state of repair and works alleged to have been carried out without listed building consent.

It is primarily for Trafford metropolitan borough council, both as owners of the hall and as planning authority, to take all appropriate steps to secure the building from deterioration and to ensure compliance with listed building procedures. We understand from the council that the recent work was needed to clear up debris left by vandalism, and that security will be increased to deter further unauthorised access. It hopes soon to finalise its proposals for the future of the building.

Wimbledon Common

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the funding base for the upkeep of Wimbledon common.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are considering a proposal from the conservators of the common that they become a special levying body under provisions in the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the joint report of Friends of the Earth and Greenpeace called "Exposing the Faults: the Geological Case against Plans by Nirex to Dispose of Radioactive Waste".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not responded to the joint Friends of the Earth/Greenpeace report. Any proposal submitted by UK Nirex for the development of a deep repository for low and intermediate-level radioactive waste will have to satisfy the authorising Departments' assessment principles.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many studies regarding the geological formation of places which Nirex chose for the disposal of nuclear waste were carried out prior to such decisions; and who carried out the studies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In seeking to identify a preferred site for a radioactive waste repository, Nirex has followed the three-stage approach recommended by the International Atomic Energy Agency. This is outlined in Nirex's report to Government, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The report also lists the main contractors and consultants.

Bathing Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost for each of (a) Bispham, (b) Cleveleys, (c) Fleetwood and (d) Heysham—Half Moon bay of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall and (iii) full sewage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with European Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solution will be put in place, giving estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Howard: The North West water authority has proposed a scheme involving the construction of a long sea outfall to bring, inter alia, the five bathing waters at Blackpool including the waters at Bispham and Cleveleys into compliance with the EC bathing water directive by 1993 at a total cost of about £55 million. I understand that as a result of this scheme, the waters at Fleetwood are also expected to meet the directive's standards by the same date. The date of commencement for this scheme depends upon the Secretary of State's decision on whether to grant NWWA's applications for consent to discharge from the proposed long sea outfall.

The capital cost of providing, as an alternative, a sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall is estimated to be around £10 million higher than the proposed scheme, with additional running costs of around £1 million per annum. However, such a scheme is unlikely to enable all the identified bathing waters in the area to achieve the required EC standards.

Full details of the option of a sewage treatment works combined with a long sea outfall are not available, but I understand that the capital cost would be some £20 million to £30 million higher than the proposed scheme.

With regard to the bathing waters at Heysham—Half Moon bay, the North West water authority has been asked to draw up detailed plans to bring this, and other bathing waters in the north-west, up to EC standards by 1995. Until these plans have been fully assessed I am unable to give details of either the costs involved or compliance dates.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost for each of (a) Formby, (b) Ainsdale and (c) Southport of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall, (iii) full sewage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with EEC bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solutions will be put in place giving the estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 3 May 1989]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the North West water authority to draw up detailed plans with a view to bringing their bathing waters up to EC standards by 1995. Until these plans have been fully assessed, I am unable to give details of either the costs or compliance dates involved for particular bathing waters.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost for each of (a) St. Annes, (b) St. Annes north, (c) Blackpool south, (d) Blackpool central and (e) Blackpool north of (i) a long sea outfall, (ii) full sewerage treatment works with a short sea outfall and (iii) full sewerage treatment works with a long sea outfall to enable them to comply with European Economic Community bathing water directive 76/160/EEC; and when the appropriate solution will be put in place, giving the estimated date of commencement and completion.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 4 May 1989]: The North West water authority has proposed a scheme involving the construction of a long sea outfall to bring, inter alia, the five bathing waters at Blackpool together with the waters at St. Annes North into compliance with the EC bathing water directive by 1993 at a total cost of about £55 million. The date of commencement for this scheme depends upon my right hon. Friend's decision on whether to grant NWWA's applications for consent to discharge from the proposed long sea outfall.

The capital cost of providing, as an alternative, a sewage treatment works with a short sea outfall is estimated to be about £10 million higher than the proposed scheme, with additional costs of about £1 million per annum. However, such a scheme is unlikely to enable all the identified bathing waters in the area to achieve the required EC standards.

Full details of the option of a sewage treatment works combined with a long sea outfall are not available, but I understand that the capital cost would be some £20 million to £30 million higher than the proposed scheme.

North West water authority has been asked to draw up detailed plans to bring the bathing waters at St. Anne's, and other non-complying bathing waters, up to EC standards by 1995. Until these plans have been fully assessed I cannot give details of the costs or compliance dates involved.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the research projects undertaken for his Department by the Natural Environment Research Council during the past five years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Domestic Property

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the market value of all domestic rated property in England and Wales, the rateable value of that property and the sums which will be raised by rates on that property in the current year.

Mr. Gummer: The latest information for England and Wales is as follows:

		£ billion
Market value of housing stock	31 December 1986	645·3
Rateable value of domestic property	1 April 1988	3·969
Rate income from domestic ratepayers in 1988-89		7·812

BISF Houses (Nottingham)

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made in his discussions with building societies concerning the mortgageability of BISF houses in Nottingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The Abbey National and Halifax building societies have confirmed to officials that their national lending policies make no distinction between BISF houses and those of traditional construction. They treat each house on its individual merits, lending on normal terms up to the societies' usual maximum loan, subject to condition, valuation, and status of the applicant. Where owners wish to carry out improvements, the societies will consider applications for re-mortgage in the normal way.

These national policies apply equally to properties in the Nottingham area. The societies have taken steps to remind surveyors, valuers and estate agents with whom they normally deal in Nottingham of those policies.

The societies have also pointed out that valuations of all kinds of property can easily be affected by misleading statements about safety and durability, and that some recent press and television coverage may not have had a helpful effect on the market.

I very much welcome the positive and public attitude taken by these two major building societies, which I believe reflects the position of other lending institutions, and I am sure that owners of BISF houses will welcome this, and take to heart their advice on factors which could affect the operation of the market locally.

Ozone Layer

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether Her Majesty's Government are considering new steps for the protection of the ozone layer in line with the United Nations call for immediate urgent action.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment said at the first meeting of the Montreal protocol parties in Helsinki last week it is time to "sharpen the teeth" of the protocol. During the review process which was started there, and building on the impetus provided by the London conference, we shall be pressing for a significant strengthening of the protocol. The European Community is calling for a reduction of production and consumption of CFCs by 85 per cent. as soon as possible with a view to their complete elimination by the end of the century.

Hillsborough Disaster

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will make provision to reimburse Liverpool city council for special expenditure arising out of the events at Hillsborough on 15 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Normally, local authorities make some provision in their own budgets for extraordinary and unforeseeable costs.

Liverpool city council's officers have raised orally with the Department's regional office officials the possibility of the council's seeking special assistance. If the council was to seek such assistance, we should of course consider its request carefully.

English Heritage

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many English Heritage properties which were, prior to the forming of English Heritage in 1984, open all day every day now have opening and closing times; and if he will list these, with their current opening and closing times.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department holds no records of opening hours at the various monuments for which English Heritage assumed responsibility on 1 April 1984. Details of opening hours since then are a matter for English Heritage.

Water Quality

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to his reply of 2 May, Official Report, column 52, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan, compliance with the European Community directive on water standards will be achieved within the timing given by the European Community.

Mr. Howard: We are fully committed to compliance with the EC drinking water directive as soon as practicable. However, water undertakers have recently submitted improvement programmes for supplies which occasionally fail to comply in all respects with the directive. These programmes are being assessed and it is not therefore possible at present to state how long it will take to comply fully with the directive. In due course the programmes will be presented to the European Commission.

Crown Suppliers

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Crown Suppliers continue to comply with established public procurement procedures and relevant EEC/GATT regulations.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1989]: Yes.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many tenders the Crown Suppliers competed for in the past year; what was their estimated value; and how many it won.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1989]: Information relating to tender bids by the Crown Suppliers is commercial in confidence.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of public money has so far been paid out to the management buy-out teams in the Crown Suppliers in order to help finance their bids; what is the specific uses for which the money has been claimed; and what is the maximum amount of subsidy he is prepared to pay to each team.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 May 1989]: We have agreed to help the management buy-out teams with the fees paid to their professional advisers, so that they are not at a disadvantage when compared with outside bidders. The contribution formulae provide for repayment if a team's bid is successful, a maximum Government contribution of £132,000 for the team which is interested in the whole business and of £36,000 for the team interested only in the transport operations. Each team is expected to make a substantial contribution to their own fees. Payment of £700 has been authorised to date.

THE ARTS

Items in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister for the Arts if there have been any items accepted in lieu of tax or allocated since he last made an announcement on the subject to the House.

Mr. Luce: Since my announcement on 3 May at column 105 I am pleased to announce that a painting by Rubens has been accepted in lieu of tax. In accordance with the condition on which it was offered, the painting will be allocated to the Ashmolean museum, Oxford. It satisfied £169,852·48 tax and followed the precedent set by the acceptance of Picasso's "Weeping Woman", in that the Ashmolean agreed to pay the owner the difference (£180,147·52) between the tax liability to be satisfied and the "special price" of £350,000.

Tate Gallery

Sir David Price: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will arrange with the Property Services Agency that before the freehold of the Tate gallery is handed over to the trustees the fabric of the gallery is brought up to acceptable standards; and how much he estimates it will cost.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 8 May 1989]: Untying of the national museums and galleries from the Property Services Agency took effect from 1 April 1988. The progressive transfer of ownership of the buildings to the relevant trustee bodies is part of this process. The Government share the view of the institutions concerned that this allows the trustees to make more flexible and effective use of the resources available for the upkeep and improvement of the buildings.

I have also provided the national museums and galleries with substantial increases in their building and maintenance grant-in-aid over this period. The Tate gallery's provision of £2·4 million in 1988-89 was enhanced by a supplementary estimate of £0·8 million in that year; a further increase of 17 per cent. brings the figure for the current year to £3·8 million.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Treasury Stock

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have purchased 2½ per cent. Treasury stock in each year since the stock was first issued; and how many holders of the stock sold their holdings in each year.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested.

Overseas Investment

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the levels of overseas investment of each of the Group of Seven countries in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 28 April 1989]: Figures for the flow of net overseas investment in 1987 of all the countries in question, can be found in the February 1989 edition of the Bank of England Quarterly Bulletin, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Liquefied Petroleum Gas (VAT)

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the anticipated costs of administering value added tax on liquefied petroleum gas in accordance with clause 20 of the Finance Bill.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 5 May 1989]: I regret that no estimate is available. However, the arrangements proposed in clause 20 of the Finance Bill were formulated after extensive consultations with representatives of fuel and power suppliers, and go as far as the Government are able within the terms of the judgment of the European Court of Justice to ease the administrative burden of operating the revised relief.

UNESCO

Q148. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether, in view of the change in the director generalship of UNESCO, Her Majesty's Government will now re-apply for membership of UNESCO.

The Prime Minister: We are following developments at UNESCO closely and hope that the director general can bring about the changes that are needed. Before we can consider reviewing our position on membership we will need to be convinced that fundamental reforms are being implemented both in UNESCO's administration and in its programmes. This will certainly not be possible until after UNESCO's general conference in November this year, which will adopt the organisation's new medium-term plan (1990-95) as well as its programme and budget (1990-91).

Wales (Visits)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the dates on which she has made official visits to Wales since 1979, indicating the location of each visit.

The Prime Minister: The information is as follows:

17 to 18 July 1980—Anglesey
11 December 1980—Cardiff
2 July 1982—Mid Wales
21 September 1984—North East Wales
26 April 1985—North Wales
21 June 1986—Porthcawl
13 March 1987—Bangor and Penmaenbach tunnel

I have omitted from the above any dates on which I was solely engaged on party business.

Engagements

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 9 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. I was also present at Victoria station to mark the arrival of President Babangida. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I will attend a state banquet in honour of President Babangida.

ENERGY

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Brandon-Bravo), 2 February 1989, Official Report, column 402, how the clerical error to which he refers came about; whether the error has been notified to the safe works authorities; whether any other unreported errors have been made in plutonium accountancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: I have nothing to add to my reply of 2 February 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, South (Mr. Brandon-Bravo). I re-emphasise that the underlying data were not affected in any way.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, Official Report, 17 January 1989, column 157, in what form the unseparated plutonium was exported and to which country; from which reactors the 2,865 kg originated, and in what quantities from each reactor; and if he will update the table to March 1989.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The unseparated plutonium was exported in the form of irradiated fuel. The precise quantities of separated plutonium exports linked to individual reactors cannot be disclosed on the grounds of commercial confidentiality. Figures of exports and imports of plutonium for the financial year 1988-89 will be included in the published data on plutonium production later in the year.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a comparative table showing the volumes and radioactive content of radioactive waste arisings per unit of energy output expected from (a) thermal nuclear reactors, (b) fast breeder nuclear reactors and (c) fusion nuclear reactors; and if he will ask United Kingdom Nirex Ltd. to prepare management and storage plans for radioactive waste from fusion power.

Mr. Michael Spicer: These are matters for the operators of the reactor types in question. I have asked the chairmen of the Central Electricity Generating Board and the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to write to the hon. Member about thermal nuclear reactors and fast breeder nuclear reactors respectively. The prospects for power from fusion reactors are so far distant that it is not practicable to make any such estimate.

UK Nirex Ltd. will provide facilities for the disposal of intermediate and low-level wastes arising from all sources, including any which may eventually arise from fusion power.

Coal Mines (Rescue Service)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what responsibilities his Department has for the provision of a rescue service for licensed coal mines.

Mr. Michael Spicer: This Department has no direct responsibilities for the provision of rescue services at licensed mines. The Coal and Other Mines (Fire and Rescue) Regulations 1956 require that the owner of a mine is responsible for ensuring provision for rescue is available. The Health and Safety Executive's mines and quarries inspectorate is responsible for ensuring the provisions of the 1956 regulations are complied with.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Cyprus

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much public money has been committed to Cyprus by the British Government in the last 12 months for the benefit of (a) Turkish Cypriots and (b) Greek Cypriots; and for what purposes.

Mr. Chris Patten: The following commitments have been made to Cyprus in the last 12 months.

I Overseas Development Administration Technical Co-operation Programme
- (a) Turkish Community:—
  English Language Teacher Training in Turkish medium schools: £69,800 for the period 1988-91
  Book Presentation Programme: £4,000 for 1989-90
- (b) Greek Community
  Pedagogical Institute Teacher Training Project £103,000 for the period 1989-92
  Book Presentation Programme £6,000 for 1989-90
  Overseas Development Administration Technical Co-operation Training Programme
  £121,000 for 1989-90
  As I told the hon. Member on 1 March 1988, at column 502, the ratio of awards to Greek and Turkish Cypriots will vary from year to year, depending on the quality of the candidates coming forward and other factors. It is not possible to forecast at this stage the distribution of future awards.

II FCO Scholarship and Award Scheme for 1988-89
- (a) Turkish Candidates £81,217
- (b) Greek Candidates £37,413

III FCO Fee Support Scheme for 1988-89
- (a) Turkish Candidates £49,129
- (b) Greek Candidates £744,365

IV British Council (exchanges of persons, information activities, etc.) for 1989-90
- (a) Turkish beneficiaries £10,940
- (b) Greek beneficiaries £66,590

V Home Office (Anti-drug trafficking programmes for 1988-89)
- (a) Turkish Community:
  Training for Turkish Cypriot customs officers: £2,200

(b) Greek Community:
Provision of customs equipment: £8,300

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much public money has been committed to Cyprus by the European Community in the last 12 months for the benefit of (a) Turkish Cypriots and (b) Greek Cypriots; and for what purposes.

Mr. Chris Patten: The European Community allocated £29 million under the second five year financial protocol for Cyprus which expired last December. A further five-year financial protocol under which £41 million will be provided was agreed at the beginning of this year. The Community seeks to support projects of benefit to the whole population of the island; in particular, it has met the cost of water, electricity and sewerage works. No division of the sums committed for the benefit of Turkish Cypriots and Greek Cypriots is available.

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much public money has been committed to Cyprus by the United Nations and its specialised agencies in the last 12 months for the benefit of (a) Turkish Cypriots and (b) Greek Cypriots; and for what purposes.

Mr. Chris Patten: In 1987, the latest year for which figures are available, total net official development assistance to Cyprus from the United Nations and its agencies was $7·62 million, or some £4·65 million. Detailed information on the precise destination and purpose of this assistance is not held centrally.

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government intend to continue the paying of public funds to the Greek Cypriots as aid, in view of the finding of the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs that by most criteria the southern sector of Cyprus is no longer eligible for economic aid.

Mr. Chris Patten: We regard it as important to make technical co-operation and other public funds available to both communities in Cyprus.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Mr. Sodigar Hussain applied to the post in Islamabad to join his wife, Mrs. Zaidah Begum, whose date of birth is 27 January 1967; and when a decision on his application will be taken;

(2) when Shamim Akhter, who was born on 12 November 1964, applied to the post in Islamabad to enter the United Kingdom; when her application was refused; when the post dispatched an explanatory statement setting out the reasons her application was refused; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when Mr. Mchd Arif, who was born on 1 September 1963, will be issued with a visa by the post in Islamabad following his successful appeal against refusal to grant him permission to enter the United Kingdom;

(4) when Mrs. Musrat Begum, whose date of birth is 1 January 1958, applied to the post in Islamabad, to join her husband in the United Kingdom; and when a decision will be taken on her application.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is not readily available. A further reply will be sent to the hon. Member in due course.

South Africa

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence is now available of the use against the security forces in Northern Ireland of weapons obtained through the agency of South African intelligence personnel; and whether that evidence will affect in any way the policies of the Government towards South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answers that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave to questions on this matter in the House on 24 April at columns 660-65.

It remains our policy towards South Africa to work for the abolition of apartheid and the peaceful transition to a non-racial representative system of government.

Gibraltar (Incident)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, in the light of recent statements from Spanish police sources that the Provisional IRA active service unit was under surveillance until crossing into Gibraltar and that it was known that the unit was not armed or in possession of a bomb, what steps he is proposing to take to determine what information British or Gibraltarian security forces had in their possession when these members of the unit were shot.

Mr. Waldegrave: We received full and invaluable co-operation from the Spanish authorities throughout this affair for which we remain very grateful. The nature of that co-operation is covered in the statement made to the Gibraltar coroner's officer by the responsible Spanish police officer, a copy of which, together with its translation by the coroner's officer, I have placed in the Library of the House.

Neil Sanderson

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken to request United Kingdom posts in Peru and Brazil to undertake inquiries about the whereabouts of Neil Sanderson; and what contact officials at United Kingdom posts have had with the Governments or other agencies in Peru and Brazil to obtain information about Neil Sanderson.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's embassies at Lima and Brasilia, Her Majesty's consulates-general at Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo, and the honorary consulates in Manaus, Belem and Recife were also alerted by consular department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in January this year, when Mr. Sanderson's father reported that his son was missing after setting off alone from Peru to canoe down the Amazon. None of the posts has had contact with Mr. Sanderson.

Our posts have informed the Brazilian federal and the Peruvian police of the situation but our posts do not have the staff resources to make searches for missing persons themselves. We have advised Mr. Sanserson's family to contact their local police in Yorkshire in order to request a formal police investigation in South America, via Interpol.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards an agreement on banning chemical weapons.

Mr Waldegrave: Following the Paris conference on chemical weapons in January this year the chemical weapons negotiations in Geneva have had an active spring session which has just ended. Progress has been made on a number of issues, but much work remains to be done, especially on verification, before a comprehensive effectively verifiable and global convention on chemical weapons can be achieved.

TRANSPORT

London Underground

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals London Underground has made for the modernisation of the Northern line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: London Underground Ltd. is currently studying the options for modernising the Northern line but no proposals have yet been put to the Department.

Mr. John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals for the modernisation of the Central line of London Underground he has received; at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Last October my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State approved proposals to modernise and re-equip the Central line at a cost of over £700 million. New, faster trains will be introduced; the signalling will be replaced; and other improvements will be made. These changes will increase the line's capacity and reliability.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action his Department has taken to respond to the proposals made in the 1983 Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the Civil Aviation Authority and national air traffic service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department of Transport monitored the actions taken by the Civil Aviation Authority in response to the 1983 report of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission, and discussed the follow-up action at a number of meetings with the CAA on 29 March 1984 and 23 January 1985. Statements were made to the House of Commons in answers to written questions at columns 274 and 415 on the progress being made by the CAA. My right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Transport wrote to the incoming chairman of the CAA on 24 July 1986 setting out his objectives. These included action on several of the recommendations of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Aspinwall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the action the Civil Aviation Authority has taken to fulfil the recommendations made in the 1983 Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the Civil Aviation Authority and national air traffic service showing the dates on which specific actions were taken.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The information given to the Secretary of State for Transport on the action taken by the Civil Aviation Authority to fulfil the recommendations made in the 1983 Monopolies and Mergers Commission report on the CAA and the national air traffic services is set out in the published CAA reports CAP 548 (February 1984) and CAP 499 (January 1985).

Rail Safety

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the policy of his Department in seeking to ensure safety on British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: Responsibility for safety of operation lies with the British Railways board. The Department's railway inspectorate has certain statutory functions, principally the inspection and approval of new works on behalf of my right hon. Friend, and the monitoring of standards required by the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. Both contribute to the overall maintenance of high safety standards.

Bypasses

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (i) his Department's prediction at planning stage of the average daily traffic flow in the opening year for trunk road bypass schemes completed in 1986-87 and 1987-88 and (ii) the observed average daily traffic flow in the opening for those schemes in 1986-87 and 1987-88.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Traffic is counted on all new trunk road schemes approximately one year after opening, to allow traffic patterns to settle down before the flow is measured. For bypass schemes opened in 1986-87, predicted and actual traffic in 1987-88 are given in the table.

Annual average daily traffic flow

Scheme	Forecast		Traffic count
	Low growth	High growth
A52 Bingham bypass	9,400	10,000	10,500
A43 Bulwick bypass	5,000	5,300	5,700
A11 Barton Mills bypass	16,600	17,800	19,250
A12 Chelmsford bypass	—	[1]39,000	45,400
A31 Ferndown bypass	14,700	16,400	18,000
A54 Kelsall bypass	8,400	9,100	10,600
A57 Worksop bypass	10,300	12,800	9,800
A428 Bromham bypass	15,100	16,550	13,350
A10 Ely/Littleport bypass	5,000	5,400	6,800
A49 Tarporley bypass	6,700	7,300	9,800
A47 Billesdon bypass	5,850	6,300	9,200
A56 Accrington bypass	21,300	25,900	13,100

[1] Central forecast.

Those bypass schemes opened in 1987-88 for which data are available are listed below:

Scheme	Forecast Low Growth	Forecast High Growth	Traffic Count
A43 Towcester bypass	12,650	14,250	14,150
A10 Buntingford bypass	8,900	10,050	10,150
A43 Brackley bypass	8,450	9,500	11,400

The forecasts for the schemes listed above were done several years ago, mostly between 1980 and 1984. The forecast range reflects uncertainty about future income and fuel prices, which are the main factors influencing the national traffic growth forecasts. Other uncertainties arise from traffic modelling and other developments which occur between the time of the forecast and the traffic count. Traffic counts are also subject to a degree of uncertainty.

Channel Tunnel (Rail Link)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will put in the Library copies of any environmental impact, engineering, costing and any other reports on the proposed route for the Channel tunnel rail link.

Mr. Portillo: I have already arranged for copies of British Rail's published report and information pack on the rail link to be placed in the Library. BR will be carrying out an environmental assessment of the proposed route, in accordance with the requirements of the EC directive, and has undertaken to present an environmental statement to Parliament at the same time as it deposits a Private Bill. We will consider whether there are any further reports which it would be helpful to deposit in the Library in due course.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Research Institutes

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by standard region the research institutes operated for or on behalf of his Department and the total employment thereat; if he will give for each region the total number of such institutes and the employment therein; and if he will express the regional totals as a percentage of the national totals.

EC Marine Science and Technology Programme

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the distribution across the EEC countries of the expressions of interest in the proposed EEC marine science and technology programme; whether Her Majesty's Government have approved this programme; and how the distribution of expressions of interest varies amongst EEC countries as between higher education institutes, research centres and industry.

Mr. Jackson: The Government agreed to a common position in March, as my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster reported to the House on 7 April, at columns 314-15. The Government expect to agree to the final adoption of this programme at the Community's Council of Ministers (Research) on 6 June. The approximate percentage distribution of expressions of interest among the member states was estimated by the Commission for internal purposes in June 1988, when just over 1,000 had been received, as follows:

	per cent.
Belgium	4
Federal Republic of Germany	11
Denmark	3
Spain	6
France	22
Greece	5
Italy	9
Ireland	5
Netherlands	4
Portugal	3
United Kingdom	27
EFTA countries	1

The distribution between higher education institutes, research centres and industry for the whole European Community was estimated at 41, 37 and 22 per cent. respectively. The United Kingdom distribution has been estimated at 59, 21 and 20 per cent. respectively. The distribution for other individual states is not readily available and cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost. However, I have arranged for a copy of the full list to be placed in the Library of the House.

General Practice

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he intends to make any special provision to assist departments of general practice in universities.

Mr. Jackson: It is for each university to determine how the substantial public funds it receives, together with its other income, should be distributed between its faculties and departments. In the case of medical education, this normally follows discussion with the relevant health authorities.

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what courses are planned to be available in technical colleges or colleges of advanced education to train general practice managers; and how many places are envisaged for these courses.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not available centrally. It is for the institutions themselves to plan such courses taking into account demand for places.

I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health gave on 8 May at column 320 about arrangements to enable general practitioners to acquire necessary management skills.

University Intakes

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what figures are available to indicate the percentage of the intake to universities since 1959 who came from working-class homes.

Mr. Jackson: The percentage of home university students accepted through the Universities Central Council on Admissions, and who were from social groups IIIM, IV and V since 1977 are shown in the table. Comparable figures for earlier years are not available.

British Independent Schools

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has given further consideration to the proposals for a grant scheme put forward by the Council of British Independent Schools in the European Communities; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend met representatives of COBISEC on 6 December. At the meeting he undertook to consider the proposals further on the basis of certain additional evidence which COBISEC was to provide. I understand that some of this additional evidence is still in preparation and we must await this before any decision can be taken.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns for 1989-90.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 2 May 1989, c. 79-80]: The requested information about publicity campaigns has today been placed in the Library.

WALES

Schools (Books and Equipment)

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) seconday schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I shall reply to the hon. Lady as soon as possible.

Tourism

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many projects have been identified in Wales as suitable for European Community financing under the provisions of article 6 of the European Tourism Year 1990 decision document, adopted by the European Community Council on 21 December 1988.

Mr. Peter Walker: None so far. A project submitted by the Wales tourist board was considered by the national examining committee on 4 May. I understand that the committee sought further information on the project and that it is intended that an expanded submission will be considered at the committee's June meeting.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department is making available specific grants for tourism operators in Wales to achieve the objectives of the European Tourism Year 1990 in line with the European Community Council decision of 21 December 1988.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. However, the European Commission has decided to allocate approximately £3·3 million to the year. From this source, funds will be available for co-financing of projects by public and private bodies, for prizes and competitions and for information and publicity campaigns. Bids should be submitted to the United Kingdom's national examining committee via the British tourism authority.

Official Visits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since he became Secretary of State for Wales he has made official visits to Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since becoming Secretary of State for Wales I have fulfilled 301 official engagements in the Principality.

Dermatologists

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many consultant dermatologists are attached to hospitals within the East Dyfed health authority and the West Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Grist: As at 30 September 1988 it is provisionally estimated that there were 0·9 whole-time equivalent consultant dermatologists employed by the East Dyfed health authority and 1·8 by the West Glamorgan health authority.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average length of waiting time before a patient can see a consultant dermatologist after referral by a general practitioner at (a) Llanelli general hospital, (b) West Wales hospital, Carmarthen, (c) Morriston hospital and (d) Singleton hospital.

Mr. Grist: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. The number of people waiting, as at 31 March 1988, for a first consultation with a dermatologist is shown in the table:—

Number who have been waiting for more than three months

	Total number	Number waiting
Llanelli General Hospital	154	74
West Wales Hospital	637	480
Morriston Hospital	73	60
Singleton Hospital	1,060	583

Development Board for Rural Wales

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to review the new town responsibilities of the Development Board for Rural Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Mid Wales Development Council and its successor body, the Development Board for Rural Wales, were charged with developing Newtown in Powys using new town powers. Population has risen consistently and is now close to the target level of 11,000. With the task of developing Newtown almost complete, I am reviewing the appropriate timetable for winding up the board's new town responsibilities consulting with the board and with the relevant local authorities as necessary. I expect to make a further announcement later this year.

Agriculture Development and Advisory Service

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Agriculture Development and Advisory Service in Wales has succeeded during the past two years in achieving its revenue target; and whether the Transgoed laboratories reached their target contribution towards this revenue in the same period.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

The Agriculture Development and Advisory Service has achieved the overall revenue target set in appropriations in aid for its advisory services in 1987-88 and, on the basis of provisional results, in 1988-89. All constituent units of the Agriculture Development and Advisory Service have contributed to this performance. It is not our policy to disclose details of individual Agriculture Development and Advisory Service units targets.

Pensioners

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many women over the age of 59 years and how many men over the age of 64 years are registered as resident within Wales, by county.

Mr. Grist [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The latest estimates of population in the age groups requested are given in the table:

Population mid-1987

County	Women aged 60 and over (thousands)	Men aged 65 and over (thousands)

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Research Institutes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many research institutes are supported by his Department; how many people they employ; how many of these are located in Wales; and how many are employed in those institutes.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central (Mr. Cousins) on 4 May, at columns 193-95.

Rabbit Meat

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tons of rabbit meat were imported in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other members of the European Community from the People's Republic of China in 1988, 1987 and 1986.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Imports in 1988 of meat and edible meat offal of rabbits and hares from the People's Republic of China are shown in the table. Corresponding data are not available for 1986 and 1987, when a different trade classification system applied.

Pesticides

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many employees in his Department are engaged in testing vegetables for pesticide residue.

Mr. Ryder: At any one time, some 60 to 100 analysts in MAFF and other Government Departments are involved in analysing pesticide residues in the whole range of foods monitored by the working party on pesticide residues. The number engaged on testing vegetables within these figures will vary according to the nature of samples being analysed at any one time.

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pesticide ingredients are licensed to be used on food.

Mr. Ryder: I regret that the information requested is not readily available. Approvals issued under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986 relate to individual pesticide products, rather than active ingredients. These are listed in "Pesticides 1989" a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

"Salmonella in Eggs"

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the Government will respond to the first report of the Agriculture Committee, "Salmonella in Eggs"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government welcome the Committee's lucid analysis of the extent and implications of the problem of salmonella in eggs. In particular the Government consider that the Committee's very thorough report has put the problem into the correct perspective by refuting the more extreme and alarmist impressions.

The Government also welcome the Committee's endorsement of our comprehensive campaign to control the disease and achieve the best possible standards in our egg industry. The response gives further details of measures, which we are taking to ensure the maximum possible degree of safety at every point in the chain from the poultry breeder to the kitchen table. Salmonella is a worldwide problem and no other country, to the best of our knowledge, has pursued such a vigorous campaign to combat it.

The Government are grateful to the Agriculture Committee for the valuable contribution its report has made towards this campaign.

Suckler Cow Premium

Mr. Curry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will pay the maximum rate of suckler cow premium following European Community decisions to increase the contribution from Community funds.

Mr. MacGregor: The beef reform package agreed by the Council of Agriculture Ministers in January included both an increase in the Community-funded element of the suckler cow premium from 25 ecus to 40 ecus and the continued option of paying a top-up of 25 ecus from national funds. In Northern Ireland the first 20 ecus of this top-up are also met from Community funds. More recently, as part of last month's price fixing, I negotiated a substantial devaluation of the green pound for beef which eliminated the monetary gap.

I am pleased to announce that the Government have decided to pay the maximum rate of national supplement to the suckler cow subsidy, taking full account of the recent devaluation and the scope provided by the scheme rules. As a result the rate of the suckler cow premium for the 1989-90 scheme year will be increased from £33·40 per cow to £47·43.

More beef producers than ever will benefit from the increased rate of premium because of a further change in the rules which in future will allow premium to be paid to farmers earning less than half their income from their holdings, provided they meet the other scheme rules. In particular, I would expect some crofters, farmers seeking to diversify, and those on low incomes to be able to benefit.

These changes to the suckler cow premium, which means a 42 per cent. increase in the rate, demonstrate the Government's commitment to the beef sector, especially the more extensive production of quality beef from specialist suckler herds. For several years now the specialist beef sector has shown good signs of recovery. Producers now have an added incentive to build on this recovery and take advantage of the more open competitive climate which results from the reformed beef regime.

EC Meetings

Mr. Wray: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The Agriculture Council met on 14 occasions in 1985, 11 in 1986, 13 in 1987 (including one held jointly with Economic and Finance Ministers) and 13 in 1988.

There were also occasional informal meetings of Agriculture Ministers. The Fisheries Council met on four occasions in 1985, five in 1986, two in 1987 and five in 1988. Also, at certain meetings of the Internal Market Council in 1988, a number of food items relevant to the single market were discussed. In addition there were numerous meetings of officials. Information on the number of such meetings could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Nitrate Leaching

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he has made on the preparation of proposals for the designation of areas sensitive to nitrate leaching.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government yesterday tabled amendments to the Water Bill to provide for the designation of nitrate-sensitive areas. Following my written reply to the House on 22 March I am pleased to announce that my Department and the Welsh Office Agricultural Department have today issued a joint consultation document entitled "Nitrate-Sensitive Areas Scheme". This has been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and is available in the Vote Office. It is also being circulated widely to some 170 farming, water, environmental and other interested parties. The document takes account of Government statements on the principles underlying a scheme and sets out the detailed ideas as a basis for discussion. We look forward to receiving comments on the issues covered in the document from a wide range of organisations.

Undersea Rescue Services (Chemicals)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the dangers posed to undersea rescue services in attempts to recover the container of Lindane chemicals lost off the sunken Perintis freighter in March by the surplus conventional explosives and radioactive waste packages disposed of in the third deep trench at 49 degrees 50 minutes north, two degrees 18 minutes west in the 1950's.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have been asked to reply.

The area in question was used by the United Kingdom for the disposal of surplus conventional munitions from 1946 until about 1971, and for the disposal of low grade radioactive waste from 1950 to 1963. The disposal site is publicised in Admiralty charts and in OECD Nuclear Energy Agency publications, both of which are readily available. The recovery of the container of Lindane, lost from the MV Perintis, is the responsibility of the French Government, who are aware of the presence of the disposal site and have made contact with my Department. The danger to any recovery operation posed by the radioactive waste is considered negligible. The presence of conventional explosives in the area should not prevent such an operation, provided that standard procedures for dealing with explosives are followed.

EMPLOYMENT

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, further to his answer of Friday 21 April, Official Report, column 347, if he will consider extending the 1985 regulations to workers at the House of Commons.

Mr. Nicholls: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 were made under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. As I explained to the hon. Member on Monday 17 April at column 44, the Act does not apply to the House of Commons and I do not intend to seek its extension to the House.

Under the arrangements for inspection of the Palace of Westminster and the parliamentary estate, the palace authorities would inform the Health and Safety Executive of major accidents, dangerous occurrences or diseases that occur at the palace. No such reports have been received by HSE since the arrangements were formalised.

Area Manpower Boards

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the possible and actual attendance, separately, for both private sector and trade union representatives on area manpower boards, for each area manpower board in Great Britain for the last full year that these boards were in operation.

Mr. Cope: The information requested is set out in the table.

ACAS

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals the Government have for reforming the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government have no such proposals.

Employment Training

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have so far been accepted for training under the ET programme; at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: By 28 April, 275,000 people had started on employment training. The cost for each trainee will be about £2,300. It is a remarkable achievement that so many people have been helped by the most successful training programme for adults ever run by the Government.

Vauxhall Motors (Luton)

Mr. Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the effect of the expansion of Vauxhall Motors Ltd. Luton plant on the local unemployment register.

Mr. Lee: It is not possible to forecast what effect this investment will have on the rate of unemployment in the Watford and Luton travel-to-work area, but I am sure it will be welcomed locally and will help maintain jobs and prosperity in the area.

Industrial Action

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to seek to repeal the current legislation on picketing and secondary action and to replace it with a voluntary code; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Green Paper "Removing Barriers to Employment", published on 20 March, contains the Government's current proposals for the further reform of industrial relations and trade union law. The Green Paper proposes no change to the law on picketing. It does however propose the removal of immunity for organising secondary action among workers of an employer not party to the trade dispute and the extension of the definition of secondary action so that it includes action by those who work under contracts "for services".

Labour Shortages

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures his Department proposes in order to deal with anticipated shortages of skilled labour in future years.

Mr. Cope: Training and enterprise councils will offer employers major opportunities to meet their future skill needs, improve the supply of skills and promote enterprise. The whole range of my Department's Training Agency programmes already have these among their aims and will continue to pursue them vigorously.

Workfare Scheme

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans for setting up a pilot workfare scheme to study workfare systems in the United States of America and Sweden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 24 April 1989]: We have no such plans. Our priority is to encourage unemployed people to take up the 600,000 to 700,000 existing vacancies.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Charge

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what the community charge liability will be for a person who is having a reduction made in social security benefit in order to repay an overpayment of benefit received under section 53 of the Social Security Act 1986;

(2) what the community charge liability will be for a person disqualified from receiving unemployment benefit under sections 20(1)(a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) and sections 20(2)(a) and (b) of the Social Security Act 1975, and ineligible to receive income support under section 22(4)(c)(i) of the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987;

(3) what the community charge liability will be for a person disqualified from receiving unemployment benefit under sections 20(1)(a), (b), (c), (d) and (e) and sections 20(2)(a) and (b) of the Social Security Act 1975.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None of these reductions or disqualifications will affect the amount of community charge rebate a person receives, and so will not alter the amount of community charge he has to pay. When a person's net income is assessed for the purposes of determining a claim for community charge rebate, his gross income from prescribed benefits will be included, irrespective of any sums that may have been deducted from these benefits. A person who has been awarded income support will be entitled to the maximum community charge rebate of 80 per cent. irrespective of whether he may have been disqualified from unemployment, sickness or invalidity benefit, or may be having a reduction made from any benefit to which he is entitled.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime (Humberside)

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime in Humberside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our strategy for crime reduction applies to all parts of England and Wales. Police manpower and resources have been substantially increased, Crime Concern was launched with Government support in May 1988 to stimulate, support and develop local crime prevention activity and the largest ever national crime prevention publicity campaign was launched last year.

Total crime in Humberside fell by 4 per cent. in 1988. My right hon. Friend approved a further 20 police posts for the force from 1 April bringing the authorised establishment up to 1992. The Government encourage the growth and development of neighbourhood watch schemes and crime prevention panels. There are now 1,331 watch schemes covering approximately 29,500 households throughout Humberside, with 15 panels and two junior panels. Hull is one of the areas in our Safer Cities programme.

Police (Misconduct)

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquiries instituted by his Department of a police force of one jurisdiction into the activities of a police force of another jurisdiction have found evidence of misconduct in the last 10 years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office has no power to institute inquiries of one police force by another into allegations of misconduct. The investigation of such allegations is a matter for the chief officer of the force concerned, subject to the provisions of part IX of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 where a complaint is made by a member of the public.

Prior to the introduction of the 1984 Act, section 49 of the Police Act 1964 provided for the Secretary of State to direct a chief officer to request an officer from another force to conduct a complaints investigation. Figures relating to the number of occasions when this power was exercised, and the number of investigations which revealed evidence of misconduct, are not held centrally, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Broadcasting Directive

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent discussions in the European Community Council of Ministers on the draft broadcasting directive.

Mr. Renton: Under the Spanish presidency, the Council of Ministers (Internal Market) has had a series of meetings in order to identify a satisfactory way forward on the European Commission's proposal for a directive on broadcasting. These enabled the Council, on 13 April, to adopt a common position on the draft directive.

The original proposal from the Commission gave rise to a number of difficulties for us and other member states. We were concerned in particular at the proposals for formal numerical quotas for European programme content, the provisions put forward on copyright and the potentially troubling extension of EC competence implicit in the proposals on protection of minors. More generally we argued that the Council of Europe was the right forum for the conclusion of a European regulatory instrument in relation to broadcasting, and we were therefore putting our weight behind efforts to conclude a European convention on transfrontier broadcasting under the aegis of the Council of Europe. These concerns were made clear when the House had the opportunity to debate the directive on 20 January 1987.

Since then, we have played a full part in the negotiations on the draft convention, the text of which was finalised in March. The United Kingdom signed the convention when it was opened for signature on 5 May. The convention substantially meets all the points on which we had reservations in relation to the draft directive, and is in our judgment an acceptable basis for European regulation. We therefore welcomed the decision of the European Council in Rhodes last December that the future work of the Community in relation to broadcasting should be based on that of the Council of Europe and that the directive should accordingly be adapted in the light of the convention. This alignment of the two instruments has been undertaken by the Internal Market Council. As a result a new draft of the directive has been produced which follows closely the approach of the convention. This has enabled us to withdraw our earlier objections to the substance of the directive.

I submitted to the Select Committee on European Legislation on 30 March an explanatory memorandum discussing in detail the specific modifications made by the Internal Market Council to the Commission's original proposal. The Committee subsequently recommended that a further debate be held on the draft directive. I regret that given the timing of the recommendation it was not practicable to arrange a further debate before the meeting of the Internal Market Council at which the common position was adopted. I have written to the Chairman of the Committee to explain the Government's approach to this matter.

We believe that the Council's common position represents a satisfactory outcome. We have successfully resisted the arguments of some members states for protectionist measures which would have imposed greater rstrictions on European broadcasters and have instead achieved a substantially deregulatory text fully in line with that of the Council of Europe convention. Our recent White Paper on Broadcasting made clear that these international instruments, when concluded, would contribute to the maintenance of programme standards throughout Europe, while removing the barriers which have hitherto inhabited the free flow of broadcasting services. They are consistent with the approach of the Government towards domestic broadcasting services in establishing an enabling regulatory framework to allow increased opportunities for broadcasters and viewers while ensuring the maintenance of programme standards on taste and decency.

Gaelic Broadcasting

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will make a statement on his Department's plans for the development of Gaelic Broadcasting.

Mr. Renton: We are considering this subject in the light of responses to the Government's White Paper on broadcasting.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Shoe Industry

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he last met representatives of the shoe industry; what was discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Trade met the hon. Members for Sedgefield (Mr. Blair) and for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) and representatives of the footwear industry in February 1988 to discuss footwear imports from the far east and south-east Asia. A number of other hon. Members have since made their concerns known. However, I can add nothing to previous answers to the House until the EC Commission reports the findings of its Communitywide investigation into imports of footwear from Taiwan and South Korea.

National Engineering Laboratory

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the future ownership of the national engineering laboratory.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to announce his decision on the Touche Ross report on the future of the national engineering laboratory.

Mr. Newton: My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is currently considering a report on the national engineering laboratory prepared by management consultants Touche Ross and hopes to make an announcement shortly concerning the future of the laboratory, including ownership.

Vauxhall Motors

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he or his officials next expect to meet the management of Vauxhall Motors Ltd. to discuss changes in the pattern of purchasing of materials to the benefit of United Kingdom suppliers.

Mr. Atkins: My officials meet the company regularly to discuss a wide range of issues including component and material sourcing.

Mr. Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contribution was made from public funds to Vauxhall Motors Ltd's investment in 1988 in its Luton plant.

Mr. Atkins: None.

Company Investigations

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster which accountancy firms have been criticised in the Department of Trade and Industry's inspectors' reports on investigations into companies in each of the past five years.

Mr. Maude: Two of the reports of inspectors appointed under the Companies Act that have been published since 1984 have contained criticisms of accountants. These were the reports of the investigations into the affairs of Milbury plc and into the affairs of The Greenbank Trust plc, both published in 1987 and in both of which the auditors of the company under investigation were the subject of criticisms by the inspectors.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was (a) the number of applications for regional selective assistance received between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989, (b) the number of applications that have been processed and (c) the total amount of money paid out in that period for each of his Department's regions.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The information requested in respect of regional selective assistance (RSA) industrial and training grants by region is as follows:

	North East	North West	Yorkshire and Humberside	East Midlands	South West	West Midlands
(a) Number of applications received between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989	294	434	238	27	106	571
(b) Number of applications processed between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989	273	438	240	32	97	608
(c) Total grant paid (£ million) between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989	33·6	22·0	21·1	1·0	5·0	24·1

Regional Development Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was (a) the number of applications for regional development grants outstanding on 31 March 1988, (b) the number of applications processed, (c) the number of those applications that are still outstanding and (d) the total amount of money paid out since 31 March 1988 to those applicants for each of his Department's regions.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The information requested in respect of the revised regional development grant scheme by region is as follows:

	North-East	North-West	Yorkshire and Humberside	East Midlands	South-West
Number of applications outstanding at 31 March 1988	3,260	2,740	830	240	540
Number of these processed at end-April 1989	3,256	2,729	828	239	540
Number still outstanding end-April 1989	4	11	2	1	0
Grant paid (£ million) to date on applications outstanding at 31 March 1988	18·9	17·0	4·4	1·8	2·0

Grants

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will give for each of his Department's regions (a) the total number of applications received for innovation grants from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, (b) the total number of applications approved, (c) the total amount of expenditure involved and (d) the total estimated expenditure planned for that period and the estimated expenditure for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

(2) if he will give for each of his Department's regions (a) the total number of applications received for investment grants from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989, (b) the total number of applications approved, (c) the total amount of expenditure involved and (d) the total estimated expenditure planned for that period and the estimated expenditure for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 8 May 1989]: Regional enterprise grants (REGs) became available on 1 April 1988 in the development areas, and on 1 September 1988 in South Yorkshire. The information requested, for the English regions for which DTI is responsible, for the 12 months to 31 March 1989, is as follows:

Regional Enterprise Grants

	Number of applications	Number of offers	Value of offers (£000)
Investment[1]
North East	424	274	1,517
North West	433	254	1,585
Yorkshire and Humberside	196	118	949
East Midlands	42	34	299
South West	146	98	432
Total England	1,241	778	4,782
Innovation[2]
North East	136	55	1,021
North West	145	43	912
Yorkshire and Humberside	71	28	631
East Midlands	9	5	113
South West	35	13	218
Total England	396	144	2,895

[1] Payments of £712,379 have been made under Investment up to end March.

[2] Payments of £205,956 have been made under Innovation up to end March.

The amount of expenditure paid out in any particular region depends on demand for the scheme and the appraisal of individual applications. The value of grants actually paid so far reflects the nature and time scale of the projects on which applicants have sought grants since scheme commencement in April.

Total provision for expenditure on regional enterprise grants in England in 1988-89 as published in the Supply Estimates was £14 million. The provision for 1989-90 as published in the Supply Estimates are £22·2 million for investment grants and £5·9 million for innovation grants. Planned provision for regional enterprise grants in 1990-91 and 1991-92 is £45·2 million and £46·3 million respectively. The actual expenditure in future years will, of course depend on demand.

ENVIRONMENT

Accommodation Costs (Cambridgeshire)

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost per square foot of accommodation for civil servants in (a) the rural districts of Forest Heath, east Cambridgeshire and (b) the city of Cambridge.

Mr. Chope: There is limited office space available in the rural districts of Forest Heath and east Cambridgeshire. The annual rental cost is estimated at £4 per sq ft in Ely and £7 per sq ft in Newmarket depending on size, location and quality. For any new hirings in Cambridge the figure is estimated to be of the order of £15 per sq ft. The site at Brooklands is Crown freehold, but the market value is currently estimated at £7 per sq ft.

LDDC (Planning Permission)

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all planning permissions given to the London docklands development corporation along the river Thames in the borough of Tower Hamlets which secure a public riverside walkway.

Mr. Trippier: A list of 45 permissions given by the LDDC since 1981, together with details of seven current cases, has been placed in the Library. These cases demonstrate the corporation's commitment to extensive riverside and dockside access.

Wartime Excavations

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to record those wartime sites which were evacuated for sand excavation and subsequently infilled with rubble and waste.

Mr. Chope: The Department is currently undertaking a jointly funded project with the British Geological Survey of the solid and drift geology of almost all the built-up area of Stoke on Trent and Newcastle under Lyme. The project started in January 1988 and is planned to be completed by July 1990. Part of the output of the project will be a series of maps, on a number of different themes relevant to planning and development, including the incidence of made ground, categorised where possible by the type of fill material used.

This project is one of a series of geological mapping projects being undertaken in various parts of the country as part of the Department's research programme. The project aims to concentrate on areas of development pressure and to identify among other things, areas where planners and developers may need to pay particular attention to ground conditions.

Rents

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he is making to ensure that after April 1990 landlords will not be permitted to raise rents by continuing to charge tenants the amount which formerly covered rent and rates.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Protected tenants paying rents which include rates will have the normal protection of the Rent Act 1977 for tenancies entered into before 15 January 1989, and may register fair rents which are exclusive of rates. The Housing Act 1988 will apply to most tenancies entered into after that date, and any rents determined by the rent assessment committee under that Act will be exclusive of rates.

Nottingham City Council (Budget Returns)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his reply on 25 April to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) Official Report, column 532, if he has received detailed budget returns from Nottingham city council.

Mr. Gummer: Yes, a return from Nottingham city council has been received. Returns from 21 authorities remain outstanding.

Toyota Plant

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will extend the borrowing facilities for Derbyshire county council to enable it to provide the infrastructure for the establishment of the Toyota plant.

Mr. Gummer: Under the terms of the block borrowing approval issued for 1989-90, it is open to Derbyshire county council to borrow to finance infrastructure works undertaken in 1989-90. But the authority's total borrowing for the year must be contained within the ceiling established by that approval.

Radioactivity Study

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take following the publication by his Department of the report on the study of radioactivity three years after Chernobyl carried out by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology; what part he intends aerial monitoring should play in future surveys; what role he intends local authorities should play; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Institute of Terrestrial Ecology report on the radio activity in the environment has suggested that the radioactive caesium in organic litter layers under grass, bracken, heather and woodland could be an explanation of the longevity of radio activity in pasture and in grazing animals. A further programme of research is being planned to investigate this possibility.

Aerial monitoring is being considered as a means of rapid identification of areas of high radioactivity deposition in the event of any future overseas nuclear accident. The role of local authorities is set out in the booklet "The National Reponse Plan and Radioactive Incident Monitoring Network (RIMNET) Phase 1" published by HMSO. Copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

Fish Farming

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about fish farming in national parks; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1989]: We have received representations from the chairman of the Exmoor national park committee and the chairman of the Association of County Councils' national parks committee. We are today issuing a consultation paper on permitted use rights in the countryside which includes an invitation for views on the adequacy of existing planning controls over fish farming in national parks.

Exmoor National Park

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the Government response to issues raised during the recent visit to the Exmoor national park by the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 8 May 1989]: My noble Friend's visit to the Exmoor national park was informal and a wide range of issues were discussed. A "response" is not appropriate in the circumstances.

Football Supporters Association

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has held with the Football Supporters Association since the Hillsborough tragedy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 4 May 1989]: I have not held any discussions with the Football Supporters Association since the Hillsborough tragedy, but I understand that Lord Justice Taylor has granted the association leave to be represented at the oral hearings which will form part of his inquiry into the tragedy.

Sick Building Syndrome

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of Government employees have been diagnosed as suffering from sick building syndrome during the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 27 April 1989]: No Government employee has been diagnosed as having suffered from sick building syndrome because the nature of the conditions which are generally associated with this problem are such that they could originate from any number of different causes.

The cause of sick building syndrome is not known. The Government are participating in research which is currently being carried out.

Community Charge

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total cost to public funds of the Price Waterhouse report on the cost of administering and collecting the poll tax in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The Government have no plans to introduce a poll tax. The cost of the report on the community charge to which the hon. Member presumably refers was £60,000.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from local authorities on the actual costs of introducing the community charge; and if he will consider the provision of additional finance (a) in the current financial year and (b) in 1990-91.

Mr. Gummer: We have received a number of representations from charging authorities on the costs of introducing the community charge. We believe that sufficient resources, both capital and revenue, have been made available by the Government for 1989-90. Collection costs in 1990-91 will be taken into account in assessing charging authorities' need to spend. We shall be discussing authorities' need to spend with the local authority associations before making proposals for the 1990-91 settlement.

HEALTH

AIDS

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he proposes to issue instructions to the Health Education Authority to bring to public attention evidence presented in the Journal of the American Medical Association 1989, 261(2), pp. 244-5, that passionate kissing favours the transmission of HIV.

Mr. Mellor: The article referred to in the Journal of the American Medical Association presents evidence to suggest that passionate kissing can produce microlesions in the mouth, which could, in theory, result in the transmission of HIV since any activity which could involve blood coming into contact with damaged tissue carries such a risk. However, there is no evidence, of anyone having become infected with HIV through passionate kissing. In developing AIDS educational material the HEA has regard to the latest medical and scientific knowledge, and is guided by the Government's expert advisory group on AIDS.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases there are of HIV being transmitted through mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Mr. Mellor: I am advised that no such cases have been reported anywhere in the world.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he will make a statement on the steps being taken in the National Health Service to reduce the risk of health workers contracting HIV from their patients;

(2) how many health-care workers have caught HIV from their patients during the course of their National Health Service duties over the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor: The risks of health care workers contracting HIV from patients are extremely low. One case has been reported in the United Kingdom. Nevertheless, in view of the serious consequences of HIV infection specific guidelines have been given to the health service on the steps which should be taken to minimise the risks of transmission of HIV. This guidance is currently under review by the expert advisory group on AIDS. In addition, much of the general control of infection guidance issued by the Department is relevant to the prevention of HIV transmission in the health care setting.

Osteoporosis

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what preventive action he is taking against osteoporosis.

Mr. Freeman: In conjunction with the Health Education authority we take every opportunity to encourage women to take regular exercise and to avoid smoking and excessive alcohol intake, all of which help to prevent osteoporosis. Hormone replacement therapy, which is available on the NHS, can be effective in preventing osteoporosis. Since there may be risks as well as benefits of such treatment for some people, the individual patient's suitability for HRT should be a matter for the clinical judgment of their doctor. The Medical Research Council has set up a specialist group to look at the further research required into osteoporosis and HRT. The National Osteoporosis Society has been awarded a grant of £20,000 a year for three years under the Department's grant aid programme and provides information and literature for the general public and for doctors on osteoporosis.

"Working For Patients"

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what effect paragraph 4.9 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on the manner in which regions can charge one another for cross-boundary flows in genito-urinary medicine without breaching patient confidentiality; and how paragraph 4.9 will affect health authorities in controlling their cross-boundary costs in direct access services such as GUM medicinal and family planning.

Mr. Mellor: We are currently considering with health service representatives the scope and operation of cross-charging arrangements and will have regard to the position of direct access services and the confidentiality requirements of genito-urinary medicine services.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he will make a statement as to the maintenance of genito-urinary medicine and venereal disease clinics as a core service in the light of paragraph 4.15 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555);

(2) if he will make a statement on the effect paragraph 4.15 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on the designation of health care for drug misusers as a core service.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend's reply to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) on 7 February at column 640.

AIDS-HIV Patient Treatment

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what effect paragraph 6.9 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on people with HIV infection seeking primary care from other Health Service sources such as GUM clinics, while remaining registered with a general practitioner;

(2) if he will make a statement on how paragraph 4.25 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will affect the application by person with AIDS for a referral to a centre other than the one with which the district health authority has a contract;

(3) if he will make a statement on how paragraph 7.15 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will affect the ability of general practitioners to use their drug budgets to pay for patients with HIV-related diseases;

(4) how paragraph 4.8 of "Working For Patients" will affect the additional costs of treating AIDS patients;

(5) if he will make a statement on the effect paragraph 6.5 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on the budgeting of practice staff costs for HIV and AIDS counselling services;

(6) if he will make a statement on the effect paragraph 6.4 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on general practitioners dealing with people with AIDS;

(7) if he will make a statement on the effect paragraph 4.15 of "Working For Patients" will have on the designation of AIDS care as a core service;

(8) if he will make a statement as to the application of paragraph 4.17 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) to the care of AIDS patients;

(9) if he will make a statement as to the effect of paragraph 2.13 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) on the training of receptionists in relation to people with HIV and AIDS;

(10) how paragraph 4.30 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will affect staff training and improved methods of care for people with AIDS where general hospital services are provided through National Health Service hospital trusts or private hospitals outside the control of health authorities;

(11) whether he will make a statement as to the effect of paragraph 2.8 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) on key HIV and AIDS care services;

(12) if he will make a statement as to the effect the renegotiating of services outlined in paragraph 4.13 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555) will have on the ability of people with AIDS to develop a relationship of trust and understanding with a particular centre.

Mr. Mellor: The aims of the proposals in "Working for Patients" are to improve services for patients, to extend patient choice, to delegate responsibility to where the services are provided, and to secure the best value for money. The aim of the implementation work now in hand is to ensure that the arrangements introduced meet the needs of all patients, including people with AIDS and HIV infection. That work includes detailed consideration of the account needing to be taken of HIV morbidity in deciding resource allocations; contractual arrangements to cover services which hospitals provide for people who have not been referred by their GPs; the account needing to be taken of the health needs of people with AIDS and other chronic illnesses in determining GPs' practice and prescribing budgets; and arrangements for the education and training of NHS staff and general practitioners in HIV-related matters.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the maximum cost of dental treatment has risen in cash and real terms between April 1979 and April 1989.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is set out in the table:

Maximum charge for a course of treatment in the general dental service

April 1979	30·00
April 1989 (current prices)	150·00
April 1989 (1979-80 prices)	75·69

Nurses' and Midwives' Pay Review Body

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will place in the Library a copy of the Health Department's written evidence to the nurses' and midwives' pay review body on the new grading structure for nursing and midwifery education staff.

Mr. Mellor: My right hon. and learned Friend has done so today.

GPs (Retirement)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has made for introducing a retirement age for general medical practitioners and for abolishing 24-hour retirement without abatement of pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: As we made clear in "General Practice in the NHS: A New Contract", issued to all GPs in February, compulsory retirement for general medical practitioners aged 70 or over will be introduced from April 1991.

We intend to reduce the retirement age to 65 in due course, as proposed in the White Paper "Working for Patients". The arguments for doing so in terms of standards of service to patients are strong. However we are proceeding on a longer timetable for that proposal and our first objective is to introduce a compulsory retirement age of 70 for GPs.

"Promoting Better Health" made clear that similar provisions should apply to general dental practitioners. We will therefore introduce a retirement age of 65 on April 1997. This retirement age will be introduced in stages. That is, dental practitioners aged 72 or over on 1 April 1990 will have to retire on that date. The age of retirement will be reduced thereafter year by year after 1990 until it reaches 65 in 1997. We have negotiated with the General Dental Services committee compensation payments for those dentists who retire in the first three years of the scheme for loss in respect of the sale of goodwill of their practices.

Regulations on the compulsory retirement of GPs and dentists will be published as soon as possible.

Turning to 24-hour retirement, we will end from April 1990 the provision whereby a general medical or opthalmic medical practitioner, or dental practitioner, may on reaching 65 retire, draw his or her pension and return to practice after 24 hours without abatement of pension. This provision is wholly exceptional in the public sector. It was introduced to encourage elderly practitioners to remain in practice at a time when there was a shortage of young doctors and dentists. Now that there are adequate numbers of younger doctors and dentists the arrangement is no longer justified. The position of those practitioners who currently benefit under this provision will be protected.

Youth Treatment Centres

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the findings of the inspection of Glenthorne and St. Charles youth treatment centres carried out by his social services inspectorate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I have today placed copies of the findings of the inspection, carried out by my social services inspectorate, in the Library of each House. This is the first such inspection of the youth treatment centres and I am grateful to the inspectorate for its thorough and detailed work. The Government fully accept their responsibility for ensuring that the special service provided by the centres for a group of youngsters with very severe problems is delivered as effectively and efficiently as possible. The inspectorate's report will be a great assistance in that task.

The inspection pointed to the urgent need for improvements to the fabric of the buildings, and action on this has already been set in hand. In considering the wider recommendations relating to professional and management matters, the Government will wish to take account of the views of those directly involved in providing and using the youth treatment service. The findings are being made available to them and to others with an interest. I have also taken the opportunity to visit both centres to hear at first hand the views of staff and local management. Their task is a difficult one and I wish to applaud the commitment and dedication that they bring to it.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contribution is made to the study of social sciences in Scotland by the Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs; and whether he intends to give it support from the Scottish Education Department.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Educational Trust for United Nations and International Affairs produces materials which education authorities may choose to purchase for school use. The trust's aims and activities do not come within current priorities for grant to voluntary organisations.

Adult and Continuing Education

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether there exists in Scotland a unit for the development of adult and continuing education; and what funding is available from Government sources for such services.

Mr. Rifkind: There is no direct equivalent to the unit for the development of adult and continuing education in Scotland. The Scottish Institute for Adult and Continuing Education aims to advance education amongst adult members of the community and to co-ordinate the efforts of organisations, institutions and individuals in attaining that aim. In 1988-89 the institute received funding of £34,000 from the Scottish Education Department and £46,000 from other Government Departments and public bodies.

Open Learning Centres

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what funding is available from Government sources for open learning centres for adults in inner cities in Scotland;

(2) if there is in Scotland an adult literacy and basic skills unit; and what funding is available from Government sources for adult basic education work in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: The provision of adult basic education in Scotland is primarily the responsibility of the local authorities, who determine the extent and means of provision within the broad guidelines and resources provided by central Government.

The Government are making available £30,000 in both 1988-89 and 1989-90 to assist the establishment of an open learning centre at Whitfield, Dundee and £16,000 in both 1988-89 and 1989-90 to support the work of the Edinburgh walk-in numeracy centre. The Training Agency will be making £80,000 available towards the establishment of four open learning centres (including Whitfield) in 1989-90.

The former Scottish adult basic education unit was integrated with the Scottish Community Education Council in 1986. Adult basic education was accorded first priority by the council in its corporate plan for 1988-89 and approximately one third of Scottish Education Department grant of £550,000 to the council was directed to that subject.

The Scottish Education Department will in addition be making a further £100,000 available towards other adult basic education initiatives in 1989-90.

Ethnic Minority Adults

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to implement section 11 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1966 to provide for the settlement, welfare and education of ethnic minority adults.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no plans to introduce specific grants to local authorities under section 11 of the 1966 Act.

REPLAN

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he intends to introduce an equivalent of the REPLAN educational programme for unemployed adults which exists in England and Wales.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 18 April 1989.

Community Care

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, following National Health Service circular 1989 (Gen 5), which body is to take the lead role in community care; what is the future role of joint planning; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: National Health Service circular 1989(Gen)5 on the "Establishment of Community Care Facilities by Health Boards for People Being Discharged from Long-Stay Hospitals" made no changes to existing responsibilities for community care or joint planning. The Government are currently considering the future funding and organisation in light of Sir Roy Griffiths' report.

Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the working party preparing a code of practice based on the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 has met to consider responses received to the draft code; and whether a further draft code will be published.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: All comments on the draft code are being carefully considered but my right hon. and learned Friend has not felt it necessary to reconvene the working party. It is not currently the intention to publish a further draft before it is laid before Parliament.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many responses he has had on the draft code of practice circulated under section 119 of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984 for (a) health boards (b) local authorities, (c) voluntary organisations, (d) professional associations and (e) individuals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is as follows:

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had concerning guidance on provisions for guardianship contained in the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A number of representations about guidance on guardianship were received in the course of our consultations on a code of practice on the 1984 Act. These comments along with the other responses to the consultation exercise are still under consideration.

Incinerators

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the municipal incinerators in Scotland and indicate which ones are licensed to burn (a) radioactive waste, (b) special waste and (c) clinical waste.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Incinerators operated by local authorities in Scotland are listed in the table. Such incinerators operate under the conditions specified in a resolution passed by the disposal authority. These resolutions, which are required to be made available for public inspection, include such limitations on the incineration of controlled wastes as the authority considers to be necessary; controlled wastes include special and clinical wastes.

Under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 responsibility for the control of radioactive wastes rests with the Secretary of State for Scotland. The municipal incinerators authorised by him to burn radioactive waste are shown in the list below.

Incinerator and authority

Aberdeen (East Tullos)[1]—City of Aberdeen District Council
Alloa—Clackmannan District Council
Dundee (Baldovie)[1]—City of Dundee District Council
Govan—City of Glasgow District Council
Polmadie[1]—City of Glasgow District Council
Linwood—Renfrew District Council
Chinglebraes—Orkney Islands Council
Rova Head—Shetland Islands Council

[1] Authorised to burn low level radioactive wastes.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what regulations govern emissions from hospital incinerators; and if he has any plans to improve the operating standards of hospital incinerators;

(2) if he has any proposals to remove Crown immunity from hospital incinerators.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety (Emissions to Atmosphere) (Amendment) Regulations 1989 set emission standards for incinerators with a capacity of over 1 tonne per hour. These regulations apply to hospital incinerators but there is at present no Scottish hospital incinerator of the relevant size.

New controls on smaller incinerators will be introduced as soon as possible. It is intended that these controls will also apply to hospital incinerators.

Pollution Inspectorate

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources are available to and what are the staffing levels of Her Majesty's pollution inspectorate in Scotland; what proposals he has to extend the staffing establishment; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate for Scotland is part of the Scottish Development Department and has a staff of 20 including 13 professionally qualified engineers and scientists. The inspectorate's complement is in line with its current commitments, but staffing levels are reviewed regularly.

Drinking Water

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent advice he has received on acceptable levels of lead in drinking water.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Current medical advice is that there is little evidence to suggest that there are any health risks if the lead content in water is below the current European Commission maximum of 50 microgrammes per litre.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the most recent information available on levels of lead in drinking water in (a) Edinburgh and (b) Scotland; and what estimate he has as to when the levels will be reduced to within European Economic Community safety limits.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A recent survey of lead-plumbed properties in Edinburgh showed that the average lead level in tap water was less than 0·03 microgrammes per litre; it is estimated that not more than 15,000 people receive water which, on occasions, may exceed the maximum admissible concentration in the EC drinking water directive. Similar survey information is not available for the rest of Scotland. Six water authorities are completing programmes of treatment to reduce plumbosolvency and ensure compliance with the directive, as shown in the table:

Region	Number of supplies not meeting standard Now	At end of 1989	Estimated population affected ('000s) Now	At end of 1989
Dumfries and Galloway	22	None	65·0	None
Highland	9	None	7·5	None
Tayside	10	None	18·6	None
Grampian	14	None	31·2	None
Lothian	1	1	15·0	15·0
Strathclyde	22	16	73·0	37·0
TOTAL	78	17	210·3	52·0

Complete compliance should be achieved by Lothian early in 1991 while in Strathclyde all but two schemes will be completed by that date. The last two should be finished by 1992.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action is being taken to implement the European Economic Community directive on safe levels of lead in water; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the quality of water supplies lies with the water authorities, the regional and islands councils. They are introducing improved treatment to reduce plumbosolvency and are removing lead communication pipes in their ownership whenever there is an opportunity to do so. Enhanced capital allocations have been made available to local authorities to enable them to make faster progress with this work. Consumers are encouraged to replace that part of their lead piping leading to the kitchen tap by the availability of home improvement grant at an enhanced level for this purpose. These measures should ensure that the directive's limits are met.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the effectiveness of lime and orthophosphate in reducing levels of lead in pipes and in tanks.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The addition of both lime and orthophosphate to water which contains no significant amount of lead is aimed at reducing the plumbosolvency of the water; that is the ability to take up lead from lead plumbing, mainly in the ownership of consumers. Lime is generally effective, but some larger supply areas require further treatment using orthophosphate. Neither of these treatments affect the amount of lead available from lead pipes and tanks, they merely limit uptake.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the level of nitrate pollution in drinking water in (a) Edinburgh and (b) Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Public water supplies in Edinburgh are well within the nitrate limits set in the EC drinking water directive. Elsewhere in Scotland, no consumers receive from public supplies water with levels of nitrate above those in the directive. Local environmental health authorities will advise consumers on levels in private supplies and on any appropriate remedial action.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on levels of aluminium in drinking water in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Fourteen public supplies in Scotland contain levels of aluminium from natural sources above the maximum admissible concentration (MAC) set in the EC drinking water directive. In each case the levels are well within those recommended by medical advisers as being acceptable and derogations have been granted as provided in article 9 of the directive. More than 69 supplies do not comply because of the presence of aluminium used in treatment. Most of these supplies are already the subject of improvement programmes in terms of article 20 of the directive. Some which exceed the MAC occasionally have yet to be fully assessed following recent reinterpretation of the status of the MAC.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on levels of trihalomethane in drinking water in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Detailed information on levels of trihalomethanes in drinking water is not held centrally. A national standard of 200 microgrammes per litre as an average over three months was set for Scotland in 1985 and all supplies comply with this limit. Consideration is currently being given to lowering the standard to 100 microgrammes per litre and to taking action to achieve this lower level in all supplies within a set period.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the extent to which drinking water in Scotland is deliberately dosed with aluminium compounds; and for what purpose.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Almost half of the water put into supply is treated in works where aluminium compounds are used to remove colour and suspended solids.

Pollution Control

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff in the Scottish Office are working on aspects of air and water pollution.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A large number of Scottish Office staff have responsibilities which involve aspects of these subjects. In the divisions and units directly concerned with pollution matters, 58 staff are engaged full-time on these duties and 64 part-time. The majority of the full-time staff are engaged on environmental studies in the marine laboratory, Aberdeen; most of the remainder are located in the parts of the Scottish Development Department which deal with environmental pollution.

Hazardous Waste Inspectorate

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the staffing levels in, and what resources are available to, the hazardous waste inspectorate in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Six professional staff are engaged for part of their time on hazardous waste inspectorate duties, amounting to the equivalent of two full-time officers. Staffing levels are currently being reviewed. The inspectorate can call on the resources of a wide spectrum of professional expertise available in the Scottish Office.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the sites in Scotland which are licensed to dispose of (a) radioactive waste, (b) special waste and (c) clinical waste.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Sites currently approved by the Secretary of State for the disposal of low level radioactive waste in accordance with authorisations granted under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 are listed in the table.

Under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 the districts and islands councils in Scotland are the licensing authorities for controlled waste which includes special and clinical waste. Licences, and resolutions in the case of a council's own operation, are not necessarily written in terms of special or clinical wastes. The disposal facilities listed in the table can dispose of wastes which could be regarded as special wastes or clinical wastes respectively. Municipal incinerators are not included in the lists as they have been covered by my reply today to the hon. Member on that subject.

Hunterston A Power Station

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the nuclear installations inspectorate will publish the long-term safety review for Hunterston A power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate intends to publish this summer the findings on its assessment of the South of Scotland electricity board's long term safety review for Hunterston A power station.

Fish Landings

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total values of all fish landings in Scotland for each year from May 1979 to the last available figures for the current year.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total values of all fish landings into Scotland by United Kingdom and foreign vessels since 1979 are:

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many owners of Scottish fishing vessels received grant aid for the modernisation programme in the period May 1979 to May 1989; and what was the total value of these grants;

(2) what is the total value of grants aid given to the Scottish fishing industry in the period May 1979 to May 1989 for the building of new fishing vessels.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: During the period in question £93,181,802 was awarded in grant aid. This figure is made up of £25,880,605 EC assistance, £15,571,812 assistance from the Highlands and Islands Development Board and £51,729,385 in national grants. The EC assistance figure of £25,880,605 comprise £19,619,574 towards the cost of the building of new fishing vessels and £6,261,031 towards the cost of modernisations. The breakdown of the national grant aid and the assistance from the Highlands and Islands Development Board is not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Beef Premium

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total values of payments made to farmers in Scotland for the beef premium in the period from May 1979 to May 1989; and how much of this was funded from the European Community and how much from the central Government.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total payments made to farmers in Scotland for the beef variable premium from January 1979 to 2 April 1989 inclusive amount to £157·7 million. Of this total, £63·1 million was funded by the European Community and £94·6 million by the Government. This scheme was replaced by the beef special premium scheme on 3 April 1989, which is entirely funded by the Community. Payments under this scheme have just commenced.

Sheepmeat Regime

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the total values of payments made to farmers in Scotland for the sheepmeat regime since 1979; and how much of this was from the European Community and how much from central Government in the period May 1979 to May 1989.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total payments made to farmers in Scotland from January 1979 to April 1989 inclusive for the fat sheep guarantee scheme, sheep annual premium and sheep variable premium scheme amount to £375 million. Of this total £367·5 million was funded by the European Community and £7·5 million by the Government.

Fishing (Loans)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of loans made to the Scottish fishing industry from the Sea Fish Industry Authority in the period May 1979 to May 1989; and how many vessels these loans cover.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total value of loans from the Sea Fish Industry Authority for the period May 1979 to May 1989 is £14,437,119. Information on the number of vessels assisted is not available as records relating to the earlier years have been destroyed.

Military Establishments

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated total value to the economy of Scotland of the presence of military establishments of United Kingdom armed forces in various locations in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: It is not possible to provide comprehensive estimates. But details of the deployment of defence manpower in Scotland and estimates of defence equipment expenditure in Scotland are given in the table. There are no separate estimates of defence manpower expenditure in Scotland, although total United Kingdom defence expenditure on personnel in 1987-88 was £7,212 million.

Tourism

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of tourism in Scotland in each of the years from May 1979 to April 1989.

Mr. Lang: Figures for 1988 and 1989 are not yet available.

Harbours

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many harbour projects in Scotland have been carried out in the period from May 1979 to April 1989; where are the locations; how much money was granted to these projects; and what were the sources of the funds.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: From May 1979 to April 1989, the harbours listed in the table received grant from DAFS under section 2 of the Fisheries Act 1955, amounting to a total of £8,146,558

Highlands and Islands Development Board

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total budget for the Highlands and Islands Development Board for the years May 1979 to April 1989; how much central Government gave towards the budget; and how much was obtained from other sources.

Mr. Lang: The table sets out grant-in-aid from central Government to the Highlands and Islands Development Board, receipts from other sources and gross expenditure for the financial years 1979-80 to 1988-89.

Highlands and Islands development board
Expenditure 1979-80 to 1988-89 (£ million at outturn prices)

Year	Grant-in-aid	Receipts	Gross Expenditure
1979-80	17·4	3·9	21·3
1980-81	20·0	3·7	23·7
1981-82	22·9	4·4	27·3
1982-83	27·5	5·2	32·7
1983-84	31·3	6·8	38·1
1984-85	34·6	7·5	42·1
1985-86	30·4	9·2	39·6
1986-87	26·4	9·1	35·5
1987-88	26·2	11·7	37·9
1988-89	31·6	10·4	42·0

Agricultural Development Programmes

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many ADPs are operating in Scotland; where are the locations; what is the total value of grants made to farmers under these schemes; and what is the source of these funds.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There is one agricultural development programme (ADP) operating in Scotland covering the islands off the north and west coasts but excluding the Western Isles which have recently benefited from an integrated development programme.

The programme provides for expenditure by the United Kingdom Government of £38 million (of which £27 million has already been committed) over a five-year period with reimbursement at the rate of 40 per cent. from the guidance section of the European agricultural guarantee and guidance fund.

Fishing (Aid)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much financial aid has been given to the fishing industry under the European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund scheme since May 1979 to date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A total of £25,800,605 has been awarded to the Scottish fishing industry for the construction and modernisation of fishing vessels.

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many grants have been given to members of the Scottish fishing industry under the European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund scheme since May 1979 to May 1989; and how many new vessels were built with those grants.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A total of 561, of which 196 were for the construction of new vessels.

Doctors and Dentists (Retirement)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has made for introducing a retirement age for general medical and dental practitioners and for abolishing 24-hour retirement without abatement of pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As we made clear in "General Practice in the NHS: A New Contract", issued to all Scottish GPs on 12 April, compulsory retirement for general medical practitioners aged 70 or over will be introduced from April 1991.

We intend to reduce the retirement age to 65 in due course, as proposed in the White Paper "Working for Patients". The arguments for doing so in terms of standards of services to patients are strong. However we are proceeding on a longer timetable for that proposal and our first objective is to introduce a compulsory retirement age of 70 for GPs.

"Promoting Better Health" made clear that similar provisions should apply to general dental practitioners. We will, therefore, introduce a retirement age of 65 on April 1997. This age will be introduced in stages. That is, dental practitioners aged 72 or over on 1 April 1990 will have to retire on that date. The age of retirement will be reduced thereafter year by year after 1990 until it reaches 65 in 1997. We have negotiated with the general dental services committee compensation payments for those dentists who retire in the first three years of the scheme for loss in respect of the sale of goodwill of their practices.

Regulations on the compulsory retirement of GPs and dentists will be published in the next few months.

Turning to 24-hour retirement, we will end from April 1990 the provision whereby a general medical or ophthalmic medical practitioner, or dental practitioner, may on reaching 65 retire, draw his or her pension and return to practice after 24 hours without abatement of pension. This provision is wholly exceptional in the public sector. It was introduced to encourage elderly practitioners to remain in practice at a time when there was a shortage of young doctors and dentists. Now that there are adequate numbers of younger doctors and dentists the arrangement is no longer justified. The position of those practitioners who currently benefit under this provision will be protected.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence is he has any further information about the dangers of radiation from nuclear tests.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is the function of the Government's independent advisors on radiological protection matters, the National Radiological Protection Board, to review all new information, including that on the test veterans, and advise the Government accordingly.

Submarines

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received concerning incidents involving submarines and fishing vessels.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As I told the hon. Member on 11 April 1989 at column 515, letters continue to be received from fishermen's organisations and from other interested groups about a number of incidents in which submarines are alleged to have been involved. The hon. Member himself raised this subject with the Royal Navy and the US Navy in Scotland yesterday during an all-party visit to Faslane and Holy Loch.

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the latest position regarding discussions between his Department, the port of Tilbury and Thurrock borough council regarding the use of the port of Tilbury by nuclear-powered Royal Navy submarines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As I said in my answer to the hon. Member for Clwyd, South-West (Mr. Jones) on 9 March at column 677, my officials have had preliminary discussions with port and local authorities about visits to Tilbury by Royal Navy ships, including nuclear powered submarines. This remains the position. It would be premature to anticipate the outcome of these discussions at this stage.

44. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to update the Royal Navy's plans for evacuation and safety in the event of an accident to a nuclear submarine which involves an escape of radiation.

45. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to update the Royal Navy's plans for evacuation and safety in the event of an accident to a nuclear submarine which involves an escape of radiation.

49. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to update the Royal Navy's plans for evacuation and safety in the event of an accident to a nuclear submarine which involves an escape of radiation.

104. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to update the Royal Navy's plans for evacuation and safety in the event of an accident to a nuclear submarine which involves an escape of radiation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All aspects of planning for accidents in Royal navy nuclear-powered submarines are kept under constant review.

109. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many incidents have there been during the past 10 years in which allegations have been made of submarines fouling fishing nets in the Irish sea; and in how many of these alleged incidents it has been substantiated that United Kingdom submarines have been involved.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since 1982, the date from which information is held, we are able to trace 35 cases in which Royal Navy submarines are alleged to have been in collision with fishing vessels or their gear in the Irish sea, Clyde approaches and north Channel. Six of these allegations were substantiated following investigation.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the nature and circumstances of navigational problems encountered by Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines at the port of Hull.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Entry by submarines into the port of Hull was complicated by the tides there. In 1983, a nuclear-powered submarine had to turn back at the point of entering Hull as a safe entry could not be guaranteed in the bad weather conditions at the time. In 1985, another nuclear-powered submarine was exposed to the risk of slight external damage while it was being guided into the port. In the light of these incidents, and the emphasis we place on the safety of nuclear-powered vessels, we reluctantly decided that the navigational risks of nuclear-powered submarines visiting Hull under these circumstances outweighed the benefits of such visits, even though Hull was popular with submarine crews and previous visits had been a great success.

RAF Upper Heyford

17. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations and representations he has received about future uses of RAF Upper Heyford.

21. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultations and representations he has received about future uses of RAF Upper Heyford.

34. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultation and representations he has received about future use of RAF Upper Heyford.

35. Mr. Wall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultation and representations he has received about future use of RAF Upper Heyford.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO has not yet taken decisions on restructuring its forces following the INF treaty; no are decisions imminent. In the meantime, the British Government have not agreed to any changes to the role of aircraft of the 20th tactical fighter wing based at RAF Upper Heyford, which forms an important part of NATO'S longer-range intermediate-range strike capability. My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about the future use of the base from hon. Members and members of the public.

Nuclear Weapons

18. Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's current proposals to modernise short-range nuclear forces.

24. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's current proposals to modernise short-range nuclear forces.

63. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's current proposals to modernise short-range nuclear forces.

74. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about Her Majesty's Government's current proposals to modernise short-range nuclear forces.

Mr. Younger: Along with their allies, the British Government believe that to support the strategy of flexible response NATO requires a mix of nuclear forces, including short-range systems, and that these need to be kept up to date and effective where necessary. However, specific proposals on modernisation are made by the appropriate NATO authorities, not by individual nations.

20. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the development, procurement and deployment of short-range attack missiles with a nuclear capability.

57. Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the development, procurement and deployment of short-range attack missiles with a nuclear capability.

58. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration has been given to the development, procurement and deployment of short-range attack missiles with a nuclear capability.

97. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the development, procurement and deployment of short-range attack missiles with a nuclear capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are currently considering the options for a possible delivery system for a replacement for the United Kingdom's theatre nuclear weapons, including a derivative of the American short-range attack missile II, the SRAM(T). The SRAM(T) has already been selected by the Pentagon as the basis for a United States nuclear stand-off missile programme.

28. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear air-launched weapons the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

60. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear air-launched weapons the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

68. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear air-launched weapons the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear air-launched weapons the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no evidence to indicate that the Warsaw pact has discontinued the use of any of its air-launched nuclear weapons since 1980. Indeed, there are signs that the variety of these weapons held by the Soviet air forces has been increased.

30. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from his Belgian counterpart about Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

36. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from his Belgian counterpart about Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

56. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from his Belgian counterpart about Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Manchester, Blackley (Mr. Eastham).

31. Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear missiles the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

43. Mr. Maples: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear missiles the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

101. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear missiles the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We do not believe that the Warsaw pact has discontinued the use of any short-range missile systems during the 1980s. It retains a massive 16:1 superiority over NATO in short-range nuclear-capable missile launchers in Europe. The FROG-7 missile, with a range of 70 km has been replaces by the SS-21 missile, with a range of 120 km, in the forward area. We have no indication that the FROG-7s withdrawn have been destroyed. The SS-1 SCUD has been upgraded and remains in service with the Warsaw pact.

39. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the most recent proposals for new nuclear artillery shells.

50. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the most recent proposals for new nuclear artillery shells.

62. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the most recent proposals for new nuclear artillery shells.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike).

80. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what short-range nuclear artillery the Warsaw pact has discontinued operating during the 1980s.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no evidence that Soviet artillery pieces capable of firing nuclear rounds have been removed from service in the 1980s. On the contrary, the Soviet Union has improved both quantitatively and qualitatively its nuclear-capable artillery with the introduction of new weapons systems: the 152mm 2S5, the long-range 203mm 2S7, and the 240mm 2S4 mortar. These new systems provide much greater mobility and firepower.

MOD Police

19. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the deployment of members of the Ministry of Defence police on land outside his Department's responsibility.

46. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the deployment of members of the Ministry of Defence police on land outside his Department's responsibility.

98. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the deployment of members of the Ministry of Defence police on land outside his Department's responsibility.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner).

Armoured Vehicles

22. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what armoured vehicles have been ordered by his Department for the Army since 1979.

108. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what armoured vehicles have been ordered by his Department for the Army since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer which I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell).

Baghdad International Exhibition

23. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about defence sales arising from the Baghdad international exhibition.

25. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about defence sales arising from the Baghdad international exhibition.

99. Mr. Terry Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about defence sales arising from the Baghdad international exhibition.

Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has about defence sales arising from the Baghdad international exhibition.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is too early to know if the exhibition gave rise to any defence sales prospects to Iraq or other countries. Any overseas sale would require an export licence and any for Iraq would be considered against the guidelines announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary on 29 October 1985, at column 454.

Chemical Weapons

27. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about development in the United States of new types of chemical weapons.

40. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about development in the United States of America of new types of chemical weapons.

42. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about development in the United States of America of new types of chemical weapons.

81. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about development in the United States of new types of chemical weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has regular discussions with his United States counterpart on a wide range of defence issues. They last met at the nuclear planning group meeting in Brussels on 19 and 20 April.

Soviet Strategy (Maskirovka)

29. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence his Department has that the Soviets are continuing to practise deception known as maskirovka, as part of their general strategy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The concept of Maskirovka ("masking") is strongly emphasised in Soviet military writings, where it is held to have contributed to their successes in world war II. It embraces all concealment and deception techniques at every level from the strategic to the tactical. Maskirovka continues to be a key element in Soviet military doctrine and we have no evidence that its importance has diminished.

NATO

32. Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received seeking the reduction of the United Kingdom's defence budget to the average North Atlantic Treaty Organisation level.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. The United Kingdom's defence expenditure and the extent of our contribution to the Alliance is substantially above the NATO median. The United Kingdom's defence budget is planned to rise in real terms over the period to 1991-92 and taking into account the latest reported budgetary plans of the other members of the Alliance, the United Kingdom is likely to remain amongst the leading contributors.

67. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the Secretary General of NATO; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Younger: I next expect to see Dr. Woerner at the meeting of NATO's defence planning committee next month. We shall discuss a wide range of subjects of mutual interest.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on (a) the failures and, (b) the successes, of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation since 1959.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Since the signing of the North Atlantic Treaty on 4 April 1949, NATO has been outstandingly successful in keeping the peace in Europe during times of instability and rapid change in many parts of the world.

Malta

33. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his Maltese counterpart; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Younger: The Premier, Dr. Fenech-Adami, is the Minister with responsibility for the Maltese armed forces. We have held no substantive bilateral talks, although I met him during his visit to London last September.

Education Support

37. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training and education support is provided by his Department for Commonwealth and other friendly nations.

Mr. Neubert: Training and education support for Commonwealth and other friendly nations is provided by allocating places on United Kingdom service training courses to students from those countries and by sending service training teams overseas to assist our friends and allies in establishing their own training colleges and organisations in an effective and efficient way.

West Germany

38. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement upon his recent discussions with his West German counterpart.

77. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement upon his recent discussions with his West German counterpart.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes).

95. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the Secretary of State for Defence of the Federal Republic of Germany; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Younger: I expect to meet Dr. Stoltenberg to discuss a range of matters of mutual defence interest, at the meeting of NATO's defence planning committee next month.

Force Levels

41. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the Army, the Royal Air Force, the Royal Navy, and the Royal Marines are below their established strengths; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Shortfalls in service manpower are measured by comparing adult trained strengths against trained manpower requirements. As at 31 March 1989, shortfalls were Royal Navy 1,380, Royal Marines 43, Army 3,006, Royal Air Force 2,797. In order to encourage greater efficiency in the use of manpower, policy decisions have been taken to aim manpower plans at levels a little below the full requirement. Not all of these shortfalls are, therefore, unplanned.

WEU Assembly

47. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when next he intends to address the Western European Union Assembly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I shall be addressing the Western European Union Assembly on 4 June. This will provide a welcome opportunity to report on the achievements of the United Kingdom Presidency.

Lance Missile

48. Mr. Brian Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is current NATO policy on the possible replacement of the Lance missile.

52. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is current NATO policy on the possible replacement of the Lance missile.

53. Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is current NATO policy on the possible replacement of the Lance missile.

107. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is current NATO policy on the possible replacement of the Lance missile.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At their recent meeting in Brussels in the nuclear planning group, NATO Defence Ministers expressed their determination to maintain effective nuclear forces across the entire spectrum, including short-range missiles, and agreed that these forces must be kept up to date where necessary.

Z-berths

51. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy towards the declaration of further civilian port facilities as Z-berths.

65. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the declaration of further civilian port facilities as Z-berths.

69. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the declaration of further civilian port facilities as Z-berths.

86. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy toward the declaration of further civilian port facilities as Z-berths.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Royal Navy's requirements for port visits by nuclear-powered submarines are continually under review. When a port appears suitable and practicable, the safety considerations are discussed with local civilian authorities before a final decision is taken.

Frigates and Destroyers

54. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about the procurement of frigates and destroyers for the Royal Navy.

59. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about the procurement of frigates and destroyers for the Royal Navy.

71. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about the procurement of frigates and destroyers for the Royal Navy.

79. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement about the procurement of frigates and destroyers for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Government remain committed to maintain a force of about 50 destroyers and frigates and has plans for sufficient new orders to achieve this target. I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave on 28 April 1989 at column 686 of the Official Report for details of the recent invitation to tender for further type 23 frigates.

"Defence and the Environment"

55. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in implementing the proposals outlined in his Department's booklet, "Defence and the Environment."

Mr. Neubert: "Defence and the Environment" was published in 1987 as part of the Department's contribution to the European Year of the Environment. It did not contain any specific proposals, but described the extent of conservation activity on the defence estate. We continue to place a high priority on conservation in the management of our estate and the number of local conservation groups has continued to increase. In January 1988, we concluded a joint declaration of intent with the Nature Conservancy Council with which we enjoy a close working relationship.

Contracting Out

61. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the estimated annual saving made by his Department since 1979 in contracting out defence support services.

Mr. Sainsbury: Since 1979 and up to March 1988, contracting out of defence support services, excluding the transfer of the royal dockyards to commercial management, has resulted in a net financial saving now running at some £50 million per annum and a reduction of over 13,000 mainly civilian public sector posts.

French Defence Minister

64. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when next he intends meeting the French Defence Minister; and what matters will be discussed.

Mr. Younger: I have no firm plans for an early meeting with M. Chevenement.

Guerrilla Warfare

66. Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what part guerrilla warfare has in his Department's plans for the defence of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what part guerrilla warfare has in his Department's plans for the defence of the United Kindom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. The defence of the United Kingdom is based upon our membership of the NATO Alliance and upon our possession, within the Alliance, of strong conventional forces and of a credible nuclear deterrent. By these means peace has been maintained within Europe for 40 years since the formation of NATO in 1949.

Low Flying

70. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now consider establishing an independent inquiry into the need for low flying.

Mr. Neubert: No.

88. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of low-flying sorties over the Tynedale area in Northumberland in 1988; what is the estimated number for 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Central records are not held in a form which would enable the information requested for 1988 to be provided; nor is it possible to estimate the level of activity that the Tynedale area will see during 1989. I can assure my hon. Friend, however, that the Government will continue to do all within their power to minimise the disturbance caused by low-flying training and to spread this activity as widely and fairly as possible throughout the country.

NATO (Nuclear Planning)

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had recently with NATO Ministers about the modernisation of NATO's short-range nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

72. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

76. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

Mr. Younger: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan (Mr. Wray).

NATO (Arms Levels)

73. Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his NATO allies about levels of (a) conventional arms, and (b) tactical nuclear forces, in Europe.

78. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his NATO allies about levels of (a) conventional arms, and (b) tactical nuclear forces, in Europe.

87. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his NATO allies about levels of (a) conventional arms and (b) tactical nuclear forces in Europe.

Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his North Atlantic Treaty Organisation allies about levels of (a) conventional arms and (b) tactical nuclear forces in Europe.

Mr. Younger: I hold regular discussions with my NATO colleagues on a wide range of defence issues. We last met at the nuclear planning group on 19 and 20 April; and we shall be meeting again next month in the defence planning committee.

Plessey

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further assessment he has made in the light of the Monopolies and Mergers Commission report of the implications for defence procurement of the GEC/Siemens bid for Plessey; and if he will make a statement.

75. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the defence implications of the GEC/Siemens bid for Plessey.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission concluded in its report that the bid for GEC and Siemens for Plessey could proceed provided certain undertakings were secured. The MOD's view of the implications of the bid were clearly stated in the MMC report. My right hon. and noble Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry placed responsibility on the MOD to secure two of these undertakings. Discussions to this end are now in hand.

Ships (Orders)

82. Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ships have been ordered by his Department for the Royal Navy since 1979.

90. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ships have been ordered by his Department for the Royal Navy since 1979.

91. Mr David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what ships have been ordered by his Department for the Royal Navy since 1979.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer my hon. Friend to table 5 of volume 1 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates."

MARILYN

84. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what roles are envisaged for women in MARILYN, the study on future manpower policy.

Mr. Neubert: The MARILYN study recognised that the wider employment of women would assist in meeting the Army's manpower requirements.

Soviets Strategy (Afghanistan)

85. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has evidence that the Soviets have adapted their military thinking as a consequence of their experiences in Afghanistan.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The nine-year Soviet occupation of Afghanistan inevitably provided the Soviet Union with an extensive opportunity to learn practical lessons on the battlefield. The nature of the irregular warfare in Afghanistan forced the Soviet armed forces to adapt their traditional, heavily-mechanised tactics to suit local conditions and they recognised the requirement for greater flexibility in thought and action. Nevertheless, overall the lessons learned by the Soviets in Afghanistan have limited application in the NATO area.

Burden Sharing

89. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the latest United States plans for burden sharing will affect United Kingdom defence costs and commitments.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how the latest United States plans for burden sharing will affect United Kingdom defence costs and commitments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay).

Trident

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the Trident testing programme.

92. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the Trident testing programme.

100. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in the Trident testing programme.

Mr. Sainsbury: A series of 19 firings from a land-based launch pad was completed in January. 15 were complete successes, and one a partial success. The first test firing from a submarine on 21 March was terminated four seconds into the flight by the missile's self-destruct mechanism. The United States investigation into the cause of the failure has identified the need for modifications to the first stage thrust control system. It is planned to trial these modifications during the next submarine-launched test flight towards the end of July.

Nuclear Defence Establishments (Safety)

93. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated annual cost of securing Britain's nuclear defence establishments from infiltration by protest organisations.

Mr. Sainsbury: Security measures at Britain's defence nuclear establishments are designed to provide protection against a range of potential threats, principally espionage, sabotage, terrorism and subversion. However, it is not possible to identify that part of the total cost of protection which is attributable to the activity of protesters.

Tanks

94. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the relative vulnerability of tanks as a result of likely technological changes over the next 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The vulnerability of all our weapon systems, including tanks, is kept under review.

Sweden

96. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends visiting Sweden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I enjoyed a most successful and interesting visit to Sweden from 23 to 26 April. I saw the full range of the Swedish defence forces' impressive capabilities and had useful discussions on matters of mutual interest with Mr. Carlsson, the Defence Minister.

Exports

102. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the levels of export defence sales supported by DESO in 1988-89.

Mr. Sainsbury: The DESO continues to assist British companies market and sell their defence products overseas. It is through the sustained efforts of British industry, with the support of the DESO, that Britain maintains her position in the world as a major exporter of defence equipment. A broad overall view of United Kingdom successes is given in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989" which records that new contracts signed in 1988 are expected to be worth £3,500 million —a sign of the competitiveness of the British defence industry.

Nuclear-powered Naval Vessels (Accidents)

103. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the nature of the contacts between his Department and the relevant United States and Russian authorities in relation to co-operation in the event of accidents to nuclear-powered naval vessels.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence would, where possible, lend whatever assistance was requested in the event of an accident involving a nuclear-powered naval vessel belonging to another country.

Warsaw Pact Operational Manoeuvre Groups

105. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the future of the Warsaw pact's operational manoeuvre groups.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no evidence that the Soviet Union has abandoned the deep strike element of its offensive doctrine. The concept of the operational manoeuvre group, which is to maintain the momentum of attack throughout the entire depth of its operational area, remains an integral part of that doctrine.

Soviet Air Force

106. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has that the Soviet air force has reduced its offensive capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans).

Nimrod

110. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the location of the Nimrod AEW airframes and the use to which they are to be put.

Mr. Sainsbury: Three Nimrod AEW airframes have been broken up for spares to support the Nimrod maritime patrol aircraft fleet. A fourth is a ground instructional aircraft at RAF Finningley. The remaining aircraft are currently at RAF Abingdon. Following careful consideration, we have concluded that there is no viable alternative use for five of these airframes, and they are now being used for spares to support the Nimrod maritime patrol aircraft fleet. The future use of the last two airframes is still under consideration.

36 Engineer Regiment

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusion he has reached following the consideration of the possibility of redeploying 36 Engineer regiment from Maidstone.

Mr. Neubert: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has reviewed the possible deployment options for 36 Engineer Regiment. Having carefully considered the range of factors involved, he has concluded that the regiment should remain based at Maidstone.

Nuclear-powered Submarines

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the results of the environmental radiation monitoring which is carried out by his Department in connection with nuclear-powered submarine operation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Defence Radiological Protection Service will publish the results of environmental radiation monitoring carried out around nuclear-powered submarine berths in the United Kingdom, in the form of an annual report. With the agreement of the United States Government, results of monitoring carried out by the United States Navy in Holy Loch will also be included. The first published report, covering 1988 monitoring results, should be available in the summer of this year.

Arms Talks

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his counterparts in West Germany and other NATO countries about nuclear and conventional arms in recent weeks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Younger: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan (Mr. Wray). We shall be discussing conventional defence matters at a meeting of the NATO defence planning committee in June.

United States of America (Defence Secretary)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to meet the United States Defence Secretary.

Mr. Younger: I next expect to meet the United States Secretary for Defence at the meeting of NATO's defence planning committee next month.

Disarmament

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a table showing (a) the total number and explosive capacity, respectively, of all nuclear warheads removed from deployment, (b) the total number and description of all chemical weapons removed from deployment and (c) the total number of conventional weapons and descriptions of each type removed from deployment by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation since 1959; and whether the withdrawals were made by unilateral or multilateral decisions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Much of the information requested is not available in the detail and format required or is classified. However, I am able to offer the following comments:

(a) In 1979, NATO Defence Ministers agreed to reduce by 1,000 the number of nuclear warheads stockpiled in Europe, and in 1983 (at Montebello) agreed to reduce the stockpile by a further 1,400 warheads. These two actions brought the NATO nuclear stockpile in Europe to its lowest level since 1969. This level is being further reduced as warheads are removed in association with the implementation of the INF treaty.

(b) There are no chemical weapons declared to NATO. The United Kingdom abandoned its own chemical weapons capability in the late 1950s. The United States has only a limited retaliatory capability and has announced at the opening of the CFE talks in March 1989 that it would accelerate the withdrawal of its CW stocks from the Federal Republic of Germany, previously planned to be completed by 1992. Moreover, the United States has destroyed some 15 million pounds of chemical agent since 1970.

(c) We do not hold comprehensive information on all the past modernisation and disposal measures which have been carried out by our NATO allies.

Nuclear Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the last sea dump of radioactive waste arising from military uses of nuclear materials took place; what was the total quantity of radioactivity contained in radioactive waste packages of military origin nuclear waste disposed of at sea; what volume of such radioactive waste has been disposed of at sea; and if there are any plans to renew the sea disposal of radioactive wastes arising from defence programmes.

Mr. Sainsbury: It has not been the Government's practice to provide a detailed breakdown between civil and military sources of the drummed radioactive wastes disposed of at sea in the operations up to and including 1982. As required under the London dumping convention (LDC), global figures have been given to the Nuclear Energy Agency (NEA). As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy informed the House on 26 May 1988 at column 233, the Government have decided not to resume sea dumping of drummed radioactive wastes, but intend to keep open this option for large items arising from decommissioning operations.

Condor II Missile

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, Official Report, 17 March, column 379, whether the Condor II ballistic missile under development by Argentina has the capacity to be fitted with nuclear warheads.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We cannot rule out the possibility that Condor II could be technically capable of carrying a nuclear warhead. We have, however, seen nothing to suggest that Argentina currently has a nuclear weapons programme.

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any plutonium placed up to 1 April 1969 in the defence stockpile managed by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority has since been used in a nuclear test explosion.

Mr. Sainsbury: It is not our practice to comment on the nature or source of fissile material used in nuclear test explosions other than to say it has been material manufactured for defence purposes outside safeguards and free of end-use restrictions.

Military Bases

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will place in the Library, copies of all environmental impact statements prepared for the United States Congress to cover United Kingdom military bases leased to, or made available to, United States military forces based in the United Kingdom;

(2) what plans he has to initiate legislation to cover (a) the production of environmental impact statements to cover all United Kingdom military bases in the United Kingdom and abroad, and (b) the removal of Crown immunity from United Kingdom military bases.

Mr. Neubert: While the Town and Country Planning Acts do not apply to Crown development, the MOD follows the provisions of DOE circular 18/84, Welsh circular 23/88 and Scottish Development Department circular 21/84.

Similarly the requirement for environmental impact assessments is set out in DOE circular 15/88, Welsh Office circular 23/88 and Scottish Development Department circular 13/88. The MOD follows these provisions. No environmental impact assessments have been produced on behalf of United States forces based in the United Kingdom.

"Science and Mythology in the Making of Defence Policy"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of "Science and Mythology in the Making of Defence Policy", published in November 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence library already has a copy.

"Pressure: How America Runs NATO"

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of, "Pressure: How America Runs NATO", published in March.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence library ordered a copy before the publication date, and is presently awaiting delivery.

Defence Policy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the failures of implementation of Her Majesty's Government's defence policy since May 1979; and if he will make a statement on why policy failures have occurred.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This Government have been successful in implementing their defence policy.

Research Contracts

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many research contracts or agreements in universities or other institutions of higher education, which are currently being funded by his Department, are in each classification of secrecy.

Mr. Sainsbury: The MOD has currently 757 agreements and 96 contracts with United Kingdom universities and other higher education institutions. Four agreements and one contract are classified confidential; the remainder of the agreements and contracts are unclassified.

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts and agreements have existed in the past five years between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education for research related to the verification of arms control treaties by seismology; from which Ministry of Defence research establishment contracts or agreements originated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to her on 24 February at column 847.

US Military Forces

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the value to the Scottish economy of United States based military forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We estimate that the overall economic impact of United States military forces based in the United Kingdom is about £700 million for 1988, but no separate assessment has been made for Scotland.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made on resolving the choice of radars for the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom and our EFA partners are in the process of evaluating the merits of the competing tenders. A decision will be reached at the earliest opportunity.

Defence Procurement

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what further steps he is taking to improve the process of defence procurement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Efforts to improve the process of defence procurement, aimed at achieving better value for money, will continue unabated. We shall continue to stress the importance of competition and a more commercial approach to contracting, and we will continue to encourage the widest possible range of companies to compete for our business. In particular, the new suppliers service, launched in November 1988 to extend the range of the highly successful work of the small firms advice division, encourages new suppliers of any size and background to bring their products and services to the attention of the MOD.

We are continuing to implement the recommendations of the Jordan/Lee/Cawsey report "Learning From Experience" including those concerning a fully professional approach to project management.

We are encouraging our allies, through the NATO conference of national armamaments directors (CNAD), also to adopt a more commercial approach to defence procurement. Within Europe, we wholeheartedly support the work of the Independent European Programme Group (IEPG), which we currently chair, which aims to promote a more open market in defence goods.

Dog Training

83. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made with his review of dog training at the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Neubert: It is hoped that consideration of the consultant's recommendation may be completed in June.

Contracts (Competitive Tender)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what improvements in efficiency have been achieved since his Department adopted a policy of increasing the number of contracts subject to competitive tender.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 27 April 1989]: The increased use of competitive tendering is at the heart of the MOD's more commercial approach to defence procurement. This approach continues to bring substantial cash savings, and to encourage better quality and more timely delivery of equipment. It also continues to promote improvements in the efficiency and competitiveness of the British defence industry, contributing to its recent export successes, and its position as the world's third largest defence exporter.

The use of competitive tendering for defence services, since 1979, has led to a net financial saving now running at some £50 million a year, has improved efficiency and has permitted service manpower to be redeployed to front-line tasks. Large savings have been made in areas such as cleaning, catering, grounds maintenance and security guarding, but contractors also manage many other support activities and facilities for the services, including the royal dockyards. More details are given on page 35 of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989".

SCOTLAND

Electricity Privatisation

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what volume of radioactive wastes in the categories of (a) low level, (b) intermediate level and (c) high level, respectively, will be transferred to the ownership of Scottish Nuclear Limited under privatisation of the South of Scotland electricity board; and what volume of unreprocessed spent nuclear fuel and reprocessed plutonium will be transferred to Scottish Nuclear Limited on its creation.

Mr. Lang: The Government's intention is that Scottish Nuclear Limited should inherit all the SSEB's nuclear assets and liabilities.

AIDS

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the names of each of the advertising agencies used by his Department on the AIDS campaign, with the payments made to each.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Scottish Home and Health Department does not employ advertising agencies for the AIDS campaign.

Buses (Privatisation)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the fleet size and market share of the individual local authority bus public limited companies in Scotland;

(2) what are the numbers and types of public service vehicles which are in service with local authority public limited companies in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The numbers and types of public service vehicles in service with local authority owned bus undertakings in Scotland are shown in the following table. Information on the market share of the individual companies is not available.

	Strathclyde Buses Ltd.	Lothian Region Transport plc	Tayside Public Transport Company Ltd.
Double deckers	757	524	141
Single deckers	10	29	4
Coaches	13	21	12

New Businesses

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many firms have set up new businesses in Scotland in the period May 1979 to April 1989; what type of businesses they were; how many jobs were created; and where those firms were located.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Between 1 January 1980 and 1 January 1989, the number of companies registered in Scotland rose by just under 20,000, or by more than one half.

Information on jobs created from new openings is available only for the manufacturing sector. The definition used includes existing plants rising above the employment threshold of 11 and also includes in some cases existing businesses changing address or expansions to new sites.

One thousand, three hundred and eighty-five manufacturing plants opened in Scotland between 1979 and 1987, and 994 were still open at the end of 1987 with a total employment of 44,001. Tables 1 and 2 show the industry breakdown and the local authority breakdown of these plants. Figures for the period after 1987 are not yet available.

Table 1

Local authority region	Number of manufacturing plants opened January 1979 to [1]December 1987	[2]1987 Employment
Borders	37	1,115
Central	64	2,072
Dumfries and Galloway	27	972
Fife	106	3,578

TRANSPORT

M6 (Road Works)

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport why, during the recent bank holiday weekend, only one lane of the M6 northbound was open between junctions 16 and 17; how long it was closed prior to that weekend; when the present contraflow was set up increasing the number of lanes open in both directions to two; and whether he will ensure that where possible road works do not take place over bank holidays unless absolutely necessary and that, when such occasions arise, at least two lanes are open.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: One-lane working on the northbound carriageway was necessary from 9 pm to midnight on Sunday 30 April to set up the amended contraflow. Otherwise, two lanes have been available in both directions except when the contraflow system on the southbound carriageway was installed at the start of the contract on 15 April. We shall whenever possible ensure that road works do not take place at bank holidays, particularly on major holiday routes. If work has to be done, we shall keep as much road space open as possible.

Motor Cyclists (Safety)

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any proposals to improve the safety of new motor cycle riders in the first six months of their riding career.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Sales of motor cycles below 125 cc in the first four months of this year were 15 per cent. higher than during the same period in 1988.

We welcome this change in the fortunes of the motor cycle industry. Unfortunately, only about 30 per cent. of new riders at present undergo any form of training.

Today, the motor cycle industry launched 'bike fax': a personal organiser to be given free to all new provisional motor cycle licence holders by motor cycle dealers. This will help to establish motor cycle dealers as new rider information centres.

'Bike fax' seeks to influence the would-be biker to choose the right bike, to take proper training, to develop the skills to survive the high-risk early months and to dress suitably and conspicuously.

Although the Department of Transport has assisted in its production, 'bike fax' is funded entirely by the industry.

Manufacturers and dealers support fully our proposals to introduce compulsory basic training for new riders from mid-1990.

ENVIRONMENT

Urban Programme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much is being spent in the parliamentary constituency of Don Valley under the urban programme; on what schemes it is being spent; and if he will list the percentage of the budget that is allocated for (a) publicity, (b) information and (c) public relations.

Mr. Trippier: During 1988-89, schemes totalling £932,944 were approved in Don Valley under the urban programme. These were:

Mexborough Industrial Improvement Area Schemes
Mexborough Grammar School Conversion
Mexborough Resource Centre
Conisbrough Castle Interpretative Centre
Mexborough Under-fives Resource Centre
Mexborough Publicity

Schemes approved for start in 1989-90 in Don Valley currently total £245,070. These were:

Mexborough Industrial Improvement Area Schemes
Balby Street School, Conisbrough, Environmental Works
Clayfield Court, Mexborough
Crags Road Flats, Denaby Main
First Interpreters
Highwoods Crescent, Mexborough
Landscaping of Dumpit Sites
Maple Leaf Court, Mexborough
Mexborough Resource Centre
Mexborough Under-fives Resource Centre
Shepherds Close, Denaby Main
Wellgate Flats, Conisbrough

However it is up to Doncaster metropolitan borough council to determine scheme and spending priority within its total UP resources which stood at £1·75 million in 1988-89 and are £1·795 million for 1989-90. Actual spending figures for 1988-89 have not yet been received and figures for 1989-90 will not be available until after the end of the financial year.

There is no allocated budget for publicity, information or public relations. A one-off grant of £3,000 was approved in 1989-90 to publicise UP development grants in Mexborough.

Advisory Committee on Works of Art

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will appoint a new member to the advisory committee on works of art in the House of Commons following the appointment of the hon. Member Member for Chipping Barnet (Mr. Chapman) as an Assistant Whip.

Mr. Ridley: I am pleased to announce that, with Mr. Speaker's agreement, I have appointed my hon. Friend the Member for Milton Keynes (Mr. Benyon) to the advisory committee.

Afforestation Grants

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make in the payment of compensation under management agreements in cases where afforestation grant is refused solely on nature conservation grounds.

Mr. Ridley: Following consultations with my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland, the Secretary of State for Wales, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, I have agreed with the Nature Conservancy Council that it should not longer offer compensation for the refusal of afforestation grant where it is refused solely on nature conservation grounds.

Compensation will still be available for the profit forgone, excluding any grant element, in any case where planting would otherwise proceed.

In considering applicatons for grant for afforestation, the Forestry Commission will continue to pay full regard to nature conservation interest, and in particular to designations of sites of special scientific interest made by the NCC. While there will normally be a presumption against giving grants for afforestation in sites of special scientific interest, it must remain the case that each application will be considered on its merits.

This decision reflects the recent radical changes in support for forestry introduced in the 1988 Budget and the subsequent increases in planting grant under the new woodland grant scheme. These changes have made the grant element a very significant factor in determining the profitability of afforestation proposals and therefore in the compensation paid under management agreements. This is in marked contrast with the position in agriculture, where recent changes in the grant arrangements mean that it will now seldom be the case that these grants will form a significant element in the profit forgone calculation of management agreements offered by the NCC.

The withdrawal of compensation in these cases will be consistent with the developing policies of locational guidance for forestry illustrated by the indicative land use strategies under consideration by some local authorities in Scotland. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland is currently considering the nature and scope of any advice he might offer to local authorities in preparing indicative forestry strategies. I shall be considering with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales the guidance to be offered to English and Welsh authorities on the form that locational guidance should take in appropriate cases. The Forestry Commission and the NCC stand ready to assist local authorities in this task.

I am satisfied that, taking all these factors into account, it is in the public interest that the NCC's policy should be changed. The forestry industry can take confidence in their long term investment considerations from knowing at a very early stage the areas of land with potential for afforestation.

A revision of the financial guidelines will be issued as soon as possible.

United Nations Environment Programme

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he will put forward at next week's governing council meeting of the United Nation's Environment Programme.

Mr. Ridley: My noble Friend the Minister for Housing, Environment and Countryside, will represent the United Kingdom at the governing council and will set out the Government's views on the major global environmental issues on United Nations Environment Programme's agenda, including global warming.

To ensure that these issues are given the priority they deserve we want to strengthen the United Nations Environment Programme both in regard to existing functions and in preparing for the major United Nations conference on the environment in 1992.

In order to help to provide the United Nations Environment Programme with the resources it needs to carry out the task we require of it, the United Kingdom has more than doubled its financial contribution. We will be urging other countries to follow our lead.

We will call for the urgent consideration of a framework convention on the subject of climate change. This would establish general principles or guidelines and allow more specific measures to be developed in the form of protocols as scientific and other information becomes clearer.

We will also reiterate the Government's support for the intergovernmental panel on climate change set up by the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Meteorological Office.

Correspondence

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to the letter of 17 January from Councillor Martin Doughty, chairman of the planning and countryside committee of Derbyshire county council.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 5 May 1989]: My hon. and learned Friend the Minister for Water and Planning replied on 2 May to Councillor Doughty's letter concerning observations on the legal basis of discharge consent requirements for sewage treatment works. These issues have been under active consideration by my Department. That is why we were not able to give him an earlier substantive reply.

EC (Meetings)

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The European Council met on three occasions in 1985 and 1988 and twice in 1986 and 1987. The Environment Council met formally on four occasions in 1985, three in 1986, four in 1987 and four in 1988. There were also occasional informal meetings of Environment Ministers. In addition, there were numerous meetings of officials. Information on the number of such meetings could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Sewerage Incinerator, Yelland

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the sewerage incinerator at Yelland, North Devon will be tested (a) to comply with EC directive 84/360, (b) under the Health and Safety (Emissions into the Atmosphere) Regulations 1983 (SI, 1983, No. 943) and (c) under the Clean Air Acts before it is permitted to operate.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Because the sewage screening incinerator at Yelland has a capacity of less than 1 tonne an hour, it will be controlled for air pollution purposes by the North Devon district council; it is for the council to determine what atmospheric emission testing is required.

Public Airport Companies

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to representations about the application of the Local Government and Housing Bill to public airport companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 9 May 1989]: The Department has made it clear that the provisions of part V of the Local Government and Housing Bill—local authority interests in companies—do not need, in general, to be applied to public airport companies since the Airports Act 1986 covers most of the points at issue. There may, however, be some aspects where, after consultation with local airport companies, it will seem sensible to extend the provisions to cover them.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

EC Consumer Ministers

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what matters he proposes to discuss at the forthcoming meeting of the European Economic Community Consumer Ministers.

Mr. Forth: The Spanish presidency have indicated that they provisionally plan to include the following topics on the agenda for the Council of Consumer Ministers planned for 1 June.

Proposal for a Council directive amending Directive 87/102/EEC for the approximation of laws, regulations, and administrative provisions of Member States concerning Consumer Credit.

Draft resolution on future priorities for consumer protection.

Commission presentation of a further draft of the general product safety directive.

Consideration of the Commission's report on the European home and leisure accident surveillance system.

Consideration of a report by the Commission on consumer education in primary and secondary schools.

Exports

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the most recent United Kingdom share of world exports of manufactured goods; and what was the level in 1979, 1969 and 1959.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the most recent United Kingdom share of world exports of manufactured goods; and what was the level in 1979, 1969 and 1959.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom Share of MMCs[1]	Exports of Manufactures[2] Per cent.
1988	[3]8·2
1979	9·1
1969	11·2
1959	17·9

Departmental Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the report on the review of Department of Trade and Industry statistics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Last July, an efficiency scrutiny was set up in the Department of Trade and Industry to examine the arrangements for the collection of economic statistics by DTI, and the methods by which statistical inquiries are undertaken. The scrutiny team, Alan Armstrong of Bristol university and David Rees of the DTI, was asked specifically to consider whether these arrangements struck a satisfactory balance between minimising the burdens placed on business in providing the information required, and meeting the needs for which the data are to be used by Government and other customers, and if not, to make recommendations accordingly. The report of this scrutiny is being published today, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

The report recommends a number of changes which, by shifting resources in data collection to the areas where they are most needed, will improve the quality of information used in macro-economic statistics. At the same time, the form-filling burden on business will be substantially reduced. Changes being made include conducting surveys less often, approaching fewer people and making forms simpler to complete. The cost to business will be reduced by about a quarter, resulting in savings of about £1·7 million on Government form filling. Further savings of over £500,000 per annum could be expected if EC requirements for statistics can be reduced, and I will be seeking ways of achieving this.

The report's recommendations will be implemented over the next three years, and this has begun. In the light of machinery of Government changes announced to the House by the Prime Minister on 5 April, responsibility for implementation of the recommendations still outstanding will transfer to the Central Statistical Office when these changes take effect. DTI Ministers, who have the lead responsibility for deregulation policy, will agree with the enlarged Central Statistical Office specific objectives to ensure that the burdens on industry are minimised.

USSR and China

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many British companies have set up joint ventures in (a) the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and (b) China.

Mr. Alan Clark [holding answer 8 May 1989]: (a) Joint ventures, USSR: My Department is aware of 33 joint ventures signed to date between British companies and Soviet organisations. In addition, we are aware of a number of British companies presently involved in negotiations to set up joint ventures in the USSR, so the figure is likely to continue to grow.

(b) Joint ventures, China: My Department is aware, through the British embassy in Peking, of some 60 United Kingdom joint ventures covering a wide range of commercial activities.

WALES

Mental Health

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on problems in the replacement of mental health provision in Clwyd as a result of the run down of North Wales hospital, Denbigh.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has not been informed of problems with alternative provision in Clwyd in the context of the future of the North Wales hospital,

Denbigh. Welsh Office officials will be discussing with Clwyd district health authority and Clwyd county council the nature and range of services required for mentally ill people in developing the county plan to be produced under the mental illness strategy which is about to be published.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the recent changes in the staff of his Department responsible for mental health provision in Wales.

Mr. Peter Walker: There have been two recent changes, one at grade 5 level and one at grade 7 level.

Community Health Councils (Gwynedd)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many letters he has received opposing plans for reducing the number of community health councils in Gwynedd; what further consultation he intends to undertake on this matter; when he proposes to make a final decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Fifty-eight letters have been received by the Department up to 5 May. A consultation document will be issued later in the summer. A decision will be taken once the consultation exercise has been completed and the matter fully considered in the light of the comments received.

DHAs (Capital Projects)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give, for each DHA, details of proposed capital development costing more than £1 million which have been cancelled for each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: I regret that comprehensive information is not available centrally on the adjustments made by health authorities to their capital programmes over this period.

Ecclesiastical Exemption

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has any proposals for an order under section 58AA of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, which provides for the restriction of the ecclesiastical exemption.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Welsh Office has today issued a consultation paper to interested parties setting out our proposals. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office for Information, together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 2 May 1989]: For the years 1985-86 and 1986-87, the Welsh Office mounted no major publicity campaigns. Major campaigns undertaken/planned by the Welsh Office in the following years were:

1987-88

(a) European Year of Environment
Objective To promote the aims of the European Year of Environment to farmers and rural communities by an exhibition at major agricultural shows throughout Wales.
Audience Farmers and people working and living in rural communities. (Cost £111k)

1988-89

(b) Enterprise Wales Roadshow
Objective To promote the various schemes offered under the Enterprise Initiative, especially those unique to Wales, through paid advertising, and a travelling exhibition at industrial estates (42) throughout Wales.
Audience All types of business looking for assistance to develop. (Cost £70k)
Measure of Effectiveness Unit cost of "serious" inquiry (ie one that was followed up by Welsh Office Industry Department) was measured. This was approximately £100 per inquiry.

(c) Valleys Initiative
Objective To launch the Valleys Initiative through a Print and Press launch.
Audience Press, local authorities and businesses within Valleys. (Cost £40k)

1989-90

(d) Festival of Food and Farming
Objective To promote Welsh food and crafts in England and Wales through an exhibition at Hyde Park, followed by displays at major agricultural events in Wales.
Audience Retail and wholesale buyers, general public. Number of trade inquiries being measured. (Cost £200k)

(e) Community Charge
Objective To make people aware of the legal requirements and rebates of the community charge through bilingual paid advertising and leaflets, via postal drop to all households in Wales
Audience All households in Wales. (Cost £400k)
Measure of effectiveness Estimated cost of informing each household 33p.

(f) The Welsh Office also took part in the following major campaigns initiated by other Whitehall Departments:

	1988-89 £k	1989-90 £k
Drugs/AIDS	60	180
Education	100	150-200
Transport and Highways	30	35
Housing	—	92

No research by COI has been commissioned by the Welsh Office for any of these campaigns.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animals (Research)

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what funding has been allocated for 1989 for projects for refinement of technology and replacement of animals in research in the United Kingdom; and how much of the 1989 budget will be spent on projects initiated in 1988 and continuing into 1989.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: One hundred and twenty thousand pounds; of which nearly £48,000 is committed to projects already being funded. More will be provided if this can be justified to support particular work of high merit and outstanding value.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) unsuccessful and

(b) successful applicants there were in 1988 for funding for projects for refinement of technology and replacement of animals in research; how much of the 1988 grant was spent on advertising; and how much of the 1988 grant was spent on administration of the funds.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As I informed the hon. Member for Birmingham, Erdington (Mr. Corbett) on 6 March at column 383, there were 120 unsuccessful and four successful applicants. One thousand and fifty pounds was spent on assessor's fees; no advertising or other administrative costs fell on the research budget for 1988-89.

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of project licences for animal experiments in 1988; and how many were in each severity banding.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This information will be contained in the report of the Animal Procedures Committee for 1988, due to be published in July.

Postal Votes

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research his Department has done on extending the use of a postal vote to all electors who request it.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None specifically. A summary of our inquiries in this area is set out in a Home Office consultation paper, made available following the reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 2 March at column 274.

Prisons (Car Travel)

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on car travel for members of prison boards of visitors in each year from 1985 to date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information is not available in the form required and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons (Catering)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress the working party on prison catering has made in relation to prisons on the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The working party is to visit the Isle of Wight this month. It will then consider and cost alternatives including central civilianised or contracted out kitchens as proposed by Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons following his visit to Parkhurst last year. Because two of the three prisons house prisoners for whom the very highest conditions of security are necessary the working party is taking account of operational as well as catering considerations.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Nottingham CTC

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has received from the Nottingham city technology college to end the traditional pattern of school hours and three term years.

Mrs. Rumbold: The CTCs are expected to have a longer school year and a longer working week than is normal in maintained schools. It will be for each college to decide how best to fit this pattern to its own circumstances. We are aware that the Djanogly CTC in Nottingham is considering a move from a three-term to a five-term year, and a working day beginning rather earlier than is common.

Assisted Places

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list for the three counties of Yorkshire the number of preparatory schools to be included in the assisted places scheme in 1989-90 and the amount of fee remission grant to be allocated to them.

Mrs. Rumbold: Preparatory schools are not eligible for admission to the assisted places scheme in their own right. However, in certain cases where a clear link with a participating independent secondary school is demonstrated, it may offer assisted places between the ages of 11 and 13 under the terms of the main school's participation agreement. St. Olave's preparatory school, York offers places which are subsequently tenable at St. Peters school, York under such an arrangement. It is not possible to identify separately the amount of fee remission paid annually to pupils at St. Olave's.

Teachers (Devon)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science why he has not yet authorised Devon county council to pay the teachers employed by the council the 6 per cent. increase in their salaries from 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The draft school teachers' pay and conditions document 1989 was issued for consultation on 27 April. Many teachers are likely to receive their salary increases by the end of May.

Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much has been spent by his Department on advertisements on commercial television in each of the last five years, listed by each television company.

Mr. Rumbold: The Department has not advertised on commercial television during the last five years.

Geography

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to set up a working group to recommend attainment targets and programmes of study for geography within the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to the reply, 5 May 1989, c. 256]: I am pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Roger Davies, chairman of Thomson Travel Group to complete the membership of the national curriculum geography working group,.

EMPLOYMENT

Jobcentre and Benefit Offices

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will make a statement on progress of the programme to integrate jobcentres and unemployment benefit offices;

(2) how many prime-site jobcentres it is intended to vacate under the jobcentre/unemployment benefit offices integration scheme.

Mr. Lee: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 21 April, Official Report, column 349. No decisions have been taken about the future of the employment service local office network.

European Tourism Year 1990

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the financial contribution of his Department towards his implementation of the European Tourism Year 1990.

Mr. Lee: The Department is not directly funding the implementation of European Tourism Year 1990. The United Kingdom initiative is being led by the British Tourist Authority and it is not yet clear what its total spending on activities connected with the year will be.

YTS

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will show for England and Wales (a) how many YTS trainees are on schemes run by local authorities in each region, (b) what is the total number of YTS trainees in each local authority region and (c) how many trainees are on transitional funded YTS run by local authorities for each region before 1 April.

Mr. Cope: The numbers of YTS trainees in training on schemes run by local authorities and in total are shown in the table.

Trainees who are in schemes that attract transitional funding are not separately identified and, therefore, the information requested could be made available only at disproportionate cost.

Number of young people in training in England and Wales at 31 March 1989

Region	Local authority including local education	Total number of trainees in each region
Northern	7,147	30,298
North West	11,415	60,445
Yorkshire and Humberside	11,182	45,029
West Midlands	10,480	43,493
East Midlands and Eastern	9,861	46,446
South West	9,254	30,426
South East	7,876	39,988
London	3,565	21,131
Wales	6,096	23,666
Total England and Wales	76,876	340,922

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will show for England and Wales for each region (a) how many YTS schemes are run (1) by voluntary and community organisation and (2) by the local authorities, (b) what is the total number of YTS schemes run in each local authority region, (c) how many YTS schemes are run by voluntary and community organisations which received a transitional funding grant before 1 April, (d) how many YTS schemes are run by local authorities which received a transitional funding grant before 1 April and, (e) how many YTS schemes were paid a transitional funded grant in respect of training before 1 April.

Mr. Cope: The information that identifies types of schemes in each region of England and Wales is shown in the table. Schemes that attract a transitional funding grant are not separately identified and, therefore, the information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Number of YTS schemes in England and Wales by type at 31 March 1989

Region	Voluntary and community organisation	Local Authority	Other	Total
Northern	62	75	505	642
North West	99	159	1,175	1,443
Yorkshire and Humberside	60	92	784	936
West Midlands	90	110	924	1,124
East Midlands and Eastern	68	140	923	1,131
South West	36	79	566	681
South East	55	128	997	1,180
London	68	70	676	814
Wales	51	85	424	560
Total England and Wales	589	938	6,974	8,501

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the numbers of YTS trainees, during the last 12 months, who obtained employment within six months of completing their training in (a) the Doncaster area and (b) the Mexborough area of South Yorkshire; and what percentage this represents of those who completed their training.

Mr. Cope: This information is not available in exactly the form requested. The latest results from the YTS follow-up survey shows that 396 trainees in the Doncaster area, including Mexborough who completed their training in the period December 1987 to November 1988 were in employment three months later. This represents 79 per cent. of all trainees in the area who completed their training.

Training

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he plans to visit Nottingham, North to discuss employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to visit Nottingham, North.

Ferranti (Job Losses)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he will reply to the letter sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe on 6 April concerning the impending job losses at Ferranti's Wythenshawe factory.

Mr. Fowler: A reply was sent to the right hon. Gentleman on 8 May 1989.

ENERGY

Plutonium

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the statement made by the hon. Member for Worcestershire, South (Mr. Spicer) Official Report, 13 April, column 1135, if he will set out in detail each of the stages of the nuclear cycle to which he makes reference wherein reports of plutonium stocks and measures are made; to whom these reports are made available; how regularly they are forwarded; and if any irregularities have been discovered in the reports.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Regular reports are submitted to Euratom. These reports are confidential.

Drinking Water (Thames House)

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, if he will set out in the Official Report a copy of the 1988 analysis of the drinking water supply in his Department's head office, Thames house, showing the amount by which this water supply failed to meet the European Economic Community drinking water quality criteria.

Mr. Parkinson: I am advised by the Property Services Agency that the results of analyses of drinking water supplied to my Department's headquarters building, Thames house south, in 1988, showing the comparisons with the European Community maximum admissible levels are:

	European Community Maximum admissable concentration	Thames House South
		Recorded Maximum	Recorded minimum
Sulphate	250mg/litre	482mg/litre	405mg/litre
Fluoride	[2]500ug/litre	2,120ug/litre	1,400ug/litre
Potassium	12mg/litre	13·6mg/litre	12·6mg/litre
Sodium	175mg/litre	204mg/litre	190mg/litre
Magnesium	50mg/litre	51·3mg/litre	46mg/litre
Iron	50ug/litre	3,120ug/litre	less than 5ug/litre
Manganese	50ug/litre	84ug/litre	less than 20ug/litre
Nickel	50ug/litre	94ug/litre	59ug/litre
Conductivity	1,500us/cm	1,729us/cm	1,660us/cm
Turbidity	4 NTU	21 NTU	0·2 NTU

Since the introduction of the point of use filters the levels of iron and colour have been consistently below 5ug/litre and 4NTUs respectively. The other elements have remained between the recorded maximum and minimum. I am also advised by PSA that the presence of these elements, either singly or in combination, is not considered to be a health hazard. As I explained in my earlier answer the water for my Department's headquarters building is supplied from a borehole and from the public mains supply.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Siemens Printers

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Siemens ND3 printers are used by his Department, either in-house or through a private contract; and what is the location of each.

Mr. Ian Stewart: None.

Parades

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many parades were notified to the Royal Ulster Constabulary under the Public Order (Northern Ireland) Order in (a) 1986, (b) 1987 and (c) 1988.

Mr. Ian Stewart: This is a matter for the Chief Constable. However, I understand that the information is not available in the form requested. Statistics are compiled on the basis of parades notified to the RUC which actually took place. The Chief Constable's annual reports indicate that 1,950 parades were held in 1986, 2,112 in 1987 and 2,055 in 1988, but these figures do not include parades by youth organisations, churches and other similar bodies.

Mental Health (Grants)

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grants have been made by each of the area boards or Government Departments to branches of the Northern Ireland Association for Mental Health in each of the past three years.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 May 1989]: The information requested is as follows:

	1986-87 £	1987-88 £	1988-89 £
Department of Health and Social Services	165,290	131,738	127,100
Eastern Health and Social Services Board	54,459	109,843	168,348
Northern Health and Social Services Board	771	495	69,740
Southern Health and Social Services Board	962	7,222	44,876
Western Health and Social Services Board	3,600	22,000	20,450
Department of Economic Development[1]	5,501	7,764	13,112
Total	230,583	279,062	443,626

[1] Payments made whether directly or indirectly under the Action for Community Employment (ACE) Scheme.

Children (Financial Support)

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children in Northern Ireland depended on (a) SB/IS and (b) FIS/FC in each year since 1978-79, (i) in total and (ii) as a percentage of all children in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 4 May 1989]: The available information is as follows:

Dependants under 19 years of people on:

Year	Supplementary benefit/IS Numbers[1]	Per cent.[2]	FIS/FC Numbers[1]	Per cent.[2]
1978	70,545	14·57	30,402	6·28
1979	64,790	13·28	27,493	5·63
1980	80,308	16·42	28,857	5·90
1981	93,595	19·55	36,378	7·60
1982	109,863	23·17	38,734	8·17
1983	117,083	24·88	39,557	8·41
1984	116,256	24·86	40,813	8·73
1985	—[3]	—	42,613	9·16
1986	135,254	29·20	42,233	9·12
1987	134,052	29·14	40,982	8·91
1988	—[4]	—	[5]37,500	8·19

[1] Supplementary benefit/IS 5 per cent. sample and FIS 30 per cent. sample.
[2] Represents the percentage of all children entitled to child benefit.
[3] There was no survey in 1985.
[4] Figures not yet available.
[5] Estimated figure—incomplete date.

General Practitioners

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement indicating the nature of any cash limits on the total expenditure on general practitioner trainers' allowances and trainees' remuneration, and the respective votes from which such funding is derived.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 4 May 1989]: The funding of GP trainers' allowances and trainees' remuneration is contained in subhead B1 of the Department's health and personal social services vote 1, which in turn forms part of the cash limit on Northern Ireland's departmental services (NID 1). However, the Secretary of State has flexibility to reallocate resources within the cash limit, for example, to cover unavoidable pressures in this sector.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what weight is given to what factors in determining the number of general practitioner trainees who are to be remunerated by the Department of Health and Social Security in Northern Ireland in a given year.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 4 May 1989]: The number of general practitioner trainees selected in Northern Ireland in a given year is determined by the estimated future demands of the Province for general practitioners.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate the number of prospective general practitioner trainees who were recommended by the relevant selection body in the current year and the number which were approved by the Department; what factors determined the decision by the Department; and how selection of the numbers approved by the Department proceeds.

Mr Needham [holding answer 4 May 1989]: Ninety-seven prospective trainees were interviewed by the selection panel this year and placed in order of merit. The Department determined that 50 doctors should be trained for general practice this year, but in the event 52 were accepted because a number were considered of equal merit by the selection panel. The number approved by the Department was determined by the estimated future demands of the Province for general practitioners. The procedures for selection of trainees are contained in circular HSS (TM) 3/80 supplement No. 1, copies of which have been placed in the Library.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Expenditure Survey

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the latest take-up figures based on the family expenditure survey.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We expect to publish take-up estimates for 1985 this summer.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received regarding the changes in method of payment for housing benefit for those in board and lodging accommodation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 10 April we have received a small number of letters from organisations and individuals about the change in providing help with board and lodging charges which took place on that day. The change, which abolishes special rates of income support for boarders and allows people in board and lodging accommodation to receive housing benefit for their accommodation costs, was proposed in a consultation document issued in December 1986. Over 170 responses to that document were received. These expressed widespread acceptance of the principle that there should be parity both in the treatment of people in similar types of accommodation, whether or not board was provided, and between people in identical accommodation, whether or not they were working.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether his Department is monitoring the implementation of the new method of housing benefit payment for those in board and lodging accommodation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government are committed to monitoring the effects of the social security reforms on all groups. This monitoring is a continuous process which draws on a wide range of information sources, including local authorities, who administer housing benefit.

Overpayment

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the most recent figures broken down by (i) year and (ii) section on (a) the number of overpayments recovered under section 53 of the Social Security Act 1986, section 119 of the Social Security Act 1975 and section 20 of the Supplementary Benefit Act 1976, (b) the number of standard letters sent indicating that recovery may be pursued through civil proceedings, (c) the number of cases actually pursued for recovery of overpayments through civil proceedings and (d) the number of cases pursued under (c) which are successful.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has regarding the average time over the last three years between the lodging and hearing of an appeal to the social security appeals tribunal in (a) Lerwick, (b) Shetland and (c) Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: National administrative statistics for social security appeal tribunals are not disaggregated for areas smaller than a social security region.

The table gives the information for Scotland from 1986 to the quarter ending September 1988 (the latest figures available).

HOUSE OF COMMONS

European Community Business

88. Mr. Gill: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proposals he has concerning the consideration of European Community business by Parliament.

Mr. Wakeham: I am discussing these matters with the Chairman of the Select Committee on European Legislation.

Fire Exercises

Mr. Allen: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what was the response of hon. Members to the fire exercises listed in his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 408; and if he is satisfied with their level of participation.

Mr. Beith: The records of fire exercises do not distinguish hon. Members from other participants. It is therefore not possible for me to comment on the level of Members' participation.

Late-night Staff

Mr. Allen: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the approximate or average cost of 128 staff on duty after 10 pm.

Mr. Beith: Non-industrial staff with a commitment to remain on duty as a direct consequence of sittings of the House receive either an annual allowance which in most cases is calculated from 6 pm according to an agreed formula; or night duty pay which varies according to the lateness of the hour. Industrial staff, in general, are paid at overtime rates for the actual number of hours worked. Details of these allowances are set out in the annual report of the House of Commons Commission.

The varying times of adjournment of the House and difficulty in extracting the appropriate proportion of some of the costs involved make the provision of any meaningful figure possible only at disproportionate cost.

Ten-minute Bills

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North of 24 April, Official Report, column 408, when he expects to be able to state when he will bring forward proposals relating to ten-minute Bills.

Mr. Wakeham: I have nothing to add to the reply given to the hon. Member on 24 April at column 408.

HEALTH

Hospital Beds

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each district health authority in England in 1987 (a) the total number of beds, and the number of beds per 100,000 population, in institutions registered under the Nursing Homes Act 1984, (b) the total number of beds for care of those over 65 years requiring long-stay nursing care in institutions registered under the Nursing Homes Act 1984 and (c) the number of beds for the care of the elderly per 100,000 population aged over 65 years in institutions registered under the Nursing Homes Act 1984.

Mr. Mellor: Residential care homes, registered under part I of the Registered Homes Act 1984, are registered by local authority social services departments. Information on these is therefore available by local authority, not by district health authority.

Tables placed in the Library show provisional information as at 31 March 1987, by local authority, on the total number of places, the number of places in homes for elderly people, and the respective rates per 100,000 population. The number of places in homes registered under part I of the Act is published annually in "Residential Accommodation for Elderly and Younger Physically Handicapped People: All Residents in Local Authority, Voluntary and Private Homes year ending 31 March England" and "Homes and Hostels for Mentally Ill and Mentally Handicapped People at 31 March England"; copies of which are available in the Library.

Hospitals and nursing homes, registered under part II of the Registered Homes Act 1984, are registered by district health authorities. My hon. Friend's reply to the hon. Gentleman on 4 May at columns 223-30 show as at 31 March 1988, by district health authority, the total number of beds, the number nominally assigned to elderly people, and the respective rates per 100,000 population. The information available on beds assigned for use by elderly people does not distinguish between long and short-term care.

Whole Body Scanners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which National Health Service hospitals in the Trent regional health authority at present have whole body scanner facilities; when the equipment was installed in each case; which hospitals it is planned to provide with such facilities as new or to replace obsolete facilities in the next 12 months; and which hospitals have paid for equipment in whole or part from voluntary and charitable sources.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table.

Type of whole scanner in use	Location in Trent	Installation date	Main source of funding
CT	Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Royal Hospital	1984	Public appeal
CT	Derby Royal Infirmary	1985	Public appeal
CT	Doncaster Royal Infirmary	1986	Health authority allocation
CT	King's Mill Hospital	1987	Public appeal
CT	Leicester Royal Infirmary	1982	Public appeal
CT	Lincoln County Hospital	1985	Public appeal
CT	Nottingham City	1988	Public subscription
CT	Nottingham University Hospital	1984	Health authority allocation
CT	Sheffield Royal Hallamshire	1985	Health authority allocation
CT	Sheffield Royal Hallamshire	1985	Public appeal
Magnetic resonance	Queen's Medical Centre Nottingham	1985	Department of Health

In the next 12 months, new whole body CT scanners are planned at the Pilgrim hospital, south Lincolnshire and the children's hospital, Sheffield and two replacements at Leicester royal infirmary. Only the south Lincolnshire scanner is being funded by public appeal.

Halton DHA

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost of domestic services in Halton district health authority; and what is the national average.

Mr. Mellor: For 1987-88 the annual accounts of the Halton health authority recorded current expenditure of £355,824 on domestic cleaning services representing 1·9 per cent. of the authority's total current expenditure. Average current expenditure on these services by all district health authorities in England was £1,798,723, representing 3·2 per cent. of their current expenditure.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to subsume Halton district health authority in other districts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We have no such plans.

NHS Reform

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the child immunisation target of 90 per cent. and the cervical cytology screening target of 80 per cent. are still figures open for negotiation as part of the general practitioners' contract.

Mr. Mellor: We have no intention of changing our policy that coverage levels should be raised to 90 per cent. for childhood immunisation and 80 per cent. for cervical cancer screening. For childhood immunisation, this is the level recommended by the WHO, which this Government have adopted.

We have agreed with the general medical services committee's negotiators that we will make target payments to GPs who achieve those levels. We will also make target payments at one third of the value of the higher payments to GPs who achieve lower target coverage levels; the lower levels will be 70 per cent. coverage for childhood immunisation and 50 per cent. coverage for cervical cancer screening.

Midwives (Regrading)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is yet in a position to implement the recommendations in the recent Select Committee on Social Services report, "Resourcing the National Health Service: Midwives Regrading 1988-89"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the Select Committee on Social Services' recommendations on the regrading of midwives.

Mr. Mellor: The Government's response to the Committee's report will be laid before the House in the usual way as soon as possible.

Smoking

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 13 March, Official Report, column 64, if he plans to increase the frequency of such meetings; whether he will inform the representatives of the medical professions of the outcome of meetings with the tobacco industry; and whether he will invite the representatives of the medical professions to attend as observers at future meetings with the tobacco industry.

Mr. Mellor: Meetings between Department of Health Ministers or officials and our expert advisory committees or other bodies with an interest in the health aspects of smoking are already frequent, and we do not consider an increase in frequency necessary. If pressing matters arise on which advice is needed, additional meetings are arranged. Meetings with representatives of the tobacco industry are confidential. This is the most effective way of carrying out negotiations or discussions on issues where there are strong commercial or trade interests involved. As a result, no reports can be issued to the medical profession, nor can representatives of the medical profession be invited to attend such meetings as observers. The Government have not, in any case, received any requests from members of the medical profession to be informed of the content of such meetings.

Halton Hospital

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the Mersey regional health authority members' panel set up to consider the viability of the proposed phase III development of Halton district general hospital took any verbal representations from members of Halton district health authority before reaching their conclusions;

(2) whether Mersey regional health authority members' panel set up to consider the viability of the proposed phase III development of Halton district general hospital contained a representative of Halton district health authority;

(3) if he will state the names, occupations and addresses of the Mersey regional health authority members panels of (a) 1987 and (b) 1989 set up to examine the future of Halton district general hospital.

Mr. Mellor: We do not hold this information centrally. My hon. Friend may therefore wish to contact the chairman of the Mersey regional health authority.

Non-metropolitan Districts (Electorates)

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the 30 English non-metropolitan districts which have shown the greatest percentage growth in their electorate since 1977; and what has been the percentage growth and actual figures in each case.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

District Health Authorities (Chairmen)

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will be appointing new chairmen to district health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The term of office of 128 chairmen of district health authorities ends on 31 March 1990 and we are currently seeking nominations for new chairmen. If hon. Members wish to recommend any individuals as chairmen, I invite them to write to me over the next month or so. Reappointments and changes will be announced in due course.

Constituencies (Electorates)

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the 25 largest parliamentary constituencies by electorate, with their electorates; and what is the average constituency electorate on the current register.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is as follows:

1989

Trent RHA (Pay Gradings)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will detail the pay gradings of each district health authority general manager in the Trent regional health authority.

Mr. Mellor: The gradings of district general manager posts in the Trent region, and the salary grade rates from 1 September 1988, are set out in the table. In addition, district general managers are eligible for a discretionary addition of up to 10 per cent. of the grade rate (to reflect differences in job weight) and performance-related pay. Details of the performance-related pay awarded to individual general managers are confidential between them and their employer.

Districts	Grade	Grade rate at 1 September 1988 (£)
Southern Derbyshire Leicestershire Nottingham Sheffield	1	37,110
Barnsley North Derbyshire Doncaster North Lincolnshire South Lincolnshire Central Nottinghamshire Rotherham	2	35,450
Bassetlaw	3	33,790

Nursing (Recruits)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will state the reasons for his decision to permit, or require, the chief nursing officer of the Department to send a standard letter to potential recruits to the nursing service asking them to enclose a fee of £6 for an application package; and if he will review this decision.

Mr. Mellor: Applications for pre-registration nurse training are handled not by the Department but by the Nurses Central Clearing House (NCCH). The NCCH is managed by the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting on behalf of health authorities. It is for the board to determine what, if any, administrative charge should be made to potential applicants.

GPs (Overprescribing)

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions of general practitioners for overprescribing have taken place in England since the National Health Service Committee's Tribunal Regulations (S.I. 1974 No. 455) came into effect.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 8 May 1989]: In the period 1974-88 inclusive the Department's regional medical service made a total of 12,068 visits to discuss with practices their prescribing costs and patterns. These visits are made largely to practices whose total costs exceeded their FPC average by a significant amount. Some practices were visited more than once. None of these visits resulted in a reference for formal investigation of excessive prescribing under the terms of the National Health Service Committee and Tribunal Regulations. However, visits to such high prescribing-cost practices are very cost-effective. We estimate that on average each visit saves around £12,000 per practice in the first full year.

AIDS

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list each of the advertising agents used for any aspects of the Government AIDS campaign, with the payments made in each case.

Mr. Mellor: The advertising agents used for the Government's AIDS campaign and the payments made exclusive of VAT were as follows:

Year	Agency	Payment (£ million)
1985-86	TBWA	0·35
1986-87	TBWA	2·79
1987-88	TBWA	[1]6·43
1988-89[2]	TBWA	0·76
	BMP Davidson Pierce	2·30
Total	TBWA	10·33
Total	BMP Davidson Pierce	2·30

[2] Excludes spending on anti-injecting advertisements in the Drug Misuse campaign run by Yellowhammer.

Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much has been spent by his Department on advertisements on commercial television in each of the last five years, listed by each television company.

Mr. Mellor: Information on television advertisements in the form requested is commercially confidential.

Stump Socks

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average cost per hundred stump socks to the National Health Service in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 26 April 1989]: The average cost per hundred stump socks by type of yarn and for all yarns is as follows:

Type	1984-85 £	1985-86 £	1986-87 £	1987-88 £	1988-89 £
Woollen	203	224	238	246	261
Cotton	112	121	132	144	150
Nylon	54	58	63	69	74
All types[1]	123	134	144	153	162

Note: Since 1 July 1987, the Disablement Services Authority has been responsible for the supply of stump socks. Any further information should be sought from the Authority.
[1] Cost weighted according to the average mix of type of yarns per 100 stump socks.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each year since 1970, and for each health region, the total number of hospital admissions on a day-case basis.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 26 April 1989]: The available information is given in the table.

[1] Day case figures were not collected before 1972.
[2] Some patients previously classified as day cases may since April 1987 be newly classified as ward attenders.
[3] Figures for these regions are not strictly comparable over the whole period, due to NHS restructuring in 1982.

"Working For Patients"

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on how co-ordination of local authority community care services and health services are to be maintained once local authorities are no longer represented on health authorities as described in paragraph 8.6 of "Working For Patients" (Cm. 555).

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Local authorities and health authorities are statutorily obliged to collaborate in the development of services, and mechanisms exist for encouraging liaison between them. Ways in which these mechanisms can be made to work more effectively are being examined as part of our consideration of Sir Roy Griffiths' report on community care, and we shall take account of "Working For Patients" in those deliberations.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether, in the light of paragraph 3.7 of "Working For Patients" Cm. 555, people with multiple pathology or conditions which are difficult to treat, will be expected to transfer from centre to centre if a health authority has contracts for different services with different hospitals.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Differences in the services available may mean that, as now, some patients need to attend more than one hospital for different forms of treatment. However, district health authorities will be expected to arrange contracts so that health care services are provided flexibly and in a way that is responsive to patients' needs and wishes.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much prescription charges have risen in cash and real terms between April 1979 and April 1989.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 9 May 1989]: The information requested is set out in the table.

Nursing Students

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to announce the level of bursary for a nursing student enrolling on a course under the project 2,000 nursing education reforms.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 9 May 1989]: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to do so shortly.

Food Contamination

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will reply to the questions asked by the hon. Member for Caerphilly on 18 January concerning the possible contamination of farmed food.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I replied to the hon. Member on Monday 20 February.

THE ARTS

Office Art Collection

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts whether he will publish a table showing the (a) paintings, (b) prints, (c) sculptures and (d) other artefacts in his Office's art collection.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Yorkshire (Environmentally Sensitive Areas)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by name for the three counties of Yorkshire the total land area per site designated as an environmentally sensitive area.

Mr. Ryder: No ESA is wholly within the three counties of Yorkshire. Some 8,200 hectares (52 per cent.) of the Pennine Dales ESA lies in North Yorkshire, while 6,390 hectares (13 per cent.) of the North Peak ESA lie in South Yorkshire and 4,200 hectares (8 per cent.) lie in West Yorkshire.

Salmonella

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that following the establishment of the single market in 1992 thorough checks will be made at United Kingdom ports, airports and rail links to ensure that any consignment of eggs which is contaminated with salmonella is detected and dealt with.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Because the arrangements that will control the movement of eggs within the European Community after 1992 have yet to be decided upon, it would be unhelpful to spell out our plans for that period. However, I assure my hon. Friend that it is our intention to secure equivalence between the standards and inspections in member states to ensure that the interests of our egg producers and consumers are safeguarded.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is taken by his Department when consignments of imported eggs are found to be infected with salmonella.

Mr. Donald Thompson: If a case of salmonella contamination is found in imported eggs, my Department will inform the EC Commission and the member state where the eggs were packed. Where appropriate I will also take the matter up with my opposite number in the member state concerned.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in the latest 12 months for which figures are available consignments of imported eggs have been (a) checked for salmonella infection and (b) found to be infected with salmonella.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Systematic monitoring of imported eggs for salmonella commenced only last month.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement outlining the checks which are made to ensure that salmonella-infected eggs and poultry are not imported into the United Kingdom from other European countries and from other non-European countries.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The systematic monitoring of imported eggs by the port health authorities in conjunction with the public health laboratory service has recently been introduced. Imports are being sampled at a rate which will provide a valid assessment of their bacteriological status. Similar arrangements would not be appropriate for poultrymeat.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

1. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards a peaceful settlement in Namibia.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Agreements have been reached on a framework for the return of SWAPO forces to positions north of the 16th parallel in Angola. South African troops and South West African territorial forces will be once again restricted to base. It is vital that these agreements are put into effect and that all parties abide by their undertakings in the United Nations plan.

86. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolution 435 on Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: We have been active in support of efforts to put the United Nations plan firmly back on track. We welcome the series of agreements reached by the joint commission which have this as their aim.

62. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet the Administrator General of Namibia or his officials to discuss the future of Rossing uranium in the context of an independent Namibia.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to do so. We hope that Rossing uranium will continue making its important contribution to the Namibian economy after independence.

17. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will pay an official visit to Namibia to discuss the transition to independence.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to do so. We are in regular contact with all those involved in the implementation of the United Nations plan for Namibian independence.

Angola

2. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions representatives of Her Majesty's Government have had with the MPLA Government of Angola and UNITA regarding an end to the civil war in Angola.

Mrs. Chalker: We have regular contact with the Angolan Government. We also have occasional contact with UNITA at official level. We have impressed on both sides the need for flexibility if internal peace is to be achieved in Angola.

OECD

16. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Secretary-General of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development; and what matters were discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the OECD Secretary-General on 13 February. They discussed current and future areas of work for the OECD, and preparation for the ministerial council.

EC-EFTA Relations

18. Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the relations between the European Community and the European Free Trade Association.

Mrs. Chalker: Relations between the EC and EFTA are excellent. A joint ministerial meeting on 20 March agreed to discuss possibilities for further strengthening and extending co-operation. There will be a further ministerial meeting in the autumn. Meanwhile the programme of co-operation stimulated by the 1984 Luxembourg declaration continues.

Export Promotion

19. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what resources were committed in 1988-89 via the diplomatic wing to supporting export promotion and inward investment.

Mrs. Chalker: Figures for the financial year 1988-89 are still being collated and should be available in October. We expect them, however, to be approximately 10 per cent. up on the figures for 1987-88 which were as follows:

Total commercial work: £69 million of which approximately 91·7 per cent. (£63·27 million) for export promotion, 3·4 per cent. (£2·5 million) for inward investment and the remaining 4·9 per cent. (£3·38 million) for trade policy.

Nigeria

20. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current state of Anglo-Nigerian relations.

Mrs. Chalker: We enjoy close and cordial relations with Nigeria. President Babangida's state visit to the United Kingdom now taking place is evidence of that.

Eastern Europe

21. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, if he will make a statement about relations with eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our relations with the countries of eastern Europe are as varied as the countries themselves. We naturally have the closest relations with those whose systems and values come closest to our own. In this context we welcome the substantial steps towards freedom and democracy taken recently in Poland and Hungary.

Drug Trade

22. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further practical measures have been agreed with the countries of Latin America to combat the international drug trade.

Mr. Eggar: I discussed measures to combat the international drugs trade with the Foreign Ministers of Colombia and Peru during their visits to the United Kingdom in April, and during my recent visit to Mexico. These measures include continued United Kingdom bilateral and multilateral assistance, and the negotiation of bilateral agreements to trace, freeze and confiscate the assets of drugs traffickers.

37. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further progress is being made in the international fight against the drugs trade.

Mr. Eggar: We have bilateral agreements or arrangements with six countries for tracing, freezing and confiscating traffickers' assets. We are negotiating similar agreements with about 20 countries and have approached some 20 others. Next week, my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary will host a meeting of Pompidou group Ministers to discuss, inter alia, asset confiscation and measures against cocaine.

23. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on moves towards Palestinian self-determination.

43. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the peace in the middle east.

65. Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the peace process in the middle east.

87. Sir Dennis Walters: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards a middle east peace settlement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We continue to believe that a settlement of the Arab/Israel dispute must be based on Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 and that an international conference, at the right time, will be necessary. We look forward to discussing with Mr. Shamir how his proposal for elections in the occupied territories can contribute to this process when he visits the United Kingdom later this month.

85. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to hold urgent talks with the United States Government and the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in preparation for an international conference on the middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: We remain in close touch with the two Governments and with others concerned about the prospects for peace in the middle east. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State discussed these with both Mr. Shevardnadze and Secretary Baker last month.

75. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Israeli Government concerning President Arafat's peace initiative.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are in close touch with the Israeli authorities and look forward to further discussion of all aspects of the peace process with Mr. Shamir later this month.

78. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of the recent killings on the West Bank and Gaza on the peace process in the middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: Violence, from whatever quarter, can make the search for peace in the middle east only more difficult. The Israeli authorities are well aware of our concern at their use of excessive force in the occupied territories.

Argentina

24. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to improve relations between Britain and Argentina.

Mr. Eggar: Since the Falklands conflict in 1982 we have consistently striven to restore more normal relations with Argentina. To this end we have taken a number of important initiatives.

The Argentine response to all of these has been disappointing. Indeed Argentina has recently formalised discrimination against British exporters, and continues to refuse access to our ships and aircraft.

56. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of relations between Britain and Argentina.

Mr. Eggar: Since the Falklands conflict in 1982 we have consistently striven to restore more normal relations with Argentina. To this end we have taken a number of important initiatives.

The Argentine response to all of these has been disappointing. Indeed Argentina has recently formulated discrimination against British exporters, and continues to refuse access to our ships and aircraft.

50. Mr. Haynes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to visit Argentina.

Mr. Eggar: No.

Jordan

25. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when next he expects to meet King Hussein of the Hashmite Kingdom of Jordan for discussions on matters of mutual interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State held very useful discussions with King Hussein last month. They have at present no plans for a further meeting. I myself met the King in Amman in March.

Beirut

26. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made concerning the Christian community in Beirut; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. The recent fighting has affected members of all communities in Lebanon. In common with our partners in the Twelve we fully support the efforts of the Arab League to arrange a ceasefire and to seek a negotiated solution.

Internal Border Control

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his west European counterparts regarding the proposals put forward by the Schengen group of countries to abolish internal border controls.

Mrs. Chalker: In the context of the wider frontiers discussion within the European Community, we have naturally discussed with our partners the practical experience of the Schengen group, and the problems they have encountered.

Nuclear Weapons

28. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy of opposing the West German Government's proposals for early negotiations to reduce nuclear weapons in Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: The stated objective of the Warsaw pact is the elimination of nuclear weapons from Europe. NATO is committed to maintaining an adequate and effective mix of conventional and nuclear forces, including land-based missiles in Europe. Given this conflict of objectives, it is hard to see how there could be a fruitful outcome to any negotiations.

Iraq

29. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what continuing representations are being made to the Iraqi Government about persistent allegations of the torture, ill-treatment, execution and arbitrary arrest of children in Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: As my right hon. Friend the Minister of State said on 28 April, at column 686 the Government have repeatedly made clear to the Iraqi authorites our concern at Iraqi human rights violations and will continue to do so. The Iraqis know that we expect them to abide by their obligations under international agreements, which, in particular, prohibit the use of the death penalty against minors.

Nicaragua

30. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of Nicaragua; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Eggar: President Ortega made a private visit to the United Kingdom from 6 to 8 May in the course of an extensive European tour. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister received him on 8 May. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State and I saw Foreign Minister d'Escoto on the same day.

59. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Nicaragua.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to visit Nicaragua.

Air Fares (Europe)

31. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implication of the recent European Court of Justice judgment outlawing price fixing among European airlines for bringing down air fares in Europe.

Mrs. Chalker: We strongly support action within the European Community which ensures that air travellers are charged fair prices. We expect the Commission to take the recent European Court of Justice judgment into account in preparing new proposals for liberalising air transport.

45. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for European integration of the latest ruling by the European Court of Justice on air transport fares.

Mrs. Chalker: We would expect the Commission to take full account of the recent European Court of Justice ruling on air fares in preparing proposals for the second phase of air transport liberalisation. The United Kingdom fully supports further liberalisation in this field, because of the great practical benefits it will bring, especially to consumers.

Air Transport

49. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects the European Economic Community to make further progress in liberalising air transport.

Mrs. Chalker: The aviation liberalisation package of December 1987 commits the Council of Ministers to adopt further measures by June 1990. The Commission has to bring forward proposals by 1 November this year. The United Kingdom's support for further effective measures has been made clear in a memorandum to the Commission. A copy of this has been placed in the Library of the House.

El Salvador

32. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether the human rights situation in El Salvador is improving.

Mr. Eggar: Regrettably, recent months have seen a deterioration in the human rights situation in El Salvador.

We are particularly concerned that the escalation of violence and violation of human rights by the FMLN guerrillas appears to be provoking a response from extreme elements on the Right.

European Monetary and Economic Union

33. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet Mr. Jacques Delors to discuss the findings of the Delors committee on the European monetary and economic union.

Mrs. Chalker: The report of the Delors committee will be discussed at the informal meeting of Economic and Finance Ministers in Gerona on 19 to 21 May at which I understand M. Delors will be present.

Kurdish People

34. Mr. Archer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make representations to the Iraqi regime over its policy of repression against its Kurdish citizens.

81. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Iraq concerning their treatment of Kurdish people.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have regularly raised with the Iraqi authorities our concerns over their Kurdish population and human rights violations against the community.

Most recently I did so with the Iraqi ambassador on 19 April, and in particular made clear that we would view with grave concern any evidence to support recent reports of mass deportations of Kurds.

We have urged the Iraqi Government to allow diplomats and journalists to visit Iraq to see for themselves.

Brady Plan

35. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from Third world countries on the proposals in the Brady plan to relieve international debt.

Mrs. Chalker: There has been general interest among both debtors and creditors in the United States proposals. We are examining the possible involvement of the international financial institutions in debt and debt service reduction. The discussion will continue further in the boards of the IMF and World Bank.

Protection of the Environment

36. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is undertaking to enhance United Nations co-operation on protection of the environment.

Mr. Eggar: The United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) is the focus for environmental co-operation within the United Nations. We recently more than doubled our voluntary financial contribution to UNEP, and are now the second largest contributor. We urge all other countries to take similar action and will reinforce this at the UNEP governing council on 15 to 26 May.

Hong Kong

38. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of China concerning the future of Hong Kong.

57. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of China concerning the future of Hong Kong.

Mr. Eggar: I refer hon. Members to the answer I gave on 5 April at column 195.

73. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received about the future of British nationals overseas living in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have recently received a number of representations from hon. Members and from members of the public both here and in Hong Kong. We have also taken note of the views expressed during the hearings held in Hong Kong last month by the Foreign Affairs Select Committee.

74. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to visit Hong Kong to discuss the arrangements for implementing the 1977 agreement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has at present no plans to visit Hong Kong.

Lebanon

39. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom policy towards the restoration of peace in the Lebanon.

42. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government policy on the establishment of peace in the Lebanon.

63. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British policy on the restoration of peace in the Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We hope that all parties concerned in the fighting will work towards a peaceful settlement. We and our European partners fully support the efforts of the Arab League to arrange a ceasefire and to help in achieving a negotiated solution.

Central America

40. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the Government of the United States of America to discuss central America.

Mr. Eggar: We have regular discussions with the United States Administration on a wide variety of topics, including central America.

South Africa

41. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent assessment has he made of the effectiveness of his policy of ending apartheid in South Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to his identical question on 3 February 1988 at column 965. Our assessment remains unchanged.

71. Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the South African Foreign Minister.

76. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the South African ambassador; and what matters will be discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no present plans to do so.

West Germany

44. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet representatives of the West German Government; and what matters will be discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to meet Dr. Wolfgang Schauble, the Federal German Minister of the Interior on 18 May when he visits this country to participate in a conference marking the 40th anniversary of the Federal Republic of Germany. A range of subjects of mutual interest will be discussed.

Southern Africa

46. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to visit southern Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no current plans to visit southern Africa.

United States

47. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Government of the United States; and what subjects were discussed.

79. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will report on the outcome of his visit to the United States on 17 April.

Mr. Eggar: When I met President Bush in Washington on 17 April we discussed a number of current issues including East-West relations, SNF, the middle east, Lebanon, southern Africa and Latin America.

Refuseniks

48. Mr. Gillian Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made on the current position of refuseniks in the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

84. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made on the current position of refuseniks in the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have raised the problem of refuseniks with Mr. Shevardnadze on three separate occasions this year, most recently during Mr. Gorbachev's visit. The Soviet authorities have been left in no doubt that the problem of long-term refuseniks will continue to cast a shadow over Anglo-Soviet relations until a satisfactory and lasting solution is reached.

Vietnamese Refugees

51. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the conditions under which Vietnamese refugees are being held in Hong Kong.

Mr. Eggar: We have received a number of representations from members of the public and some voluntary organisations about conditions in the centres for Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

Both we and the Hong Kong Government attach great importance to ensuring that conditions in these centres are as good as they can be in the circumstances.

Conditions in the centres for those categorised as refugees have already been liberalised but the recent flood of new arrivals is putting the facilities available for those awaiting screening under great strain.

Sri Lanka and India

52. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to visit (a) Sri Lanka and (b) India.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no plans at present to visit Sri Lanka. He was in India from 28 March to 1 April.

Turkey

53. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what fresh initiatives he plans to seek to reduce human rights violations in Turkey.

Mrs. Chalker: The Turkish Government are aware that we expect them to respect and abide by the terms and conditions of the human rights conventions to which they are parties. We shall continue to follow developments closely.

Conventional Arms Reductions

54. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations towards conventional arms reductions in Europe.

55. Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress towards conventional arms reductions in Europe.

60. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of negotiations towards conventional arms reductions in Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: NATO/Warsaw pact negotiations on conventional armed forces in Europe (CFE) opened in Vienna on 9 March. The first round was encouraging. The atmosphere was serious and constructive with the Warsaw pact apparently willing to negotiate seriously and to find common ground. Much complex negotiation lies ahead. The second round began on 5 May.

Horn of Africa

58. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for peace in the Horn of Africa.

Mrs. Chalker: While the parties to the conflicts in Ethiopia and Somalia maintain their present positions, there seems little prospect for peace in the Horn of Africa. Our policy is to work for negotiated solutions, internal reconciliation, improved economic management and greater respect for human rights.

Human Rights

61. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the maintaining of progress in establishing human rights in eastern Europe.

70. Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the Monitoring of progress on the establishment of human rights in eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: Performance is varied. Hungary and Poland are continuing to take measures to improve human rights and political freedoms. There has been little or no improvement in Bulgaria or Czechoslovakia or the GDR. Romania is, I am sorry to say, in a class of its own.

East-West Relations

64. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further discussions he proposes to hold with NATO colleagues on East-West relations.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are in close and constant touch with our NATO colleagues over East-West policy. We share a broad measure of agreement in our analysis of the present situation and of the way forward.

Commonwealth Citizens (Admission)

66. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commmonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Indian Government on the admission of citizens from Commonwealth countries to the United Kingdom for holidays or short stays and the need to ensure that appropriate flexibility is allowed to help cases where such citizens wish to visit Britain urgently because of the chronic illness or death of a relative resident in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: None.

Chemical Weapons

67. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards an agreement on a worldwide ban on chemical weapons.

77. Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards an agreement on a worldwide ban on chemical weapons.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friends to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend, the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 9 May.

Cyprus

68. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary-General of the United Nations on the present position in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State last met the United Nations Secretary-General in Tokyo on 25 February. During their discussion they reviewed progress in the intercommunal talks on Cyprus. The talks continue, with our full support.

Single Market

69. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what ways the European Community and the European Free Trade Association are working together towards the development of the single market.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom believes that the EFTA countries should, as far as is practicable and mutually beneficial, have access to the single market. The programme of EC/EFTA co-operation initiated by the Luxembourg declaration of 1984 is continuing. Following a joint ministerial meeting on 20 March, the Commission is exploring with EFTA options for further extending co-operation. A further ministerial meeting is planned for the autumn.

Eastern Europe (Reforms)

72. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to encourage a unified western response to the reforms taking place in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are in constant touch, bilaterally and multilaterally, with our allies over East-West policy. There is a broad agreement on analysis of the situation in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union and on the way forward.

Prime Minister Shamir

80. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will be the principal matters Her Majesty's Government intend to discuss with Prime Minister Shamir of Israel when he visits the United Kingdom in May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We look forward to discussing a wide range of bilateral and regional issues, including all aspects of the peace process, with Mr. Shamir.

EC Summit (Madrid)

82. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what current discussions he is holding with his European Economic Community counterparts on preparations for the forthcoming European Economic Community summit meeting of Heads of Government in Madrid.

Mrs. Chalker: It is for the Spanish presidency to make the preparations for the European Council in June. The agenda will be discussed in advance in the Foreign Affairs Council in the usual way. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State discusses current items of Community business with his colleagues in the Council and at other meetings.

EC Foreign Ministers

83. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he is next due to meet other European Community foreign Ministers: and what matters will be discussed.

Mrs. Chalker: The next meeting of the Foreign Affairs Council is on 22 and 23 May. Matters for discussion include preparation for the EC/Israel Co-operation Council; preparation for the ACP/EC ministerial meeting in June; the EC-US dispute over hormones in meat; the GATT Uruguay round (Tropical Products); a draft mandate for negotiations with the USSR on a trade agreement; and preparation for the OECD ministerial meeting at the end of May. An EC/Israel Co-operation Council will be held in the margins of the Council.

Development Assistance

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what was the total value of the United Kingdom overseas development assistance in 1979-80, and in 1988-89 at constant 1979 prices.

Mr. Chris Patten: The United Kingdom net aid programme in 1979-80 was £798 million. The equivalent figure for 1987-88, at 1979-80 prices, was £700 million. The figure for 1988-89 is not yet available.

Councils of Ministers

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list (a) the number and character of Council of Ministers meetings in each of the past two years, (b) the Ministers who represented the United Kingdom by Department and (c) by Department and grade of the civil servants who attended.

Mrs. Chalker: The information requested at (a) and (b) is provided in the relevant six-monthly White Papers on developments in the European Community, copies of which are deposited in the Library of the House. But details of attendance by civil servants by Department and grade could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Antarctic Treaty

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he plans to hold with the co-signatories to the antarctic treaty about its review option in 1991.

Mr. Eggar: Ther are no plans to hold discussions on this issue.

DEFENCE

Exercises

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list Royal Air Force participation in (a) Red Flag, (b) Green Flag, (c) Copper Flag and (d) Maple Flag exercises during 1988, giving the number and type of Royal Air Force aircraft involved and the dates of the exercises on each occasion.

Mr. Neubert: The Royal Air Force did not participate in Copper Flag exercises during 1988. Otherwise the information requested is as follows:

Date	Aircraft involved
Royal Air Force participation in Red Flag exercises
8 October to 19 November 1988	Nine Tornado Eight Phantom Two Hercules
Royal Air Force participation in Green Flag exercises
15 March to 16 April 1988	Nine Tornado
Royal Air Force participation in Maple Flag exercises
30 April to 11 June 1988	Eight Harrier

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on planned RAF participation in the Maple Flag exercise in Canada in 1989.

Mr. Neubert: Nine Royal Air Force Tornado aircraft are currently participating in Exercise Maple Flag at Canadian forces base, Cold Lake, Alberta.

NATO Tactical Fighter Weapons Training Centre

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects a decision to be made on the location of the proposed NATO tactical fighter weapons training centre.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman), on 22 April 1987 at column 583. The matter is still being studied by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Goose Bay, Canada

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many low-level sorties were carried out by the RAF from Goose bay, Canada in 1988;

(2) what is the planned number of sorties to be conducted by RAF aircraft on training detachment to Goose bay, Canada during 1989.

Mr. Neubert: The total number of low-flying training sorties carried out by Royal Air Force aircraft from Goose bay, Canada in 1988 was 1,423. It is not expected that the amount of activity in 1989 will vary greatly from that carried out in recent years.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many RAF Tornado aircraft are currently deployed at Goose bay, Canada; on what date they arrived there; and what is their planned date of return to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Neubert: None at present.

Low Flying

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the total number of military low-level training sorties flown over the United Kingdom in 1988 was accounted for by (a) fast jets, (b) light jet trainers, (c) heavy propeller-driven aircraft, (d) light propeller-driven aircraft and (c) helicopters.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is as follows:

Category	Proportion of sorties flown Per cent.
Fast jets	59
Light jet trainers	9
Heavy propeller-driven aircraft	2
Light propeller-driven aircraft	1
Helicopters	29

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the total numbers of complaints received about low flying in 1988 from addresses in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland.

Mr. Neubert: No fixed-wing low flying training is carried out in Northern Ireland. However, helicopters do undertake low-flying operations in Northern Ireland and although no central records are available of complaints received, headquarters Northern Ireland received 38 complaints in 1988. The numbers of complaints and inquiries about military low flying received by the Ministry of Defence during 1988 for the remaining areas were:

	Number
England	3,955
Wales	856
Scotland	875

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the percentage change in the number of low-level flights authorised at less than 250 ft between 1979 and 1980.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my predecessor gave him on 2 November 1987 at column 487.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying sorties were flown over the United Kingdom by United States F-111 and EF-111 aircraft in (a) 1987 and (b) 1988.

Mr. Neubert: United States Air Force F-111 aircraft flew 11,147 low-flying sorties during 1987 and 11,303 during 1988. Central records are not kept separately of low-flying sorties by EF-111 aircraft.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of low-flying sorties flown over the United Kingdom between the hours of 11 pm and 7 am in each year since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is not available. Central records of night low-flying do not separately distinguish flying between the hours of 11 pm and 7 am. It is aimed to complete low-flying training before 11 pm wherever possible because it is recognised that aircraft noise can be particularly intrusive at night, and no more such activity is authorised than is necessary.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level sorties were flown over the Federal Republic of Germany by RAF aircraft in 1988.

Mr. Neubert: Royal Air Force Germany carried out some 16,000 fixed-wing low-level sorties over the Federal Republic of Germany in 1988.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the aircrew in front-line RAF Tornado strike/attack squadrons is currently authorised to fly at less than 250 ft minimum separation distance.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing further to add to my predecessor's letter of 15 December 1987 to the hon. Member in response to his question of 2 November 1987 at column 486.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, if he will list the names and dates of all military air exercises held in the United Kingdom since 1974 in which flying at less than 250 ft was permitted over land.

Mr. Neubert: Military air exercise held in the United Kingdom do not involve the use of the United Kingdom low-flying system for flying below a level of 250 ft over land. Exercises involving ultra-low flying, that is below this and down to 100 ft, are normally held in the United States of America and Canada. Some strictly limited work-up training for these exercises does take place in the United Kingdom but within specially designated, sparsely populated areas.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-flying sorties over the United Kingdom in 1988, calculated by the pre-1985 method of logging movements between low flying areas.

Mr. Neubert: The approximate total number of sorties flown, as recalculated from movements by the pre-1985 method, was 127,000.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of RAF Germany low-flying training activity has been carried out in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: Precise figures are not available prior to 1988. It is estimated that some 20 per cent. of RAF Germany fixed-wing low-level sorties made use of the United Kingdom low-flying system in 1988.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-flying sorties over (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in 1988.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my predecessor gave him in response to a similar question on 15 April 1988 at column 249.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the low-level sorties over the United Kingdom in 1988 were flown by (a) British military aircraft, (b) the United States Air Force aircraft and (c) other air forces.

Mr. Neubert: The information requested is as follows:

Operating Authority	Proportion of sorties flown Per cent.
British Military	84
United States Air Force	15
Others	1

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requests have been received from foreign air forces for permission to fly in the United Kingdom low-flying system at less than 250 ft minimum separation distance.

Mr. Neubert: There are no records of foreign military aircraft having been authorised to carry out low-flying training in the United Kingdom at less than 250 ft or of any formal request having been made for such training.

Advertising

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the total budget for advertising on the armed forces, showing separately the cost of advertising of the Territorial Army for 1989-90.

Mr. Neubert: The information is as follows:

Royal Navy/ Royal Marines	4,965,000
Army	9,405,000
Royal Air Force	5,891,000

The figure for the Army includes our current estimate for the cost of advertising for the Territorial Army for 1989-90 which is £2,403,000. This sum excludes local advertising expenditure commissioned by TA Voluntary Reserve associations who make their own allocations from a block grant received from the Ministry of Defence.

Port of London

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there is any military function performed by courtesy calls by naval vessels to the port of London.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: So far as Royal Navy vessels are concerned, such visits are arranged to foster good relations between the Royal Navy and the civil community. Foreign warship visits to the Pool of London are tangible expressions of mutual goodwill between the United Kingdom and the Governments concerned.

Thames (Naval Accidents)

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will outline the plans prepared for the possibility of a naval accident on the Thames, in particular accidents which may affect vessels carrying nuclear weapons;

(2) what special steps he takes to reassure people living in London, particularly by the Thames, in relation to the safety implications of the mooring at Greenwich or HMS Belfast of naval ships carrying nuclear weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It has been the policy of successive British Governments neither to confirm nor to deny the presence of nuclear weapons on HM ships. There are, however, detailed contingency plans for dealing with the extremely remote possibility of an accident involving the release of radioactive material from a weapon while in the custody of the Royal Navy, and these include plans to deal with such an accident on board a warship. The plans involve similar organisational arrangements to those which would apply in the event of an accident involving a naval nuclear propulsion reactor, and are designed to enable the organisations concerned to cope with the rather different technical problems that would be faced in a weapons accident.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by the armed services in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for them by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The armed services' publicity campaigns are primarily concerned with recruitment. They are not a series of separate campaigns but rather a continuing campaign to keep the services in the public eye and to promote them, to both parents and young people, as a potential employer.

The impact of the campaign is continuously monitored. Adjustments are made in reaction to the response from the target audience and to reflect the manpower requirements of the services. There are no plans to change this practice in the foreseeable future but, in response to the increased competition for suitable applicants which all employers are likely to experience with the onset of the demographic trough, the services do expect to increase the level of advertising over that of recent years.

In addition to their recruiting campaign, the armed services are also sponsoring the national employers liaison committee's publicity campaign, the main aim of which is to promote public awareness of the reserve forces especially amongst employers.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The aim of the Ministry of Defence's public information effort is to increase public awareness of defence policies and the role and achievements of the armed forces.

This is achieved by a continuous information programme of press briefings and media visits to establishments and service units, films, exhibitions, and publications. Emphasis is given in this programme from time to time to matters of particular public interest and to specific occasions. These have included the European Year of the Environment in 1988, to which the Ministry of Defence contributed, and the 40th anniversary of NATO in 1989. The latter occasion was marked by an exhibition on British defence policy held in London in April, which is also due to visit several regional events later this summer, a NATO briefing tour of public meetings in six major towns and cities, and the issue of a special postal slogan.

The Central Office of Information was commissioned to undertake a market research survey on the MOD touring defence policy exhibition in 1988 and reported most favourably on its content and on the public response.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 11 May 1989

NATIONAL FINANCE

War Loan

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates to be (a) the number of surviving holders of three per cent. war loan who purchased the stock when it was issued and (b) the total nominal value of the stock held by them.

Mr. Lilley: I regret that the information is not readily available in the form requested.

Crombie Rules

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library the Crombie set of rules on the Civil Service.

Mr. Brooke: There is no Crombie set of rules on the Civil Service. However, I am writing to the hon. Member with details of the compensation terms, known as the Crombie code, which applied widely in the public sector from 1947 for those who became redundant as a result of nationalisation or statutory reorganisations. As the House was told on 3 July 1980 (Official Report, column 1823), the need for the Crombie code has long since ceased to exist.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Open University

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on what research is currently conducted by the open university at its central Milton Keynes campus and its regions, sponsored from the central annual grant to the university.

Mr. Jackson: It is for the open university to decide how much of its recurrent grant should be spent on research. In 1988-89 over £8 million was spent from recurrent grant; this is in addition to funding received from the research councils, DES research grants and other sources. Areas of research cover science and technology, social sciences, arts and humanities and involve both specific research projects and support for academic activity. The open university provides information on its research to the OU visiting committee which advises Ministers on all aspects of the university's work.

Teachers

Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress he has made on his proposals for the reform of the non-standard routes to qualified teacher status; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend is today issuing draft regulations and a draft explanatory circular. Subject to the outcome of consultation on these, he plans to lay regulations before the House with a view to having the new arrangements in place by September.

The revised regulations replace the Education (Teachers) Regulations 1982 and are concerned, among other things, with new arrangements for the award of qualified teacher status (QTS), including the licensed teacher scheme; the specialist qualifications needed for teaching hearing or visually impaired pupils; the probationary service of qualified teachers; and the implementation of the European Community directive on the mutual recognition of professional qualifications, as it applies to teachers.

The draft regulations and circular have benefited from responses to the consultation document on the reform of the routes to QTS which was issued last year.

The majority of those responding to that document supported the principle of the reform. My right hon. Friend is confident that the proposed new arrangements will provide a better framework within which to recruit and train the teachers in our schools in the 1990s.

Copies of the draft regulations and circular have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

ENERGY

Safeguards Agreement

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representation his Department had at the latest large scale reprocessing plant safeguards meeting held recently at Sellafield with representatives from Japan, the United States of America, France, the Federal Republic of Germany and the safeguards directorates of Euratom and the International Atomic Energy Agency; and what papers have so far been presented to the LASCAR meeting by United Kingdom representatives.

Mr. Michael Spicer: One member of the Safeguards Office attended the meeting held between 27 February—3 March at Sellafield to consider large-scale commercial reprocessing plant safeguards (LASCAR). The information exchanged at LASCAR meetings is confidential to the parties involved.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what actions have been taken to improve nuclear safety nationally and internationally by Her Majesty's Government since the Chernobyl accident on 26 April 1986.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The United Kingdom has maintained a high level of safety over 30 years of civil nuclear power production. The Government are committed to continuing this and have made available the resources to ensure it.

On plans for dealing with a possible nuclear accident in the United Kingdom, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister to the hon. Member for Merionnyd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 12 December 1988 at column 391.

Internationally, the United Kingdom has encouraged the exchange of information and ideas on nuclear safety, in particular between operators and between regulators. The International Atomic Energy Agency is the prime forum for such exchange, but there have also been bilateral exchanges; Her Majesty's chief inspector of nuclear installations last month visited Moscow for meetings with his Russian counterpart.

There have been IAEA and EC initiatives on actions to be followed in the event of nuclear accidents. Two IAEA conventions—on the early notification of nuclear accidents and on mutual assistance in the case of a nuclear accident—were concluded in 1986. Similar arrangements for the notification of accidents have been agreed within the EC and the United Kingdom has bilateral agreements with a number of countries. Member states of the EC have agreed other measures to be implemented in the event of an accident, such as those on the contamination of foodstuffs.

As further encouragement for the international exchange of safety awareness and information, the World Association of Nuclear Operators has been formed, and will meet later this month in Moscow under the chairmanship of Lord Marshall of Goring.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what departmental representation including papers for presentation, will be made at the eleventh annual symposium on safeguards and nuclear material management in Luxembourg on 30 May to 1 June 1989.

Mr. Michael Spicer: One member of my Department will be attending the symposium.

Pacific Sandpiper

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West, Official Report, 23 March, column 763, on the cargo carried by the PNTL ship Pacific Sandpiper, why section 2(i) of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 was not applicable; and from which country had the consignment of irradiated fuel elements originated.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Details of individual consignments are confidential. Section 2(i) of the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 was not applicable as the nuclear material in this consignment was neither enriched nor reprocessed in the United Kingdom.

Piper Alpha

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to monitor heavy metal and other toxic substances from Piper Alpha.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Lady to the reply I gave on 8 December 1988 to my hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden), and to the replies given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 11 January 1989, and to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Doran) on 3 May 1989.

The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, in co-operation with the operators, Occidental Petroleum (Caledonia) Ltd, has been monitoring debris and other samples from the vicinity of the site of Piper Alpha for polychlorinated biphenyls and radioactivity. A report on this work will be published shortly.

In addition, conditions attached to the abandonment programme for Piper Alpha approved by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy include requirements for surveys of the toppled remains and surrounding sea-bed to establish the position of debris and to monitor for leakage of oil or gas. They also require samples of sediment, sea-water and fish to be obtained and examined for the presence of PCBs and radioactivity. The conditions provide for repetition of these surveys and sampling at such times as the Secretary of State may subsequently direct. An assessment of the surveys carried out under the abandonment programme will be published in due course.

Occidental have also arranged to have portions of the samples referred to above examined for the presence of heavy metals originating from past drilling discharges. This work is being carried out to check predictions, made on the basis of sampling around other platforms, that the levels of heavy metals present are not hazardous to marine life. These results will also be made available to Her Majesty's Government.

WALES

Public Bodies

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the chairmen and members of all the public bodies to which he appoints in Wales, together with their salaries and expenses.

Mr. Peter Walker: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Pollution (Irish Sea)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received this year about the pollution levels in the Irish sea; and what new steps he is taking to respond to this problem.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Friday 28 April at column 253.

Valleys Initiative

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether in commissioning the Community Projects Foundation to undertake community development projects as part of the valleys initiative the opportunity was given for suitable agencies based in Wales to compete for the contract.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have not awarded a contract to the Community Projects Foundation. Welsh Office support for the foundation's activities in the valleys is being provided under the urban programme following the submission of applications by local authorities in the normal way. It is open to all voluntary bodies to seek urban programme assistance for appropriate schemes and I see no need for any separate bidding process in relation to community development. The hon. Gentleman may wish to note that the foundation was active in Wales prior to the launch of the valleys programme.

Chemical Laboratories, Aberystwyth

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on the basis of how many job losses the changes currently being considered for the regional analytical chemistry laboratories at Aberystwyth are founded; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

There are currently 16 permanent staff in post in the ADAS analytical chemistry laboratory at Trawsgoed, whose closure in 1990-91 was announced on 21 March 1989. The number of post losses consequent on closure of this laboratory will depend on a range of factors, including the future level of demand for ADAS laboratory services elsewhere and the outcome of the examination being given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales to the possibility of alternative uses for this facility.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EC (Right of Settlement)

78. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement setting out the overseas territories of EEC countries whose inhabitants have the right of settlement in the EEC; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: EC nationals have the right to reside in the other member states of the Community in accordance with the Treaties. It is for each Member State to define who are its own nationals for Community purposes. The provisions of the EC treaty relating to the free movement of persons apply to European territories for whose external relations a member state is responsible, such as Gibraltar. Citizens of the following overseas territories are also defined as nationals by the member states concerned:

United Kingdom	—Falkland Islands
France	—St. Pierre et Miquelon, Mayotte and the overseas Departments and Territories
Netherlands	—Aruba
	—Netherlands Antilles
Portugal	—Macau

Vietnamese Refugees

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has regarding recent reports that a boatload of 130 Vietnamese refugees were killed in mid-April by Thai pirates.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Nations High Commission for Refugees, which administers the anti-piracy programme in Thailand, and the Thai authorities, regularly provide the international community with information on the number and nature of piracy attacks. Other than reports in the press, however, we have no details of this particular alleged attack.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government have taken to persuade the Government of Thailand to bring to justice the pirates responsible for the murder in April of 130 Vietnamese refugees.

Mr. Waldegrave: We co-operate closely with the Royal Thai Government through its anti-piracy programme, which is administered by the United Nations High Commission for Refugees and to which the United Kingdom contributes.

Iran

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultation he is having with other Governments on the latest Iranian threat to citizens of western countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my remarks in the House on 10 May at column 850.

Nuclear Materials

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has had any meeting with representatives of 20-20 Vision concerning their programme alleging that nuclear materials in the European Community under safeguards, have been diverted to a black market in Sudan.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The private secretary to my right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary wrote to Ms. Claudia Milne of 20-20 Vision on 3 February 1988, inviting her to contact the appropriate official with a view to arranging a meeting. As far as we are aware, Ms. Milne has never taken up the invitation.

United Nations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to make monthly reports to Parliament, when in session, on developments and United Kingdom votes at the United Nations in New York.

Mr. Waldegrave: A very large number of United Nations bodies meet in New York at various times throughout the year. These include the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council and the General Assembly and its subsidiary bodies. For the Government to submit regular reports on developments and positions adopted by the United Kingdom in all these bodies would take disproportionate time and resources. The United Nations itself publishes full and publicly available accounts of the work of its bodies. On major political issues, it is of course already our policy to keep the House fully informed of all developments, including those at the United Nations.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the annual contribution made by the United Kingdom to the central funds of the United Nations, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our contribution to the United Nations regular budget for the ten financial years beginning 1979-80 has been as follows:

	£ million
1979-80	10·39
1980-81	10·32
1981-82	14·02
1982-83	15·71
1983-84	18·50
1984-85	23·34
1985-86	24·63
1986-87	23·62
1987-88	21·49
1988-89	19·36

The sharp fluctuations in these sterling payments reflect changes in the pound/dollar exchange rate.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what rent has been received over the past 10 years from United Nations agencies based in London.

Mr. Waldegrave: The International Maritime Organisation is the only United Nations agency based in the United Kingdom. Prior to 1982, the IMO paid rent to three separate private landlords. On 29 October 1982, when it moved into its present accommodation, the IMO began to pay rent. The rent paid (in equal quarterly instalments) since then is as follows:

October	£
1982-83	500,000
1983-84	500,000
1984-85	550,000
1985-86	550,000
1986-87	600,000
1987-88	600,000
1988-89	[1]325,000

[1] Two instalments.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which United Nations agencies have their headquarters in the United Kingdom; where they are based; and how long they have been established in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: The only United Nations specialised agency to have its headquarters in the United Kingdom is the International Maritime Organisation, which has been based in London since its establishment in 1959.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what basis United Nations agencies located in London are charged rent; and what information he has on comparable levels of rent charged by France, the United States of America, Austria, Switzerland, Italy and Kenya for United Nations agencies based in those countries.

Mr. Waldegrave: In 1977, we and the International Maritime Organisation agreed that the rent for the organisation's headquarters building in London would be 12 per cent. of the capital cost of the building, but that we would reimburse the organisation a sum equivalent to 80 per cent. of that amount. Following transitional rent arrangements set out in my earlier reply of today's date, this agreement comes into force in 1990. From then the annual rent payable by IMO, net of the 80 per cent. reimbursement by Her Majesty's Government, will be £1,195,751 per annum.

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the likely timetable to set up an amendment conference for the partial nuclear test ban treaty of 1963, following the deposition recently of the requisite number of signatory states calling for such a conference; and if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the prospective conversion of the treaty into a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have had initial discussions with the other depositary Governments to consider preparations for an amendment conference. No timetable has yet been established. We cannot support the proposed amendment: as long as we rely on a nuclear deterrent, we will need to conduct underground nuclear tests to ensure that our weapons remain effective and up-to-date. But we will of course carry out fully our obligations as a depositary Government.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions the United Kingdom has had recently over the current status of the 1963 partial test ban treaty with its depository states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have had initial discussions with both the other depositary Governments in order to begin preparations for convening a conference to consider proposals for an amendment to the treaty. We hope that the depositary Governments will soon meet trilaterally to resolve how this should be taken forward.

Arms Control

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last held a meeting with non-governmental organisations on arms control and disarmament issues; what non-governmental organisations were present; which subjects were covered; and if financial support was offered to the non-governmental organisations to help defray expenses in attending the meeting.

Mr. Waldegrave: I held a meeting with non-governmental organisations interested in arms control and disarmament issues on 24 April. The following topics were covered at the meeting: SNF, nuclear non-proliferation, modernisation, the partial test ban treaty, conventional arms control, chemical weapons, international arms transfers, and East-West relations.

The following organisations took part: the Council for Education in World Citizenship, Church of England Board for Social Responsibility, the European Atlantic Movement, the National Peace Council, the Oxford Research Group, Peace Through NATO, Quaker Peace and Service, Scientists Against Nuclear Arms, the United Nations Association, Verification Technology Information Centre, the Medical Campaign Against Nuclear Weapons, Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, World Disarmament Campaign, International Peace Bureau, European Proliferation Information Centre, British Atlantic Committee, British Council of Churches, Campaign Against the Arms Trade, Centre for International Peace Building Studies, Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, Coalition for Peace Through Security, Committee for International Justice and Peace, Council for Arms Control, Council on Christian approaches to Defence and Disarmament.

No financial support was offered to representatives attending the meeting.

Soviet Union (Weapons)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each category of weapon of which there is deemed a Soviet surplus, giving his definition of how any particular quantity of weapons is so judged; and if he will set out his source of information on Soviet weapon capacity in so far as national security permits

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the NATO booklet: "Conventional Forces in Europe: The Facts" which was published on 25 November last year and which was then placed in the Library of the House.

Iraq (Chemical Protection Suits)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom has supplied Iraq with chemical protection suits.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

TRANSPORT

InterCity Trains (Overcrowding)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about overcrowding on InterCity trains in the western region (a) during 1987, (b) during 1988 and (c) to date during 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Loadings on InterCity trains are a matter for BR management. Although I regularly receive representations on InterCity rail services, the Department does not keep statistics of them.

Addingham Bypass

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he now expects construction of the A65 Addingham bypass to commence; and what is the anticipated construction period.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Construction of the bypass is due to start in late June and should be completed by the end of 1990.

DVLC (Data Sales)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what data on motor vehicles the driver and vehicle licensing centre currently sells to outside bodies; and what it receives as a result of these transactions.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Apart from the information the DVLC is required to provide under regulation 15 of the Road Vehicles (Registration and Licensing) Regulations 1971 either at no charge or at the prescribed fee of £3·50, certain other non-personal statistical information is supplied at charges set in accordance with standard Government accounting guidelines, in these instances normally set to recover costs.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he intends to seek any necessary changes in the law to enable the driver and vehicle licensing centre to collect any extra data on motor vehicles which could then be sold to interested parties.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Not at present: there are no plans to collect any extra data, nor to change the law to enable this to be done.

DVLC (Ventures)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what new arrangements will be made to allow the driver and vehicle licensing centre to undertake profitable ventures.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: DVLC already provides certain designated services at charges set in accordance with standard Government accounting guidelines issued to Government Departments. There are no planned changes.

Taxi and Private Hire Car (Legislation)

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has concluded his review of taxi and private hire car legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Last year the Department of Transport completed an internal review of taxi and private hire vehicle legislation for England and Wales. My predecessor invited comments from the taxi and PHV trades, licensing authorities and consumer bodies on problems and possible solutions. Specific areas for discussion included the distinction between taxis and hire cars, vehicle design, knowledge examinations, quantity control and fares. I am most grateful for all the responses sent to the Department; we have studied all of them very carefully.

The Transport Act 1985 introduced changes outside London designed to increase business opportunities and to limit the restrictions on entry into the taxi trade. I am disappointed that some district councils still appear to be rationing the issue of taxi licences, which distorts competition and interferes with the operation of a free market. The Act clearly states the exceptional circum stances in which quantity control may be considered, and licensing authorities should look very carefully at all evidence on supply and demand, not least the price at which existing licences change hands, before restricting the issue of licences. I believe that more time should be allowed for the new opportunities introduced by the 1985 Act to develop, and I have concluded that it is too early to propose further legislation. I would also remind applicants for licences that the 1985 Act already makes provision for appeal to the courts against unreasonable decisions by a licensing authority, and I am not convinced that the full scope of action in the courts has yet been explored.

In the case of London, it has become clear that the high standards of service and propriety offered by taxis are highly valued by respondents and the public. London passengers enjoy a quality of service based on purpose-built vehicles developed to enhance driver and passenger comfort. Their roadworthiness and cleanliness are ensured by standards set by the Public Carriage Office, and drivers must pass through rigorous driver testing. I therefore do not propose to legislate to change the present arrangements concerning the black cab or the knowledge of London examination. Neither do I intend to alter the present distinction between the taxi and hire car trades.

Since 1980, the fares chargeable by London taxis have been adjusted by reference to an index of cost changes in the previous year. This index reflects the movement of earnings and the range of costs involved in cab ownership and operation, including replacement parts, garaging and servicing, fuel, insurance, depreciation etc. In line with the movement in that index last year, from 9 June 1989 the maximum fares chargeable by London taxis will increase by an average of 11·1 per cent. This rise takes into account, among other things, the increase in quality of new taxis coming into service and higher costs associated with the requirement that new taxis be accessible to passengers in wheelchairs. I have today made an order increasing London taxi fares with effect from Friday 9 June 1989.

PRIME MINISTER

Nuclear Deterrent

Q28. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the nuclear deterrent.

Q38. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the nuclear deterrent.

Q208. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the nuclear deterrent.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of letters from individuals and organisations.

Economy

Q32. Mr. Malins: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the performance of the economy.

Q119. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has received regarding the performance of the economy.

The Prime Minister: I have received a number of such representations. Thanks to the policies we have pursued for the last 10 years, and will continue to pursue, the economy is performing exceptionally well.

Rain Forests

Q74. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to the reply of 18 April, Official Report, column 183, given by the Lord President on her behalf, whether she will make it her policy to meet any Brazilian request for the supply of four large cargo and two personnel carrying helicopters to assist in the rain forest protection programme.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which my hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development gave him on 10 April, at column 344. The further assistance which we are currently discussing with the Brazilian Government with respect to the protection of the rainforests is likely to be in the area of technical co-operation rather than capital aid for equipment like helicopters.

UK 2000

Q94. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the achievements of UK 2000; and what assessment she has made of the contribution to its work made by Mr. Richard Branson.

The Prime Minister: Since its establishment in July 1986 UK 2000 has met all the targets set for it each year by Government. In 1988-89 UK 2000 supported over 700 environmental projects involving well over 80,000 volunteer days and 6,000 trainees. Total Government grant was exceeded by sponsorship from the private sector and about 350 new long-term jobs were created.

Mr. Richard Branson's active commitment to UK 2000 has greatly assisted the initiative. His expertise remains available because of his continuing involvement as president.

European Monetary Union

Q126. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the proposals of the Commission on monetary union; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The European Council announced at Hanover last June that it would discuss the question of economic and monetary union at its meeting in Madrid on 26-27 June 1989, on the basis of the report that it commissioned from a committee chaired by Monsieur Delors.

Environmental Pollution (Mountain Ash)

Q173. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on environmental pollution at Mountain Ash.

The Prime Minister: I am fully aware of local feeling about pollution from the Phurnacite plant, Aberaman.

Baltic States

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if, in her recent discussions with President Gorbachev, she raised the right of self-determination of the Baltic states; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I did not raise this specific issue with President Gorbachev. But the Soviet authorities are well aware that we have never recognised de jure the forcible incorporation of the former Baltic states into the Soviet. We are encouraged by recent signs that the Baltic peoples are increasingly able to express their views about their own future. We hope that this process will continue.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister when she last specifically raised the nuclear non-proliferation treaty with a visiting head of state or Government or during her visits abroad.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs raises the NPT and related issues whenever a suitable opportunity arises. The subject of the treaty has not however been included on the agenda for any talks that I have had recently.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her meeting with the Prime Minister of Italy on 28 April 1989 in London, she raised the issues of (a) the first preparatory committee for the non-proliferation treaty review conference in New York on 1 to 5 May, and (b) the possibilities for new proposals at the 1990 non-proliferation treaty review conference.

The Prime Minister: No.

European Language

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy towards the promotion by the European Community of an officially approved single language throughout Europe.

The Prime Minister: I know of no such proposal. The strength of Europe lies in the diversity of its cultural and historical traditions.

Engagements

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Haynes: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 11 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall attend a Banquet given by President Babangida.

Official Historian

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will consider appointing an official historian for the Prime Minister's Office.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Children (World Conference)

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will support a world conference for children to be organised by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund as proposed by the Secretary-General of the United Nations.

The Prime Minister: The Government are currently considering whether to support this proposed conference on the basis of tentative proposals prepared by UNICEF at the end of the executive board meeting in April.

SOCIAL SECURITY

18-year-olds (Help and Support)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to provide help and support for 18-year-olds who are leaving care.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Eighteen-year-olds leaving care can qualify for income support and housing benefit, and for community charge rebates in Scotland, in the normal way. In addition, from July we propose to disregard totally any payments to young people who have been in care made by local authorities under section 27 and 29 of the Child Care Act 1980 (or sections 24 and 26 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968).

Temple Row House, Birmingham

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security since what date his Department has rented Temple row house, Soho road, Birmingham, for use as a local office; what is the current rental; and to whom it is payable.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Department has rented Temple Row house, Soho road, Birmingham, for use as a local office since 2 March 1972. The current rental is £17,607·17 per annum, payable to Standard Securities plc, 5 Commercial street, Birmingham B1 1RS.

Community Charge

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what sum is included in income support to assist with the minimum 20 per cent. community charge payment for those who will receive the maximum 80 per cent. community charge rebate; what arrangements will be made to increase this sum in line with increases in community charge; for how many people he estimates this sum will be more than the minimum 20 per cent. they have to pay; and for how many people this sum will be less than the minimum 20 per cent. they have to pay.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The amounts which have been included in income support levels from April to help meet the minimum 20 per cent. contribution to the community charge are £1·15 a week for single people aged 18 to 24, £1·30 a week for single people aged 25 or over, and £2·30 a week for couples. This was a once-and-for-all adjustment and future increases in the overall benefit levels will be made in the normal way.

It is not possible to provide estimates of the number of cases where the amounts included in income support will be higher or lower than the actual community charge levels in advance of these levels being set.

Pensioner Incomes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the overall increase in pensioner incomes in real terms by quintile group for each year from 1979-80 to 1985-86.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 23 March 1989]: The table shows the requested information for pensioner tax units using (a) net income and (b) equivalised net income.

EC (Meetings)

Mr. Wray To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the European Community meetings on matters concerning his Department held in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Pursuant to my reply of 8 May, the Labour and Social Affairs Council met on two occasions in each of the years 1985, 1986 and 1988. There were also a number of informal meetings of Employment Ministers and of Ministers responsible for women's issues, at which some social security items were discussed. In addition, there were numerous meetings of officials but information on the number of those meetings could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Income Support

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for 1978, 1979 and 1988 for each social security office and each social security region, the number of (a) claimants and (b) dependents on (i) supplementary benefit or income support and (ii) family income support or family credit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [pursuant to his reply of 26 April]: The available information has been placed in the Library.

SCOTLAND

Community Care

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there exists in Scotland bridging finance and transfer funds similar to that available to local and health authorities in England and Wales to tide them over the period when community facilities for the handicapped are being developed but institutions cannot be closed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Within their allocations, health boards may make lump sum or continuing payments to a local authority or voluntary agency towards the cost of projects which make it possible for people such as those with a mental handicap to return to the community.

Mr. Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding is available from Government sources for the rehabilitation of mentally and physically handicapped people in Scotland who have been moved out of institutions into the community under the "care in the community" policy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The cost of providing community care facilities for mentally and physically handicapped people discharged from hospital is met primarily by health boards and local authority social work departments from their general allocations from central Government. These allocations have been substantially increased in real terms since 1979. In addition, a number of voluntary organisations providing community care facilities receive grant either directly from central Government or from regional councils or health boards.

Under the urban programme, the Government provide 75 per cent. grant for a number of projects which benefit mentally or physically handicapped people in eligible deprived urban areas who may be returning to the community. Scottish Homes will devote a set amount of its capital allocation from central Government specifically to housing for the disabled including mentally and physically handicapped people. A range of specific weekly social security benefits is available to the long-term sick and disabled. Such people are also eligible as a priority group to apply for community care grants under the social fund and also to the independent living fund. These grants are intended primarily to help those leaving institutional care to set up home and remain in the community.

Reprocessing Plant, Dounreay

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce his decision on the report submitted to him on the European demonstration reprocessing plant at Dounreay.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend is still considering the report of the public local inquiry into the proposed development and he is not yet in a position to predict a date for the announcement of his decision.

Home Ownership

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to introduce measures to increase opportunities for home ownership in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I intend to ask Scottish Homes to introduce by October 1989 a rents to mortgages scheme for the tenants of their existing houses. It will also be open to any new town tenants who may elect to transfer to Scottish Homes under tenants' choice arrangements. This scheme will run for a trial period of three years.

The new scheme will complement the existing statutory right to buy scheme. It will not compete with it, and is aimed at that specific group of tenants who would like to own their own home but who cannot afford to do so even with the discounts available under right to buy. It is not our intention, however, to draw into owner-occupation those who cannot afford it and the scheme will not be available for those tenants dependent on housing benefit.

Tenants who participate will buy their homes by means of a normal repayable mortgage calculated by reference to their present rental outgoings increased to reflect the added benefits stemming from owner occupation, but also adjusted to reflect their added financial responsibility for the future upkeep of their homes. As with right to buy, tenants will benefit from an immediate discount on the purchase price of their property. This will be calculated on the same basis as right to buy discounts, but at a level 15 percentage points less. The remaining finance required will be covered by a deferred loan from Scottish Homes on which there will be no repayments until it is redeemed, for example, on subsequent sale of the House by the owner.

The outstanding loan to Scottish Homes, will be abated each year by an additional discount, up to the maximum right-to-buy discount level minus 15 percentage points. However the final repayment due to Scottish Homes will be based on the level of the outstanding loan amount and on the market value of the house at the date of that repayment: incentives will be introduced to ensure that the house is properly maintained.

I shall be consulting Scottish Homes immediately about the detailed arrangements.

Overprescribing

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many investigations of general practitioners for overprescribing have taken place in Scotland by the health board in the last (a) five years (b) 10 years and (c) 15 years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 8 May 1989]: This information is not available. General practitioners' prescribing is constantly being monitored by health boards and area medical committees.

Federation of the Highlands and Islands Fishermen

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he or one of his Ministers last met representatives of the Federation of the Highlands and Islands Fishermen; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Ministers have not met representatives of the Federation of Highlands and Islands Fishermen. The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland is, however, in regular contact with the federation and its constituent associations on matters of mutual concern; and they are consulted on all aspects of fisheries management as appropriate.

HEALTH

Private Hospitals

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each year since 1979, and for each district health authority, the numbers of National Health Service patients treated in private hospitals under contractual arrangements; and if he will list the costs of treatment to each district health authority in (a) actual amounts and (b) deflated by the health service pay and prices index.

Mr. Mellor: The number of patients receiving consultant treatment under contractual arrangements, and health authority expenditure on contracts with private sector health providers, for the years 1982 to 1986 (latest available) are given in two tables which have been placed in the Library. Comparable data for 1979 to 1981 are not available.

The data provided in these two tables are not directly comparable, for the reasons given in the notes on the tables.

Halton DHA

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statment on trends in deaths and discharges per bed in urology in the Halton district health authority area.

Mr. Freeman: There is insufficient information to determine the trend. In 1986, when urology treatment first became available in Halton, 35 in-patient cases were treated. In 1987-88 there were 553 episodes of in-patient urology treatment and 432 day cases.

Royal Devon and Exeter Hospital

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure that the Thwaites report on the operation of the radiotherapy department of the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital is implemented by the health authority without further delay.

Mr. Mellor: The health authority is fully committed to implementing the recommendations of the Thwaites report following the radiation incident at the Royal Devon and Exeter hospital. Some measures necessarily take longer to achieve than others, but all will be implemented.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each year since 1979 (a) each hospital closed completely and (b) each hospital closed partially, and if he will break that list down by each district health authority, SHA and regional health authority.

Mr. Freeman: I have placed in the Library tables of hospitals that we are aware have been approved for partial or total closure following consultation under the provisions of the Community Health Council Regulations.

Capital Projects

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give detail of each capital project costing more than £1 million (a) actually under construction and (b) at the proposal or planning stage; if he will give the estimated date of completion for each project; and if he will break this list down by each regional health authority.

Mr. Freeman: Information held centrally on health building schemes, each costing over £1 million, in England shows that there are at present 503 schemes at various stages of planning, design and construction. I have arranged for a list of the schemes with, where available, their expected dates of completion, to be placed in the Library. It is too early to forecast a date of completion for schemes at the programme stage prior to submission for approval in principle.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, for each regional health authority, details of proposed capital developments costing more than £1 million which have been cancelled for each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: I regret that comprehensive information is not available centrally on the adjustments made by health authorities to their capital programmes over this period.

Consultants

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many additional permanent consultant posts he estimates will be established within the next 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: It is estimated that 4,843 new consultant posts will be established in England and Wales between 1987 and 1998. This figure, which represents an increase of 33 per cent. in the number of consultants, includes the 100 new posts announced in "Working for Patients".

Community Care

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with interested groups concerning the Griffiths report on community care.

Mr. Mellor: We have discussed community care at the regular meetings we hold, with the local authority associations and with chairmen of regional health authorities, to consider items of current interest in health and social services. We remain of the view that further discussions with interested parties will be most useful when our present deliberations have been completed and our proposals for the future organisation of community care are made public.

Domestic Animals (Diseases)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his calculations or estimates of the incidence of diseases contracted as a result of contact with domestic animals in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: Data on which to base the estimates requested are not available centrally.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his calculations or estimates of the number of cases of diseases caused as a result of contact with dog faeces in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: The only disease contractable from dog faeces on which we have data is toxocariasis. We have no direct information on the source of infection in individual cases. The rise in cases in recent years is at least in part due to the development of new tests and to increased screening and testing of patients with symptoms suggestive of the disease.

Medical Records

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on progress being made to agree a code of practice to enable patients to have access to their own medical records.

Mr. Freeman: The medical profession has provisionally accepted a draft code of practice, a copy of which is in the Library. The Department is now preparing to consult over a three-month period other interested parties such as dentists, nurses, midwives, health visitors, patient interest groups and NHS management. As soon after that consultation as is practicable, the Department will issue the code under cover of a circular.

Kidneys (Sale)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library the report of the Department of Health inquiry into the kidney for sale at Wellington Humana hospital.

Mr. Freeman: It would not be appropriate to do so. Reports were prepared by the relevant health authorities and passed to me in strict confidence.

Midwives

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he will be taking in response to the Social Services Select Committee's recommendations on midwives' regrading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Garrett) and my hon. Friend the Member for Batley and Spen (Mrs. Peacock) on 10 May 1989.

Test Census

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the results of the recent test census will be published.

Mr. Freeman: The main aims of the test were to make sure that procedures for delivering and collecting forms would be effective in the 1991 census and to assess the readiness of the public to accept and respond to the proposed question on ethnic group.

A report of the public's response to the proposed question on ethnic group will be published when the results of the test and a small follow-up survey in June 1989, have been assessed. This is expected to be towards the end of the year when the draft Census Order is laid before Parliament. The main findings on the census procedures will be published when the test has been evaluated. This evaluation will include an analysis of the proportion of households in each test area who returned a completed form.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rabbit Meat

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has of any DDT residue found in rabbit meat imported into the United Kingdom from the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Ryder: Monitoring by the working party on pesticide residues (WPPR) has revealed residues of DDT and other organochlorine pesticides in rabbit meat imported from the People's Republic of China. These findings were first published in the WPPR's second report in 1986. The results of subsequent monitoring were published in the WPPR's third report on 13 March this year. Although the levels found pose no health concern, imports are being closely monitored and statutory maximum residue levels introduced last year are being enforced.

Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been spent by his Department on advertisements on commercial television in each of the last five years, listed by each television company.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Information on television advertisements in the form requested is commercially confidential.

Food Prices

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the price in pence per pound of sugar, butter, and beef and the price per ton of wheat in the United Kingdom; what are the comparable figures for these items in the world market for food; and if he has comparable information for five and 10 years ago.

Mr. Ryder: Information on first hand/wholesale prices in the United Kingdom is shown in the table. There is no single, representative measure of "world" prices for these commodities. Price quotations available vary according to differences in quality, presentation and point of shipment/destination.

First hand/wholesale prices in the United Kingdom, in nominal and real[1] terms

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information is made generally available on the price of foodstuffs (a) within the EEC and (b) on the free world market; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: For the European Community, Eurostat disseminates a range of information, including prices received by producers for certain agricultural commodities, volume and value of imports and exports and consumer price indices for food. Some price data are also available in the specialised trade press and the publications of trade organisations. Price quotations for some products available for "world" trade are published in the specialist press and elsewhere: but these relate generally to particular qualities and presentation at specified locations and are not necessarily comparable with home-produced supplies available on the domestic market: they exclude products traded under special agreements. A significant reduction in agricultural support levels worldwide—a major aim of the Uruguay GATT round—would cause many "world" prices to rise.

Channel Cod Quota

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the review of the Channel cod quota is to be undertaken and completed; what action he intends taking to ensure the continued viability of the south-west fishery during the interim period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: We will raise the Channel cod total allowable catch (TAC) at the next meeting of the advisory committee for fisheries management (ACFM) this month. The present TAC is the same as the revised one for 1988 and it is 70 per cent. greater than 1983. Overall, and taking account of the valuable swap of Dutch quotas we secured last December, 1989 fishing opportunities in south west are greater in cod equivalent terms than in 1988. As well as pressing for an early review of Channel cod, we will continue to explore the possibility for further swaps which will improve our fishing opportunities.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of the cost of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy slaughter programme is met by the European Community; what the total cost has been to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The total cost of the BSE slaughter and disposal programme, excluding Ministry staff and other resources, up to 31 March 1989 was just over £1·6 million. None of these costs are being met from European Community funds.

Food Irradiation

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the draft EC directive on food irradiation.

Mr. Ryder: I refer the hon. Member to the explanatory memorandum 10377/88 on this draft directive which has been lodged in the Library of the House.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of vegetables imported from Holland in 1988 were subjected to irradiation.

Mr. Ryder: None.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about possibilities of monitoring foodstuffs for irradiation.

Mr. Ryder: Dosimetric techniques for monitoring the irradiation of food are well established.

Set-aside Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of (a) registrations and (b) applications for the set-aside scheme were validated by field inspections in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The information requested is being collected. I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Aerial Photography

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what proportion of the United Kingdom arable area was subject in 1988 to aerial photography of sufficient quality to allow identification of the cropping pattern; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he has plans for aerial photography of arable land in the United Kingdom in 1989; and what he estimates the cost will be.

Mr. Ryder: Excluding satellite imagery, approximately 1 million hectares of land, mainly in Great Britain, was covered by ADAS aerial photography in 1988. Some 20 per cent. of this area was arable land. This photography was of sufficient quality to allow identification of cropping patterns. Present plans provide for a similar area to be photographed in 1989, both for statutory and advisory purposes. Total budgeted running costs for the ADAS aerial photography unit in 1989-90 are estimated at £250,000.

Natural Environment Research Council

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the research projects undertaken for his Department by the Natural Environment Research Council during the past five years.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The following research projects have been undertaken for my Department by the Natural Environment Research Council during the five years ending 1988-89. Some of the projects were completed in that period and others are continuing.

Aquatic environment and fisheries
Factors affecting the population dynamics of sea trout
The physiology of stress response in freshwater fish
Effects of flow regimes in salmonid recruitment
Nutritional requirements and feed behaviour of fish
The role of nultritional deficiency in disease in farm fish
Continuous plankton recorder
Undulating oceanographic recorder deployment off the northeast coast
Plankton production at seasonal thermocline
Irish Sea productivity study
Integration of chemical, physical and biological modelling along the Western European shelf edge
Organic waste disposal in the marine environment
Coastal water processes in the Irish Sea and west Scotland
Organic degradation in the marine environment
Mercury transformations in the marine environment
Relationship between lipids in phytoplankton zoo plankton and herring larvae
Hydrography of the North West approaches
Bait attraction and longlining
The ecology of young stages of salmonid fish and the implications for practical river management
Phytoplankton in relation to mariculture
Environmental stress and physiology of growth in trout
Environmental radioactivity: Impact of freshwater ecosystems: Evaluation of Opercular Bone Material
Fish biology (study of deep sea species)
Salmonid/coarse fish interaction in chalk streams
Biology of saprolegnia

Sea Mammal Research
Whale research (research on population dynamics to support United Kingdom representatives to IWC)
Seal research (research on population numbers and dynamics, diet and the impact on commercial fisheries)

River and Flood Protection
Physical aspects of flooding
Catchment response to rainfall
Flood statistics
Wetland hydrology
Environment impact of flood protection measures
Distributed catchment models
Real time forecasting of river flows
National archive for flood hydrology
Catchment response modelling for design flood estimation
Catchment urbanisation
Effects of agricultural drainage on catchment hydrology
Catchment response and the flood frequency curve
Statistical flood estimation procedures
Hydrological behaviour of flat agricultural catchments
Environmental impact of flood protection measures on the water regime of wildlife habitats
River erosion
Risk based criteria for economic analysis of flood protection works

Marine Flood Protection
Numerical models of the seas around Britain
Prediction of sea levels
Wave action and extreme waves
Maintenance and monitoring of the East Coast model
Development of West Coast model
Development of a combined wave/tide/surge model
Statistical prediction of extreme levels
Improvement of sea level prediction for flood protection
Joint probability of waves and sea levels
Wave set-up
High wave studies
Wave-current interaction
Wave measurement in support of such coast flood protection studies
Routine wave measurements
Review of potential of satellite remote sensing for marine flood protection
Archiving of Class A tide gauge data
Wave measurement for South Coast studies
Detailed processes of sand transport by tidal waves etc.
Movement of material on the sea bed under the combined action of waves and tides

NORTHERN IRELAND

Mental Handicap

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what funds were allocated from his Department for directly commissioned research relevant to mental handicap for each of the past five years; and whether he intends those funds to be increased over the next five to 10 years.

Mr. Needham: No research relevant to mentally handicapped people has been directly commissioned by the Northern Ireland Department of Health and Social Services over the past five years.

The Department is soon to commission a major research project to monitor and evaluate the implementation of the policy in Northern Ireland to promote and develop community care for mentally ill and mentally handicapped people selected for discharge from long-stay hospitals. The project will monitor the progress and quality of life of individual patients and will run for at least three years.

Food Safety

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will state the number of food poisoning cases in each area board in the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

	Eastern	Northern	Southern	Western
1984	43	50	37	15
1985	62	31	60	5
1986	97	107	48	21
1987	193	145	69	16
1988	95	104	57	46

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Departments in Northern Ireland are responsible for consumer food safety.

Mr. Needham: The Department of Health and Social Services and the Department of Agriculture.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has any plans to up-date the law on food safety in Northern Ireland; when his Department last reviewed existing legal provision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Food Acts of the United Kingdom (which include law on food safety) were reviewed in 1984 by officials of the United Kingdom Health and Agriculture Departments. Following that review Ministers agreed that consultations should be carried out on the future of those Acts, and those consultations are now largely complete. As my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced in the House on 16 March, new legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time permits. In accordance with normal practice in the field of transferred legislation, comparable provision will be made for Northern Ireland by Order in Council under the Northern Ireland Act 1974.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what responsibilities health and social services boards have in the area of food safety.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 May 1989]: Health and Social Services boards are responsible for investigating food poisoning cases reported by doctors under the Public Health Act (NI) 1967 as amended. In addition, under the Food and Drugs Act (NI) 1958, a chief administrative medical officer of a health and social services board may, if he suspects that any food is likely to cause food poisoning, seize that food and have it tested. If investigations confirm that the food is unfit for human consumption it may be destroyed or otherwise disposed of.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has any plans to reform the law in Northern Ireland as it applies to food and hygiene; which Northern Ireland departments are responsible for food safety; and how many staff from each Department have been involved in this area in the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 May 1989.] The Food Acts of the United Kingdom were reviewed in 1984 by officials of United Kingdom Health and Agriculture Departments. Following that review Ministers agreed that consultations should be carried out on the future of those Acts, and those consultations are now largely complete. As my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced in the House on 16 March, new legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time permits. In accordance with normal practice in the field of transferred legislation, comparable provision will be made for Northern Ireland by Order in Council under the Northern Ireland Act 1974.

The Departments of Health and Social Services and Agriculture have responsibilities for food safety.

Figures on the numbers of staff from each Department involved in food safety over the past three years are not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dwellings (Valuation)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 12 April, Official Report, column 595, if he will indicate the cost of extracting from the computer on which it is held the information sought by the hon. Member for Londonderry, East about the net valuation of dwellings in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The cost of providing the information requested is more than twice the present limit for answers to parliamentary questions.

Prisons (Education)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show what sums were expended on education in each prison in Northern Ireland in each of the last five years and indicate the major items of expenditure in each case; and if he will also indicate the number of library books available in each prison in each such year or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The figures requested are readily available for the past four years and are shown in table form.

Cost of education in Northern Ireland prisons 1985-1989

Total	585·3	646·8	693·7	801·6
Library books available to inmates (approx)	40,000	41,000	41,000	35,000

Notes:

1. The increased costs for the year 1988-89 can be attributed to the national increase in teachers' salary scales. This normally accounts for 90 per cent. of the total expenditure on prison education.
2. The range of subjects taught runs from adult basic education through to open university level, and prisoners are prepared for the various public examinations—eg GCSE; A levels; Royal Society of Arts; City and Guilds of London Institute. Statistics available for the 1987-88 academic year show that upwards of 1,000 inmates or just under 50 per cent. of the total prison population were involved in some form of education. Of this, 28 per cent. were enrolled in basic education, 55 per cent. were enrolled in examination classes and the remaining

17 per cent. were enrolled in social/leisure classes. In total 519 were presented for recognised examinations and 477 were successful.
3. Seventy nine inmates are presently involved in the open university undergraduate programme. Last year 69 took examinations and 65 were successful including 10 obtaining distinctions. Within this group five completed their degrees, two with honours.
4. On a sample day 78 per cent. of the population had a total of 4,800 books on loan. The inter-library province-wide loan scheme, of which prison libraries are a part, makes a valuable contribution to the quality of the library service and last year 1,077 special requests were processed. The prison libraries carry a total book stock of around 35,000, all supplied by the local education and library boards, whose professional expertise and practical support is gratefully acknowledged.
5. The reduction in the total number of books available between 1987-88 and 1988-89 results in the amalgamation of the compound prisoners and their libraries into the cellular regime.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when was the most recent case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy confirmed in Northern Ireland; and what assessment he has made of whether it indicates any spread of the disease.

Mr. Viggers: The 13th case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) in Northern Ireland was confirmed on 3 April 1989.

BSE is not thought to spread from animal to animal. The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland has implemented the recommendations of the Southwood committee. These recommendations are intended to prevent further infection of bovines but it must be borne in mind that they cannot prevent cases arising in animals incubating the disease from earlier exposure to the infective agent. As the disease takes a number of years to manifest itself clinically it will be some time before the ultimate success of the measures taken can be assessed.

Family Credit

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many families were entitled to family credit and how many were receiving it in 1988-89.

Mr. Needham: The number of families entitled to and receiving family credit on 31 March 1989 was 14,500. A reliable estimate of the number who might be eligible for family credit in Northern Ireland is not available.

Capital Projects (Health Boards)

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give, for each health board, details of proposed capital developments costing more than £1 million which have been cancelled for each year since 1979.

Mr. Needham: No such schemes have been cancelled since 1979.

Electricity (Privatisation)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the proposed timetable for the privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Viggers: No timetable has been set for privatisation of Northern Ireland Electricity. Government are currently examining the available options and will bring forward their detailed proposals in due course.

General Practitioners

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what account his Department takes of the parity clause in relation to the statement of fees and allowances in the Social Services Agreement Act 1949 and the Finance Act 1971; and what arrangements are accordingly made to budget for general practitioner trainers' remuneration and general practitioner trainees' allowances.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 4 May 1989]: The amounts payable to general practitioner trainers and trainees under the statement of fees and allowances are the same in Northern Ireland as in the rest of the United Kingdom. Financial provision for general practitioner trainers' remuneration and general practitioner trainees' allowance is made under the family practitioner services section of the Department's Health and Personal Social Services vote 1.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what consideration has been given to amending current arrangements in Northern Ireland to allow designated general practitioner trainers to recruit suitably qualified general practitioner trainees on the same terms as in Great Britain; and what would be the revenue and manpower consequences of such a change;

(2) whether there is any constraint which prohibits the Department of Health and Social Security in Northern Ireland from allowing general practitioner trainers to recruit trainees on the same basis as in Britain.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 May 1989]: It is not proposed to introduce arrangements in Northern Ireland to allow designated general practitioner trainers to recruit their own trainees on the same basis as in Great Britain. The present arrangements are designed to limit the annual number of trainees to our manpower requirements and to select trainees in accordance with the provisions of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1976 and the guide to effective practice issued by the Department of Economic Development. Copies of each of these documents have been placed in the Library.

However, I can inform the hon. Member that the Department has established a working group of all interested parties to review the arrangements for vocational training for general practice in Northern Ireland.

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has yet received approval from the EEC of the proposed management buy-out in co-operation with Mr. Olsen of Messrs. Harland and Wolff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 4 May 1989]: Formal EC approval has not yet been sought for the sale of Harland and Wolff plc to the management buy-out team, backed by Mr. Olsen. Officials of the Department of Economic Development have had discussions with EC officials and a formal notification seeking EC approval will be made in due course.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to offer performance guarantees on behalf of Her Majesty's Government in respect of any of the three tankers to be built at Messrs. Harland and Wolff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 4 May 1989]: As my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State, announced on 22 March, to enable the new Harland and Wolff to raise performance guarantees necessary for the financing of its operations in the early years, the Olsen companies have agreed to make a recourse commitment for use by the new company to support pre-delivery financing. The Government will match this.

Fair Employment Commission

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of all those who were considered for appointment as chairmen of the Fair Employment Commission; if he will make a statement about the methods used to appoint to this post; and what advertisements were placed in the press.

Mr. Viggers [holding answer 5 May 1989]: It is not usual to advertise for applicants for appointments to the boards of statutory bodies nor to publicise the names of those who have been under consideration for any public office. The chairman designate of the Fair Employment Commission was selected on the basis of individual merit.

Food Poisoning

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of cases of food poisoning notified to each health and social services board in Northern Ireland in the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 May 1989]: The information is as follows:

	Eastern	Northern	Southern	Western
1986	97	107	48	21
1987	193	145	69	16
1988	95	104	57	46

Environmental Health Officers

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many environmental health officers are currently employed by each district council in Northern Ireland; and what was the figure for 1984.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 May 1989]: In Northern Ireland environmental health officers, outside Belfast, are employed within regional groups of councils. Some officers are retained at group headquarters and provide specialist services to each constituent council. Each council also has its own complement of environmental health officers. The numbers employed are as follows:

	1984	1989
Belfast	56	59
Eastern group:
HQ	8	9
Ards	5	5
Castlereagh	4	4
Down	5	5

Maternity Payments

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of children born in Northern Ireland during 1988 were eligible for maternity payments through the social fund; and what was the average payment made.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 May 1989]: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, during 1988, 8,129 maternity payments were made. The normal flat-rate payment is £85 per child.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the former employees of North East Shipbuilders Ltd. who have found full-time employment since the closure of the shipyard.

Mr. Newton: I do not think that it would be appropriate to list individuals in this way, even if it were immediately practicable. However, I understand that no part-time jobs are included in the figure given recently by Sunderland Enterprise and Training Ltd. for the number of former NESL employees who have found alternative jobs.

Internal Market

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimates have been made of the effects of the completion of the internal market in 1992 on (a) job losses in manufacturing industry and (b) of the adverse effects in peripheral regions of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The single market will provide great opportunities and challenges to firms in all parts of the United Kingdom. The impact on individual sectors and regions will depend on how successfully individual firms respond.

British Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the post of chief executive to the British Overseas Trade board was advertised; and what are the current pay and conditions of the appointment.

Mr. Alan Clark: The post of chief executive to the British Overseas Trade board was not advertised because it forms part of the duties of a grade 2 civil servant in the Department of Trade and Industry. The current pay and conditions of appointment are those applying generally to civil servants of that grade.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether any members of the British Overseas Trade board listed on page 3 of the 1987-88 annual report have benefited from the British Overseas Trade board services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Comprehensive information about the use of official export services by individual companies is not readily available. However, companies with representatives who are also members of the British Overseas Trade board, are entitled to use the available services on the same conditions as other United Kingdom businesses.

Mr. Peter Luff

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current salary and duties of Mr. Peter Luff.

Mr. Forth: I have nothing to add to the reply which I gave to the hon. Gentleman on 27 January 1989 at column 766.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give the import penetration of every item of manufactured goods under the standard industrial classification for 1988.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest available data for import penetration is for 1987 and may be found in Business Monitor MQ 12. The 1988 information is expected to appear shortly, following a restructuring of the calculation systems to make them compatible with the intergrated classification for overseas trade (the combined nomenclature) introduced at the beginning of 1988.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will give the balance of trade in manufactured goods under the standard industrial classification for 1988.

Mr. Alan Clark: Information on the basis of the standard industrial classification for 1988 is not currently available. Restructuring of the system which provides these estimates to accommodate the new classification for overseas trade has not yet been completed.

In 1988 the balance of trade in manufactured goods on the basis of the standard international trade classification was in deficit by £14·4 billion.

Defence Exports (Visible Exports)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, pursuant to his reply of 9 December, Official Report, column 346, how the calculations for the percentage of total visible exports supported by defence exports were made.

Mr. Alan Clark: Since the answer to the hon. Gentleman's previous question on 9 December 1988 at column 346 was given my attention has been drawn to the fact that the percentages were based on figures which did not fully represent United Kingdom defence equipment exports.

The correct figures—based on headings in the Overseas Trade Statistics which cover defence equipment expressed as a percentage of total United Kingdom exports are 1·1 per cent. in 1986, 1·5 per cent. in 1987 and 1·0 per cent. in 1988.

Japanese Trade

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) if he will list the principal manufactured products from Japan imported into the United Kingdom with the corresponding import duties applicable to those products in Japan;

(2) if he will set out the balance of trade with Japan in the last full year and the anticipated figures for the current year;

(3) if he will set out the principal products exported to Japan from the United Kingdom with their rates of import duties and the rates of duty for those same products applicable on imports to the United Kingdom from Japan.

Mr. Alan Clark: The crude balance of trade with Japan for 1988—the last full year for which figures are available—was in deficit by £4,766 million. Projections of trade balances for individual countries are not available.

Principal products in our trade with Japan have been identified as those nine-digit United Kingdom commodity code numbers which had the greatest value of trade recorded against them in 1988. United Kingdom duty rates are specified for each of these nine-digit headings; Japanese duty rates are allocated according to the headings of the harmonised system which comprise the first six digits of the United Kingdom commodity code.

The tables show the top ten products listed in order of the value of trade in 1988 for United Kingdom imports of manufactures from Japan and United Kingdom exports to Japan respectively together with the requested duty rates. The products listed account for 27 per cent. of our imports of manufactures from Japan and 22 per cent. of our total exports to Japan.

More comprehensive tables showing the top 100 commodity codes in numerical order (in each case accounting for about two thirds of the overall trade) have been placed in the Library. The tables include the relevant Japanese duty rates. The descriptions of the code numbers and United Kingdom duty rates can be found in the "Integrated Tariff of the United Kingdom", a copy of which is available in the Library. However, for some of the commodity codes, the descriptions are too specific to identify product groups that can be easily recognised.

If my hon. Friend requires more information about the figures, perhaps he would write to me.

Single Market

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is being done to liberalise United Kingdom export controls in preparation for the single European market.

Mr. Alan Clark: Her Majesty's Government expect to see a considerable reduction in controls on exports to our European Community partners and others before 1992. A step in this direction has been taken with the introduction of an open general export Licence which frees British exporters from the need to apply for individual licences for a wide range of industrial goods for export to our partners in the European Community, the USA, Canada, Japan and Australia.

I am placing a copy of the open general export licence (European Community and COCOM destinations) in the Library.

Estate Agents Act

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the operation of the Estate Agents Act.

Mr. Forth: I am concluding a review of estate agency. The review has considered the operation of the Estate Agents Act 1979 and in this context I have received advice from the Director General of Fair Trading. I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Soviet Union (Joint Enterprises)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many joint ventures have been entered into by British companies with (a) Soviet state enterprises and (b) Soviet co-operatives to date; and if he will list them.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, Central (Mr. Fisher) on 10 May 1989. Of those, 33 signed UK/USSR joint ventures of which we are aware, 29 are with Soviet state organisations while the remaining four are with Soviet co-operatives. My Department is unable to list them, however, as much of the information has been provided to us on the basis of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many joint ventures have been entered into with the Soviet Union by EC companies to date; and if he is able to list the number for each member state.

Mr. Alan Clark: The most comprehensive and most recent survey of joint ventures entered into in the Soviet Union by EC companies held by my Department is a PlanEcon Report[1] dated 24 March which gives details of 103 joint ventures which had been registered with the Soviet Ministry of Finance on or before 15 February 1989. For ease of comparison, the number with each member state is as follows:

EC Member State	Number
West Germany	36
Italy	20
United Kingdom	12
France	10
Luxembourg	3
Spain	3
Belgium	2
Denmark	2
Netherlands	2
Greece	1
Ireland	1
Portugal	0
	92
Joint Ventures having partners from more than one EC Member State	4
Joint Venture having partners from an EC Member State and a third country	7
	103

[1] The PlanEcon report is a weekly United States publication, which analyses major macroeconomic and trade developments in the economies of the Soviet Union and eastern Europe.

The number of joint ventures has since risen, though no more recent comparison is available. As I explained in my reply to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, Central (Mr. Fisher) on 10 May 1989, my Department is, for example, aware of 33 joint ventures signed to date between United Kingdom companies and the Soviet Union, not all of which have been registered with the Soviet authorities.

Telephone Calls

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will provide equivalent figures on telephone calls to those given by the then hon. Member for Wembley, South on 23 January 1968, Official Report, column 331, for the latest available date.

Mr. Atkins: The latest year for which such information is publicly available is 1983. In that year some 21·5 billion effective telephone calls were made, of which 82·6 per cent. were local calls; 16·7 per cent. inland trunk calls; 0·43 per cent. were continental calls and 0·26 per cent. were other overseas calls.

EMPLOYMENT

Job-seeking Records

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the status of the detailed job-seeking records asking claimants to fill in what they have done from Monday to Friday which some unemployed people are asked to complete by claimant advisers; and what is the position of those claimants who refuse or who are otherwise unable to complete them.

Mr. Lee: Benefit claimants are not required to complete a formal record showing their detailed daily activities in order to maintain their claim.

Training

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the progress of employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: Employment training continues to grow faster than any other previous adult training programme. By 28 April, there were over 184,000 people in training. They clearly recognise the benefits the programme has to offer and the opportunity it provides to help them get a job.

Maternity Leave

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what reviews he is making of maternity leave for employees; and if he will take steps to harmonise United Kingdom practice with that of other European countries.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to amend the maternity rights contained in the employment protection legislation.

British Coal

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what advice he has given British Coal in regard to the implementation of the new mine safety regulation and codes of practice; and if he proposes to offer any guidance to ensure that British Coal properly implements the proposed arrangements and that there is no attempt to unilaterally amend them in practice.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. Friend has not given any advice to British Coal on this matter. Regulations and codes of practice approved under the Health and Safety at Work etc Act have the force of law.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide information on the number of female part-timers in April 1988 with an average working week of (a) one hour, (b) two hours, (c) three hours, (d) four hours, (e) five hours, (f) six hours, (g) seven hours and (h) the total below eight hours; and how many have been working (i) over eight hours but below 16 hours, and (ii) 16 hours and above.

Mr. Lee: Preliminary estimates from the spring 1988 labour force survey are as follows:

Women aged 16 and over in part-time[1] employment in Great Britain

Basic usual weekly hours worked[2]	Number working (thousands)
1	19
2	57
3	65
4	113
5	97
6	176
7	87
Less than 8 hours	[3]627
8 hours but less than 16 hours	1,545
16 hours to 30 hours	2,821

[1] Basic usual weekly hours of 30 or less per week.
[2] Excludes mealbreaks and overtime.
[3] Includes a few people whose basic usual weekly hours were a half hour or less. Half hours are rounded to the nearest even hour.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will provide information showing the number of male part-time workers in Great Britain in April 1988 and the proportion of those workers whose earnings fell below (a) £3·80 per hour, (b) £2·85 per hour, (c) £2·80 per hour and (d) £5·70 per hour.

Mr. Nicholls: There were an estimated 914,000 part-time male employees in employment in March 1988. The estimated percentage of part-time male employees earning below the specified amounts in the new earnings survey sample in April 1988 was:

Hourly earnings less than	Percentage
2·80	55
3·00	63
3·80	79
5·50	87
6·00	88

Figures of the proportion earning below £2·85 and £5·70 per hour are not available; the nearest available figures have been given.

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have become self-employed in the last year in the east midlands; what trend can be discerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: There are no figures on people starting or finishing self employment. Between December 1987 and December 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, the estimated number of self-employed in the east midlands region increased by 10,000 to stand at 205,000. This is an increase of 82,000 or 67 per cent. since 1979, and follows the national trend of substantial growth in self employment during the 1980s.

Home Workers

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many home workers are covered by each wages council, and the total number of home workers covered; and if he will publish in the Official Report the statistics on compliance with wages council rates in 1988 for home workers in a similar format as the answer of 1 March, to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short), Official Report, columns 201-06.

Mr. Nicholls: The available information on home workers in wages council trades is as follows. No count is made of the numbers covered by the councils but estimates suggest that the total lies between 20,000 and 30,000.

Results of wages inspectorate checks of home workers pay by trade—1988

ENVIRONMENT

Public Utilities

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now plans to bring in new legislation on public utilities and street work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I have been asked to reply.

Proposals for the reform of the Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 have been drawn up with the benefit of advice from the street works advisory committee, following extensive consultation. A paper has been sent to interested parties inviting comments on the details of our proposals. A copy of that paper is in the Library. Legislation will be brought forward as soon as there is a suitable opportunity.

Rates (Don Valley)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for (a) Brodsworth parish council and (b) Clayton with Frickley parish council in the parliamentary constituency of Don Valley (i) his estimates of the income raised for a 1p rate on the non-domestic properties in 1989-90 and (ii) his estimates of the total amount of business rate income available in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much nuclear waste is being produced annually in the United Kingdom;

(2) what is the total amount of nuclear waste so far accumulated in the United Kingdom at (a) high level, (b) intermediate level and (c) low level; and what quantity in each category is currently awaiting disposal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The figures are contained in the 1987 United Kingdom Radio-active Waste Inventory, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Rates (Wirral)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends taking any action against the Wirral non-metropolitan borough for its 23 per cent. rate rise in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Because of the introduction of the community charge in April 1990, we do not intend to take action against any authority which budgets excessively in 1989-90. However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has power to take early action to reduce the budget of any authority which he considers excessive next year.

Second Homes (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to how many second homes there are in each metropolitan district authority in the county of South Yorkshire; in each case what percentage of the total housing stock this represents; and if he will show in his answer, the figures for five and 10 years ago.

Mr. Trippier: The most recent information is available from the census 1981 county report for South Yorkshire. Table 18 shows for each district numbers of unoccupied second residence household spaces, together with all household spaces. A copy of the publication is available in the Library.

Water

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report, the volumes of water at present being abstracted in the Greater London area and the Inner London area and the number of licensed boreholes in each area.

Mr. Howard: This information is not held centrally. Thames water authority is responsible for licensing water abstractions.

Local Plan (Bradford)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he intends to hold an inquiry into the south-east Bradford local plan following the decision by the council to change to industrial use 21 acres at Low Moor.

Mr. Chope: The primary responsibility for the south-east Bradford local plan and its content lies with Bradford city council. The local plan has already been the subject of a public local inquiry. There is no cause for the involvement of the Secretary of State.

West End Development (Bradford)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions have been held between representatives of his Department and Bradford council regarding the west end development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Officers of Bradford city council have been present at preliminary discussions which my officials have had with the prospective developer. Any application for city grant, which has been discussed, would be made direct to the Department by the developer. Planning permission must be obtained before any such application is accepted.

Drinking Water

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the information in his Department concerning time-limited derogations and delays which have been granted on the non-compliance of potable waters in England with the EC directive relating to the quality of water intended for human consumption, 80/77/EEC.

Mr. Ridley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Gateshead, East (Ms. Quin) on 7 February 1989 at columns 591-97.

Sewage Discharges

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a list, for each water authority, of those sewage works in respect of which applications have been made for revised sewage discharge consents.

Mr. Ridley: I have today placed a list for English water authorities in the Library of the House.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will study the system implemented in the Federal Republic of Germany for the environmentally safe recovery of the chlorofluorocarbons in refrigerators in order to assess its applicability for the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials of the Department of the Environment are shortly to visit the Federal Republic in order to make a technical evaluation of the experimental plant in question and to determine the possible use of the system in the United Kingdom.

Community Charge

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, if he will show in the Official Report the numbers, grades and cost of his Department's staff dealing with public and media inquiries about the community charge and with publicity campaigns on the community charge; and whether these costs were included in the costs of his campaign announced on 8 May.

Mr. Ridley: No members of my Department deal exclusively with public and media inquiries, or with information campaigns, about the community charge. As is usual, the figures included in my letter to the hon. Member dated 8 May were for production and distribution costs and did not cover the time of departmental staff.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the annual cost of the community charge publicity unit being run from PO Box 622, Bristol BS99 1TR; and what are the numbers and grades of staff employed there.

Mr. Ridley: The PO Box No. to which the hon. Member refers is that of a private company contracted by the Central Office of Information, on behalf of the Department, solely to fulfil requests for departmental publications on the community charge. The estimated cost of this service is some £300,000, but the final cost will depend on the number of requests received.

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report his letter of 8 May to the hon. Member for Copeland setting out his plans to publicise the community charge.

Mr. Ridley: I am arranging for copies of my letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Use Classes Order

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy towards the inclusion in structure plans and local plans of policies designated to curtail the freedoms provided by the use classes order.

Mr. Howard: Structure plans and local plans may reasonably seek to encourage particular types of development, but they should not include development control policies whose effect would be to impose general restrictions on the freedoms provided by the use classes order and by the general development order where those orders provide for changes of use without the need for specific planning permission. As was recognised in Circular 13/87, it may very exceptionally be appropriate for a local planning authority in determining a particular planning application to impose a condition restricting the use to which land or buildings may subsequently be put; but plans should not embody general policies for such restrictions.

Development plan policies must be relevant and up to date if they are to carry weight in the consideration of planning applications and appeals. Local planning authorities should, therefore, where necessary bring forward early alterations to policies in plans which are in conflict with the basis of the use classes order. Where already submitted alterations or replacement plans have been drawn up on the basis of the former provisions, the Secretary of State will want to consider the need for modifications to bring them into conformity with the order. Planning authorities should where necessary be prepared to put forward revised proposals for consideration at the examination in public.

Water (Connection Charges)

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to include powers in the Water Bill to allow charges to be made recovering the cost of providing extra capacity to meet demands from newly connected properties.

Mr. Howard: I have considered evidence provided to me about the operation of the existing arrangements. I have concluded that a right to charge at the time new connections are made to water mains and public sewers will provide a clearer, fairer and more certain basis for ensuring infrastructure is provided. The necessary amendments to the Water Bill are therefore being tabled. Conditions of appointment of the water and sewerage companies will place a ceiling on the level of charge that can be made, related to the investment costs of the companies.

Drinking Water

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the cost of installing treatment plant to reduce pollution of the water supply to the European Economic Community standard; and whether the water companies after privatisation will be allowed to add a margin of profit on the capital employed in the installation in addition to the cost of borrowing the sum required for that purpose.

Mr. Howard: Water undertakers have submitted programmes of work, together with projections of the cost (including the cost of installing new treatment plants) of complying with the EC drinking water directive. My right hon. Friend is reviewing the programmes, which require discussion with individual water undertakers. Until he has examined them all it is not possible to indicate their costs. However, the programme together with their costs, will be included in prospectuses to be published later in the year.

Clause 7 of the Water Bill requires the Secretary of State, or the Director General of Water Services, to ensure that water and sewerage undertakers are able (in particular by securing reasonable returns on their capital) to finance the proper carrying out of their functions.

DEFENCE

Odstock Hospital, Salisbury

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has funded any staff or research at any time since 1979 at Odstock hospital in Salisbury.

Mr. Sainsbury: The MOD funds a considerable amount of extramural research, but it is not our practice to go into details of individual contracts. It is for the institutes themselves to confirm their involvement.

Holding Berths

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of a holding berth; whether holding berths have permanent safety precautions against radiological hazards; and if he will publish in the Official Report a full list of all the locations of holding berths in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamliton: A holding berth is a berth available for use over the shortest practical period by a nuclear-powered warship in circumstances when an unplanned event either temporarily precludes the use of a Z or X berth to which it is on passage, or temporarily prevents the warship continuing with its intended movement when leaving a port or berth. A holding berth is for contingency use only and may not be used by planned intent. Holding berths are all covered by public or special safety schemes, but, because they are by nature off shore, much of the detail that applies to Z and X berths is not appropriate. When a nuclear-powered warship is temporarily occupying a holding berth, a tug must be in attendance, other shipping must be required to pass or anchor away from the warship, and an emergency radiation monitoring team must be maintained on call in operational readiness. There are holding berths off shore from Barry, Cardiff, Devonport, Liverpool and Rosyth.

"British Defence Policy"

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost (a) to design, research and compile and (b) to print the pamphlet, "British Defence Policy"; how many copies have been printed; what is the cost of distribution; and if he will list the organisations provided with copies and the number provided to each.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The cost of designing, researching and compiling "British Defence Policy 1989-90" was £29,187 (including VAT); printing is estimated to cost £78,434 (including VAT); and the estimated cost of distribution is £5,100. A total of 130,000 copies are being printed, of which 5,000 have been distributed to date, free of charge, to MPs, peers, journalists, foreign defence attachés and advisers, officials and members of the armed forces and NATO headquarters. We have also sent them to non-government organisations which have requested them, such as Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve Associations, Peace through NATO, the British Atlantic Committee, Families for Defence, the Royal United Services Institution, and the Royal Institute for International Affairs. Additional copies will be sent on request.

"Sanity"

Mr. Paul Flynn To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his departmental library has on order the monthly magazine Sanity produced for the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for Vickers Submarine Engineering Ltd. of the Canadian Government decision to withdraw from purchasing Trafalgar class nuclear power submarines.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Canadian Government had not awarded any contracts prior to their decision not to proceed with a nuclear-powered submarine programme. Had the programme gone ahead and the United Kingdom been selected as country of origin for the design of the submarine, United Kingdom industry, including Vickers Shipbuilding and Engineering Ltd., would have expected to obtain a significant proportion of the business.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list in the Official Report all surveys of whatever size carried out by his Department amongst past and present submarine service personnel or their offspring to determine whether there has been any abnormal statistical evidence of medical disorders arising from exposure of Royal Navy nuclear submarine personnel to radiation; if he will publish the dates and the population census for such surveys; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Medical records of all naval personnel are analysed annually and any health trends are identified. There have been no special surveys carried out by the Department to determine whether there is any evidence of medical disorders arising from exposure of Royal Navy nuclear submarine personnel to radiation. A report on morbidity in submariners between 1969 and 1974 was produced in 1975: this was not specifically concerned with the effects of radiation. Also, as I said in reply to the hon. Member on 2 May at columns 61-62, a study into mortality and morbidity among submariners is currently in progress. This, too, is not specifically concerned with radiation, although it examines radiation along with all other factors which could affect the health of submariners.

In general, personnel serving in Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines receive lower radiation doses than members of the public, since they are shielded from much cosmic and terrestrial radiation. Those submarine personnel designated as radiation workers are included in the national register of such workers, unless they explicitly ask to be excluded.

Housing Stock

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the size and composition of the housing stock owned and rented by his Department in the Plymouth area and the number currently (a) unoccupied and (b) for sale; and if he will provide the corresponding figures for Torpoint, including the addresses of those that are to be sold.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence currently owns 2,914 houses and 637 flats in the Plymouth area. We have no rented properties there. As at 31 March 1989, the most recent date for which comprehensive figures are available, 1,190 properties were vacant and 501 of these were in the process of disposal. At Torpoint we own 102 houses and 64 flats; 52 were vacant on 31 March 1989 and nine of those were in the process of disposal. Many of the vacant properties are undergoing modernisation or major maintenance, some are already allocated to service families who will be moving in shortly and others are being prepared for disposal. I shall write to my hon. Friend about the properties to be sold at Torpoint.

Submarines (Medical Records)

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now agree to release medical records to past submariners when these are asked for.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the policy of the Department to release medical records. Two exceptions to this are the release of copies of relevant clinical notes to a qualified medical practioner for the purposes of continued treatment, and the release of copies of relevant notes to a medically qualified adviser for use in legal proceedings. They are not released to the person to whom they refer. This accords with the policy of the NHS for the handling of civilian records. Radiation dose records are, however, kept for those submariners designated as radiation workers, and are maintained separately from the medical records. These dose records are released to the individual concerned on request, and are forwarded to him as a matter of course when he leaves the service, in accordance with the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985.

DIDO Reactor, Harwell

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what safety experiments have been conducted, using the DIDO reactor at Harwell by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 5 May 1989]: UKAEA Harwell undertakes work for the Royal Navy on a commercial basis. Tests of materials performance relevant to the design and safety of the naval reactor systems have been conducted in the DIDO reactor.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers (Accommodation)

14. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prison officers now reside in prison accommodation.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: About 20 per cent.

Juvenile Offenders

15. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on recent developments in dealing with juvenile offenders.

Mr. John Patten: Recorded juvenile crime is falling. More juveniles are being cautioned rather than prosecuted and more being dealt with under an increasing range of demanding and constructive community-based measures. Custody remains available to deal with the most serious juvenile offenders. The Government are considering how to improve the arrangements for the remand of alleged juvenile offenders.

Football Grounds (Safety)

16. Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the chairmen of London football clubs to discuss football ground safety in London.

23. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the chairmen of London football clubs he has met officially in the last six months.

Mr. Hurd: I have had no such meetings. My hon. Friend the Minister for Sport meets the chairmen of league football clubs, including London clubs, from time to time, as well as representatives from the Football League and the Football Association.

Police Initial Recruitment Test

17. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received any representations regarding the current police initial recruitment test.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received representations from the Commission for Racial Equality about the validity and possible culture bias of the test, which the Commission suggests should be more closely related to the needs of the job. Although there is no evidence that the test works to the detriment of applicants from the ethnic minorities, the Police advisory board is considering the case for a new test.

Violence

18. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to tackle increasing violence in non-metropolitan areas.

Mr. John Patten: We have strengthened the police; tightened the law on under-age drinking and increased the penalties available to the courts; reminded the police and courts of their powers to deal with outbreaks of disorder; encouraged the swift hearing of cases of this kind; and made it an offence to carry a knife in a public place without good reasons. My right hon. Friend has also approved pilot projects in seven areas to test the effectiveness of byelaws making it an offence to drink alcohol in designated public places. The ministerial group on alcohol misuse will take action to follow up certain recommendations contained in a recently published Home Office research study on drinking and disorder.

38. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to reduce drink-related violence in South Yorkshire.

Mr. John Patten: We have strengthened the law on sales of alcohol to under-age drinkers and increased the penalties available to the courts. We have reminded the police and courts of their powers for dealing with outbreaks of disorder and infringements of the licensing laws, and asked them to arrange for swift prosecutions and court hearings after outbreaks of hooliganism and violence. In February the Government issued a circular giving advice about local action to tackle all forms of alcohol misuse. Initiatives at national level are being taken forward by the ministerial group on alcohol misuse. Meetings with representatives of the drinks and fast food industries are planned to discuss recommendations contained in a newly published Home Office research study on drinking and disorder.

Young People (Arrests)

21. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have been made of young people in the London area for each of the last six months for which figures are available, under section 3 of the Vagrancy Act 1824; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information is not available.

Metropolitan Police (Freemasonry)

22. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has raised with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis the influence of freemasonry in the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend discussed the matter at length with the Commissioner. There is no evidence that freemasonry has influenced Metropolitan police officers either in the execution of their duties or in the internal management of the force.

Police Recruitment

25. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to help encourage recruitment into the police force in the light of the growing shortage of young people coming on to the employment market.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A working party has been set up by the Police advisory board to examine the recruitment problems arising from the reduction in numbers of school leavers and to make recommendations for future recruiting strategy. I hope that the working party's recommendations will be ready for consideration at the board's next meeting in the autumn.

Charity Commission

26. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the responsibilities of the Charity Commission.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend hopes shortly to publish a White Paper setting out the Government's proposals to implement the Woodfield report which recommended a number of changes in the responsibilities.

Shops (Theft)

27. Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to reduce theft from shops.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking against theft from shops.

Mr. John Patten: The prevention of theft from shops is primarily a matter for the retailers themselves. We support the retailers in a range of ways; through the advice on preventive measures contained in the 1986 report of the Home Office standing conference on crime prevention working group on shop theft, our crime prevention handbook "Practical Ways to Crack Crime" and crime prevention unit research papers, and in meetings with retailers and their representative organisations. It is encouraging that the number of offences of theft from shops fell by 12 per cent. in 1988 and that the number of offences has fallen by almost a quarter since 1985.

Police Efficiency

28. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress is being made in implementing the recommendations of the Audit Commission on police efficiency.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following its special study on the police, the Audit Commission has produced detailed audit guidance for district auditors, for use in the value for money audits which they are conducting in all provincial police forces. The police forces are co-operating fully with the district audit service in these inquiries. Chief officers of police and the police authorities are primarily responsible for implementing promptly the improvements in efficiency and effectiveness which are identified. This is valuable work which has the full support of the Home Office and Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary.

Hillsborough Disaster

31. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the estimated costs of the Hillsborough police inquiry and the means of funding the West Midlands police responsible for that inquiry.

Mr Douglas Hogg: It is not clear at this stage what the total additional costs of the Hillsborough police inquiry will be. With regard to the means of funding the West Midlands police I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Mr. Beaumont-Dark) on 28 April at column 702.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the West Midlands police authority will be fully reimbursed for the costs of the West Midlands police inquiry in support of the judicial review into the Hillsborough stadium tragedy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham Selly Oak, (Mr. Beaumont-Dark) on 28 April at column 702.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost to public funds of the police inquiry into the Hillsborough football disaster; and if the costs will be met by his Department.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is not clear at this stage what the total additional costs of the police inquiry into the Hillsborough football disaster will be. With regard to the means of reimbursing the West Midlands police I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Mr. Beaumont-Dark) on 28 April at column 702.

Parking (London)

32. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what further measures he plans to provide for the enforcement of parking and waiting restrictions on through routes into London.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The enforcement of parking and waiting restrictions has been reviewed by a working party under Home Office chairmanship. The working party has recently submitted its report, which we will consider carefully.

Prison Service

33. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to increase the efficiency of the prison service.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Fresh start continues to improve the efficiency of the prison service. The service is on course to achieve the initial implementation efficiencies by the end of 1989-90. Under the framework agreement, half of the hours lost in the progressive reduction in prison officers' working week to 39 hours on 1 April 1992 are being made up by efficiency improvements. A management services group supports prison service managers in achieving best value for money and a programme of efficiency reviews is undertaken. Additional initiatives, including examination of the scope for civilianisation, are also being pursued.

My right hon. Friend announced on 3 February at column 420, in response to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry), a review of the organisation of the service above the level of individual establishments which is charged with identifying by the end of July the scope for further improvements in effectiveness and value for money.

Police Forces

34. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he proposes to increase co-operation between police forces without altering the current structure.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to improve the organisation and structure of the police forces in the north-west region of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has recently made clear that we shall maintain the present structure of the police service, with responsibility shared under the 1964 Police Act between the chief constable, the police authority and the Home Secretary, while seeking to intensify co-operation within it.

There is provision in the 1964 Act for collaboration and aid between forces. Regional crime squads deal with serious criminal offences, including drugs, crossing force or regional boundaries. My right hon. Friend also has powers to provide common services. Examples include the national drugs intelligence unit, the Police staff college and district training centres, the crime prevention centre, and the police national computer.

Gulf (Secretary of State's Visit)

35. Mr. Nelson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his recent visit to the Gulf.

Mr. Hurd: I visited Bahrain, Oman, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia between 27 March and 3 April and had a number of useful meetings with senior members of the Governments of those countries. I discussed the scope for intensifying the level of co-operation with this country in a number of fields, including terrorism, drugs, organised crime and police training. In Saudi Arabia, I signed a memorandum of understanding with the Government to facilitate closer co-operation on these issues.

Identity Cards

37. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning identity cards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: In addition to the advice of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the recommendations of the Home Affairs Committee, my right hon. Friend has received this year some 130 letters on the subject of a national identity card from hon. Members and from the general public.

Cocaine (Prisons)

39. Mr. MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to strengthen international co-operation against the trafficking and use of cocaine in prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Department plays a full part in international co-operation against cocaine trafficking in general and there is not considered to be a need for separate international steps relating specifically to its misuse or trafficking within prisons.

Ports (Policing)

41. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the cost of policing ports in England and Wales.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None so far this year to my right hon. Friend, but there are continuing discussions on the policing of ports between the Home Office and the forces and police authorities concerned.

Prison Service

42. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the planned total for Government spending on the prison service in 1989-90; and what was the figure in 1978-79.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The planned total for Government expenditure on the prison service (England and Wales) in 1989-90 is £1,140,100,000. Expenditure in 1978-79 was £285,300,000.

Neighbourhood Watch

43. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the number of neighbourhood watch schemes now operating in the Bury area; and what was the figure five years ago.

Mr. John Patten: At the end of March 1989 there were 336 neighbourhood watch schemes in the Bury metropolitan district division of the Greater Manchester police force area. Five years ago there were none.

Television Licence Fee

46. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received seeking the abolition of the television licence fee for pensioners.

Mr. Renton: Since 1 January 1989, four hon. Members and one member of the public have written seeking free TV licences for pensioners.

Drug Addicts

47. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the proportions of total notified drug addicts aged under 21 in 1988; and what was the figure in 1987.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Information on drug addicts to the Home Office in 1987 and 1988 is given in "Statistics of drug addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988" (Home Office Statistical Bulletin issue 13/89), a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Table 8b shows that the proportion of addicts aged under 21 was 14 per cent. in 1987 and 12 per cent. in 1988.

Parking

48. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached any conclusions in respect of the report on parking enforcement powers.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No conclusions have yet been reached.

Police Co-operation (Europe)

52. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure greater co-operation between the United Kingdom police and the police forces of European Economic Community partners.

50. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to improve co-operation against crime amongst the member countries of the European Community.

57. Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Deparment what steps he is taking to improve co-operation against crime amongst the member countries of the European Community.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member and my hon. Friends to the reply that I gave to questions from my hon. Friends the Members for Dover (Mr. Shaw) and for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 2 February 1989 at column 384.

Young People (Alternatives to Custody)

53. Mr. Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what initiatives he is currently supporting to develop alternatives to custody for young people.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office action plan on tackling offending encourages probation services to develop local action plans for dealing with more young adult offenders in the community. Intensive probation programmes mainly for young adult offenders at risk of custody are under discussion in 10 probation areas. Grants totalling about £1·5 million over three years have been made available to encourage voluntary sector participation in work with 17 to 20-year-old offenders in the community.

Passports

54. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average number of working days currently taken by the London passport office to process an application for the issue or renewal of a passport; and what the figure was a year ago.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier to questions from my hon. Friends the Members for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) and for Fylde (Mr. Jack).

Female Prisoners (Children)

55. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women currently detained in Her Majesty's prisons have had children removed into care as a result of their imprisonment.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

West Midlands Police

56. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, if he will bring forward proposals to further increase the establishment of the West Midlands police.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The West Midlands police authority has applied for an increase of 350 police posts in the force establishment in 1990-91. This will be considered, together with applications from other authorities, with advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. The aim is to announce increases towards the end of 1989.

My right hon. Friend has recently approved, as a permanent establishment increase, 14 police posts previously held supernumerary to establishment for duties at Birmingham airport. The costs are met by the airport authorities.

Illegal Drugs

58. Mr. Curry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to strengthen international co-operation against trade in illegal drugs.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office continues to play an active role in the work of the United Nations, the Council of Europe and the European Community as it concerns drugs. In London next week my right hon. Friend and I will be chairing a meeting of Ministers of the Council of Europe's drug co-operation group (the Pompidou group) to consider some of the most urgent drugs problems facing European countries. We shall concentrate particularly on countering the threat posed by cocaine and "crack", confiscation of proceeds derived from illicit trafficking and the problem of AIDS and drug misuse. We hope that the meeting will give renewed political impetus to the valuable work being undertaken by the group and its 19 member states.

Domestic Violence

59. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to take any action aimed at reducing domestic violence following the publication of his research study.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave earlier to a question from the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman).

Prisoners (Police Cells)

61. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were held in police cells at the most recent available date.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 10 May 135 prisoners were held in police cells in England and Wales.

Private Security Industry

62. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning regulation of the private security industry.

Mr. John Patten: In addition to correspondence on the subject from hon. Members, we have received representations from and on behalf of the International Professional Security Association, the Institute of Professional Investigators, the Electrical Contractors Association, "Ex Police in Industry and Commerce", the Retail Consortium, the British Retailers Association, the Multiple Shoe Retailers Association and the Drapers Chamber of Trade. We shall also be considering the views of the working group which has been set up to look at the self-regulation of the industry.

65. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the public and private housing estates which are being patrolled by private security companies.

Mr. John Patten: No central record is kept of housing estates which are patrolled by private security companies.

Immigration Detention Centre

67. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reconsider the decision to relocate the immigration detention centre to Gosport.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The proposal is still under consideration. A decision will be announced shortly.

Parental Responsibility

68. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that local authorities who stand in loco parentis are obliged to pay court fines imposed upon children in their care.

Mr. John Patten: We have no plans to introduce such a requirement at present.

Right to Silence

69. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the right to silence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to his question of 13 April at column 709.

Police Establishments (Warwickshire)

70. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to visit Warwickshire to discuss police establishments.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. Hon. Friends whose constituencies lie within the Warwickshire constabulary force area discussed the establishment of the force with my right hon. Friend on 6 March.

Prison Baby Units

71. Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children, and of what age, are currently in each of the baby units in prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: On 28 April 1989, 24 babies were in the prison mother and baby units at Askham Grange, Holloway and Styal. The ages of the babies were:

	Number of babies
Aged under one month	3
Aged 1-2 months	4
Aged 2-3 months	2
Aged 3-4 months	4
Aged 4-5 months	1
Aged 6-7 months	3
Aged 7-8 months	2
Aged 9-10 months	4
Aged 17-18 months	1

Anti-litter Campaigns (Young Offenders)

72. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for directing young offenders into anti-litter campaigns.

Mr. John Patten Community service schemes for convicted offenders must provide some work placements whose purpose is to improve the appearance and amenities of a neighbourhood. Home Office Circular 18/1989 about national standards for community service orders gives as examples for this work: cleaning off graffiti in public places; clearing litter from paths, pedestrian precincts and bus shelters; clearing waste ground; erecting litter bins. Community service orders are available for offenders aged 16 and over.

AIDS

75. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to prevent the spread of HIV infection in prisons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Macclesfield (Mr. Winterton) on 13 April 1989 at column 710.

Business Initiative

76. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many ethnic minority business initiative projects currently receive Home Office funding; where they are located; what is the extent of that funding; and whether it represents an increase over 1988 funding levels.

Mr John Patten The Home Office ethnic minority business initiative funds 10 projects. They are located in Birmingham, Bristol, Brent, Brixton, Deptford, Ealing, Finsbury Park, Hackney, Tower Hamlets and Wandsworth. Funding for the 1988-89 financial year totalled £196,252, which represented a 48 per cent. increase on funding for the 1987-8 financial year.

Private Police Forces

77 Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning the use of the Harbours, Docks and Piers Clauses Act 1847 in connection with the setting up of private police forces.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have received representations from four right hon. and hon. Members (one on behalf of one of his constituents), one noble lord and the chairman of the Police Federation for England and Wales.

Nottinghamshire Chamber of Commerce

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what response he has made to representations on the Broadcasting White Paper dated 20 April from the Nottinghamshire chamber of commerce.

Mr. Renton: This letter was acknowledged on 4 May and will be taken into account along with over 3,000 other responses to the broadcasting White Paper. We want to look carefully in the round at all the representations we have received.

Scene of Crime Officers

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to implement the recommendation for the appointment within each police force of 75 scene of crime officers per 100,000 notifiable offences.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: It is for chief officers to decide, in the light of the particular circumstances of their forces, how many scene of crime officers to employ. In making this decision, they will no doubt take fully into account the recommendations of the Audit Commission that each force should employ 75 scene of crime officers per 100,000 notifiable offences.

Fingerprinting

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to improve the quality control exercised by police forces in collecting fingerprints.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to his question on 13 April 1989 at column 708.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recommendations have been made concerning the police fingerprint service by the advisory group established by the Home Office and the Association of Chief Police Officers in February 1988; and when he expects to receive the comments of the Association of Chief Police Officers on these recommendations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The group has so far made recommendations on the introduction of best practice for the collection and maintenance of fingerprint records, guidelines for searching regional and national fingerprint collections and revised training for fingerprint officers to improve the quality of fingerprint marks obtained.

We expect to receive the comments of the Association of Chief Police Officers on these recommendations in the autumn.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in evaluating an automatic fingerprint recognition system for use by the police fingerprint service.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have recently completed an evaluation of the effectiveness of commercially available automatic fingerprint recognition systems and are considering the case for providing such a system on a national basis.

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to ensure that, within police forces, force general orders reflect the powers granted by the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 to obtain fingerprints.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No specific steps are considered necessary. The police are bound by the provisions of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 and the codes of practice made under the Act, and it is up to individual chief officers to ensure that their force orders accurately reflect these provisions.

Morphine Derivatives

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to relax controls on the import of morphine derivatives to provide greater competition in the United Kingdom market.

Mr. Hurd: The Monopolies and Mergers Commission, in its report on the supply of opium derivatives in the United Kingdom, recommended that, in order to increase competition in the United Kingdom market, I should work towards a relaxation of the restrictions which I now maintain on the importation of these products. The restrictions, which are supported by the International Narcotics Control Board, are designed to help limit the volume of international trade in these products, thereby minimising the risks of diversion to the illicit market. Similar restrictions are maintained by a number of other countries, including several of our European Community partners. In the light of the MMC report, I am discussing with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how increased competition may be provided in this field consistent with the need for strict control of supply.

Stop and Search

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made with the review of the stop-and-search provisions of the PACE codes of practice; when he expects to be able to make known to Parliament any proposals for change; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We undertook to keep the operation of the codes under review when they were debated in 1985. Last year we initiated a consultative exercise on all the codes and we are currently considering the many responses received. The responses on the stop and search provisions raise some difficult issues which will need careful thought. We hope to be able to circulate revised draft codes for public consultation later this year and then to lay these before both Houses, in accordance with the provisions of section 67 of PACE.

Prisons (Car Travel)

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current car mileage allowance paid to (a) prison departmental staff, (b) police officers, (c) prison local review committee members, (d) prison visitors and (e) members of boards of visitors whilst travelling on official business in their own cars.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The relevant current car mileage allowances are as follows:

Prison Departmental Staff, LRC Independent Members and Prison Visitors.

Pensioners (TV Licences)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much it would cost, under the new rates, to provide a colour television licence free of charge to all pensioner households.

Mr. Renton: The cost under the new rates of providing a colour television licence free of charge to all pensioner households would be about £400 million a year in terms of licence revenue forgone.

War Crimes

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects to receive the report concerning the alleged war crimes committed by those who have since become British citizens; and if he intends to make a statement in the House when he has considered the report.

Mr. Hurd: I now understand that the inquiry expects to submit its report to me in June. I shall consider the question of a statement to the House when I have had an opportunity to study the report.

Football Stadiums

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those Football League grounds in England and Wales that were given a ground safety certificate only after the erection of perimeter fencing around standing enclosures or terracing.

Mr John Patten: This information is not held centrally. Local authorities are under a duty to issue safety certificates in respect of grounds designated by the Secretary of State under the Safety of Sports Act 1975. The terms and conditions of a safety certificate are what the local authority, after consultation with the police and either the fire authority or building authority, consider necessary or expedient to secure reasonable safety at the particular ground. These may include a requirement as to pitch perimeter fencing.

Electoral Law

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what actions his Department undertakes to ensure that returning officers and their staff are aware of the full provision of electoral law.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Home Office issues periodic guidance on electoral law to returning officers and acting returning officers in England and Wales. A comprehensive memorandum of guidance for acting returning officers is also sent to each ARO when a parliamentary general election or by-election is imminent, and attention is drawn to any recent changes.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the reviews in the current work load of the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Parliamentary Boundary Commission is at present reviewing the constituencies of Buckingham and Milton Keynes.

Game

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what animal species in the United Kingdom are classed as game.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Under the Night Poaching Act 1828, hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse (including capercaillie and ptarmigan in Scotland), heath or moor game (i.e. red grouse), black game (i.e. black grouse) and bustards are counted as game. The Poaching Prevention Act 1862 includes, in addition, rabbits, snipe and woodcock and the eggs of pheasants, partridges, black and moor game. Other legislation affords close season protection to deer, other birds including ducks and geese, and certain fishes.

Prisoners (Suicides)

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he proposes any changes to prison service procedures for the prevention of inmate suicides.

Mr. Hurd: We have today issued a new circular instruction (CI 20/1989) to prison governors, which restates and reinforces my Department's suicide prevention strategy. The new instruction re-emphasises the importance we attach to staff support for suicidal inmates, and the main procedural change it makes is to reduce unnecessary documentation when inmates are first received in custody, so that the time saved can be used for fuller assessment of suicide risk at this crucial stage. The establishment of a suicide prevention management group at all establishments will also be mandatory. A copy of the new circular instruction is being placed in the Library.

Crime

19. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime in Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our strategy for crime reduction applies to all parts of England and Wales. Police manpower in Essex is being increased this year, and we are supporting it and the other south-east forces in the "Secured by Design" project, which will be launched next month. The project will encourage the construction industry to incorporate security measures as standard in new homes. Recorded crime in Essex fell by 4 per cent. in 1988.

20. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime in Northamptonshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We have a crime reduction strategy which applies to all parts of England and Wales. Recorded crime fell by 5 per cent. in 1988 in Northamptonshire, and the police strength will be further augmented this year, bringing the total authorised establishment to 1,121.

73. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our strategy for crime reduction applies to all parts of England and Wales. Police manpower and resources have been substantially increased, Crime Concern was launched with Government support in May 1988 to stimulate, support and develop local crime prevention activity and the largest ever national crime prevention publicity campaign was launched last year.

Total crime in the Metropolitan police district and City of London fell by 2·5 per cent. in 1988. My right hon. Friend approved a further 300 police posts for the Metropolitan police from 1 April bringing the authorised establishement up to 28,415. The City of London's establishment remains at 798. The Government encourage the growth and development of neighbourhood watch schemes and crime prevention panels. There are now 9,493 watch schemes covering approximately 952,500 households throughout London, together with 30 panels and six junior panels. Three very active crime prevention associations operate in the City. Both forces are involved in the Home Office-supported "Secured by Design" project which aims to encourage house builders, planners and developers to incorporate security measures as standard in new homes; the scheme will be launched on 7 June. Lewisham and Tower Hamlets are two of the areas in our safer cities programme.

74. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the action he has taken to combat the increase in rural crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Many of our policies on crime prevention are applicable to rural areas. We have increased police manpower to an unprecedented extent in the provinces since 1979. We have reminded the police and courts of the powers available to deal with outbreaks of disorder and issued guidance to the courts about arranging speedy court hearings after sudden outbreaks of disorder. We have encouraged the creation of local farm watch and rural watch schemes to increase community co-operation in preventing crime.

63. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to tackle violent crime in urban areas.

Mr. John Patten: We have strengthened the police and made it an offence to carry a knife in a public place without good reason. We have raised the maximum penalty for some of the most serious offences of violence to life imprisonment, and we have introduced a new right of appeal for the prosecution against an over-lenient sentence. We have established the safer cities programme to help reduce crime and fear of crime in inner-city areas; 12 projects are under way.

64. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the current trend of crime figures in Leicestershire.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Leicestershire, North-West (Mr. Ashby) on 13 April at column 713.

60. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he last met the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to discuss ways of combating the increased incidence of violent crime within the context of a general decline in crime.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The problem of violent crime is a matter which is frequently discussed at my right hon. Friend's regular meetings with the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. My right hon. Friend looked at the subject in considerable detail when he met the Commissioner at the beginning of this year to discuss the 1989 strategy statement for the Metropolitan police.

49. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what steps his Department is taking against crime in Cambridgeshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our strategy for crime reduction applies to all parts of England and Wales. Police manpower and resources have been substantially increased, "Crime Concern" was launched with Government support in May 1988 to stimulate, support and develop local crime prevention activity and the largest ever national crime prevention publicity campaign was launched last year.

Total recorded crime in Cambridgeshire fell by 1 per cent. in 1988. My right hon. Friend approved a further 18 police posts for the force from 1 April bringing the authorised establishment up to 1,198. The Home Office encourages the growth and development of neighbourhood watch schemes and crime prevention panels. There are now 275 watch schemes covering approximately 8,250 households throughout Cambridgeshire together with four panels and three junior panels.

44. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to increase resources available to local authorities for crime prevention activities.

Mr. John Patten: The Home Office's safer cities programme is making new resources available to local authorities as well as to other statutory bodies, voluntary groups and business and commerce. Operating through a network of local crime prevention projects, the programme has Home Office funds for staff, running costs and grant aid. This year's total budget is £4·2 million and includes grant support for each area of some £·25 million a year, for which local authorities as well as other bodies may apply. The hon. Member will know that resources for crime prevention are also available through several Department of the Environment programmes.

45. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime; and if he will make a statement.

51. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new steps his Department is taking to combat crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: We are continuing to strengthen the police, to ensure that the courts have adequate maximum penalties at their disposal, to increase the number of available prison places, and to encourage interest in crime prevention through our handbook "Practical Ways to Crack Crime", through encouragement of neighbourhood watch schemes and through such initiatives as the safer cities programme.

40. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of the ministerial group on crime prevention.

66. Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the work of the ministerial group on crime prevention.

Mr. John Patten: The ministerial group meets under my chairmanship about every two months in order to supervise the Government's general crime prevention strategy. The Departments represented on the group are: Education and Science, Employment, Energy, Environment, Health, Social Security, Trade and Industry, Transport, Treasury, together with the Home Office, Northern Ireland Office and the Scottish and Welsh Offices.

This year our main effort will be directed to examining the costs of crime and what we know about the cost effectiveness of crime prevention measures.

36. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the latest crime figures for Basildon and the preceding four years.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 14 April at column 414.

29. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking against crime in Hampshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Our strategy for crime reduction applies to all parts of England and Wales. Police manpower and resources have been substantially increased, "Crime Concern" was launched with Government support in May 1988 to stimulate, support and develop local crime prevention activity and the largest ever national crime prevention publicity campaign was launched last year.

Total recorded crime fell in Humberside by 6 per cent. in 1988. My right hon. Friend approved a further 20 police posts for the force from 1 April bringing the authorised establishment up to 3,148. The Government encourage the growth and development of neighbourhood watch schemes and crime prevention panels. There are 580 watch schemes covering approximately 25,000 households throughout Hampshire together with three panels. The Hampshire constabulary is one of 10 south-east forces involved, with the Home Office support, in an ambitious scheme "Secured by Design" which aims to encourage house builders, planners and developers to incorporate security measures as standard in new homes; the scheme will be launched on 7 June. Rushmoor borough council is one of seven local authorities taking part in a trial byelaw scheme designed to prevent the consumption of alcohol in certain designated public places. The scheme will be closely monitored by local authorities and the Home Office.

30. Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to meet local authority representatives to discuss crime prevention.

Mr. John Patten: There is regular consultation between Home Office officials and local authority representatives on a wide range of issues including crime prevention. This will continue.

24. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department is taking to help prevent crime in Greater Manchester.

Mr. John Patten: Crime reduction forms part of a strategy which applies to all of England and Wales. There was an 8 per cent. reduction in recorded crime in Greater Manchester during 1988, and further police manpower increases have been agreed. Bolton was one of those participating in the Home Office "Five Towns" initiative designed to show that crime and the fear of crime could be reduced through the co-ordinated action of a variety of local agencies and members of the community. The Bolton project continues with the support of the Metropolitan borough council and a three-year urban programme grant from the Department of the Environment. Rochdale and Salford are to participate in the safer cities programme.

WALES

Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much has been spent by his Department on advertisements on commercial television in each of the last five years, listed by each television company.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Department's only spending on television advertising during this period was £20,000 on the Welsh element of the misuse of drugs campaign. Details of spending with individual television companies is commercially confidential.

Farm and Conservation Grant Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends the Welsh Office agricultural department to make available to farmers throughout Wales application forms for grants under the farm and conservation grant scheme.

Mr. Peter Walker: The appropriate forms are now available.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the figures for investment by the Welsh Development Agency since its inception.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 5 May 1989]: Capital investment on mainstream Welsh Development Agency programmes is as follows:

	£ million
1976-77	15
1977-78	26
1978-79	24
1979-80	22
1980-81	49
1981-82	48
1982-83	47
1983-84	44
1984-85	50
1985-86	43
1986-87	49
1987-88	71
1988-89	81

The figures do not include the special provision of about £120 million which was made available to the WDA to tackle the needs of Wales arising from the steel closures in the late 1970s and early 1980s. For details of this provision, I refer to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) on 18 January 1988 at column 612.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Soviet Union

Mr Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise as a matter of urgency in the current CSCE information forum the recent arrests of dissident publishers in the Soviet Union, and the terms of the new articles of the Soviet penal code published on 11 April.

Mrs. Chalker: The two Russians recently arrested for distributing material in Moscow were subsequently released.

We are deeply disappointed by the 8 April decree containing amendments to Soviet criminal legislation. We are making this clear to the Soviet authorities both in Moscow and at the London information forum. We hope that the new Supreme Soviet, when constituted, will have the opportunity to alter the decree radically, so as to bring it into line with Soviet public statements and their international commitments.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what policy initiatives he intends to take with regard to the 1990 fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty; how many preparatory committee meetings are expected to take place; and where such meetings are to be held.

Mrs. Chalker: There are three preparatory committees prior to the NPT review conference. The first took place in New York from 1 to 5 May. The second will be held from 11 to 18 September 1989, and the third from 23 April to 4 May 1990, both in Geneva. As a depositary power, we attach great importance to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, and shall be working actively for a constructive and successful review conference.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what United Kingdom representation was present at the first preparatory committee meeting of the fourth review conference of the 1990 nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference; and if he will make a statement on its outcome.

Mrs. Chalker: The United Kingdom delegation at the first preparatory committee, held in New York from 1 to 5 May, consisted of four officials and was led by an official from the science, energy and nuclear department in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The preparatory committee successfully resolved a number of administrative questions relating to the review conference.

TRANSPORT

Railways (Investment)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the volume of investment in railways in the United Kingdom, France and West Germany in 1987-88 and 1988-89; and what sum this investment represents per capita in each of these countries.

Mr. Portillo: My Department has no readily available information on railway investment in France and West

Germany. The figures for rail investment by British Rail, Northern Ireland Railways and London Regional Transport are as follows:

	1987-88 Cash	1988-89 Prices	1988-89
BR (£ million)	526	563	596
NIR (£ million)	5	5	4
LRT (£ million)	274	291	271
Total investment (£ million)	805	859	871
Investment per capita (£)	14·14	15·09	15·30

Notes:

1. Per capita figures for both years are based on the mid-1987 figure for United Kingdom population of 56,937,000.
2. 1988-89 figures are forecast outturn.
3. The BR figures include investment in freightliners, BRML and BREL but exclude the laying of continuous welded track, which BR do not classify as investment.

Airport (Essex)

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has been approached by any consortium seeking permission to build an airport on either Foulness Island or Maplin Sands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No. My right hon. Friend has seen only press reports suggesting airport development off the Essex coast.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his long-term policy for airports includes the building of a new international airport in Essex, or offshore from the Essex coast.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The 1985 White Paper "Airports Policy" (Cmnd. 9542) set out the strategy for airport development in the south east to meet demand to the mid-1990s. This strategy did not include a new airport off the Essex coast but foreshadowed a substantial role for Stansted airport. My right hon. Friend is currently awaiting formal advice from the Civil Aviation Authority on the adequacy of airport capacity to 2005.

A1

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce his conclusions on the inspector's report into the alterations to the A1 between Wetherby and Dishforth; and when work will commence on these improvements.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Secretaries of State for Transport and the Environment hope to announce their decision in the summer.

It is too early to give a reliable estimate of when works will commence. The date depends upon the time needed to complete the outstanding statutory procedures, which include publication of the compulsory purchase order.

Toll Motorways

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has made of toll motorways on the European continent; and what are the conclusions in relation to their feasibility in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Portillo: The Department keeps in touch with developments and experience in the operation of toll motorways in Europe. We are keen to encourage the private sector to come forward with proposals for privately funded roads. It will be up to promoters to consider the feasibility of such schemes, including any proposals for motorways. The Government will shortly issue a consultation paper on private finance for roads.

Package Holidays

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is prepared to take to secure passenger comfort and redress against protracted delays and inconvenience for those travelling on package holidays by air.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At a conference held by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last November to analyse air traffic congestion, airport authorities were asked to develop contingency plans to cope with delayed passengers. A number of important initiatives were proposed which were reported to a follow-up conference held by the Civil Aviation Authority in March. These included improved communications and passenger information within airports, additional accommodation and facilities, and the provision of entertainment. Plans are also being developed to provide passengers with advance information about delayed flights.

Whether or not holidaymakers who suffer protracted delays are entitled to redress will depend on the terms of their contract with the tour operator and on any scales of compensation the tour operator may publish. It would ultimately be for the civil courts to resolve any disputed claim for compensation in respect of delays in the light of all the circumstances. It is possible for holidaymakers to take out insurance against protracted delays in certain circumstances.

Birmingham Relief Road

Mr. Heddle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Mid-Staffordshire of 3 November, Official Report, column 765, if he has yet received his inspector's report on the public inquiry held in May 1988 on his Department's proposals for the Birmingham northern relief road; and if he is yet able to make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Yes. It arrived last month and is being considered.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

County Courts (Jurisdiction)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General what changes he proposes in the use of rateable values as indications of jurisdiction in county court cases.

The Attorney-General: As part of the Government's programme for implementation of the civil justice review, announced on 6 April, the upper financial limit of the county courts' jurisdiction in actions for the recovery of land will be removed. Arrangements will be made for any transitional period there might be between the abolition of the domestic rating system and that of the county court limit, if this proves necessary.

In some cases, however, it will still be necessary for the substance of a claim to be quantified, and various options are being considered by the Lord Chancellor.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Attorney-General if he will set up a study of the operation of the civil procedures related to domestic violence.

The Attorney-General: No. The Law Commission is carrying out a review of the courts' civil jurisdiction relating to domestic violence, other molestation and rights of occupation of the home. This review will examine both important areas of procedure and the remedies available. The commission hopes to issue a discussion paper later this year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Institute for Japanese-European Technology Studies

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contribution has been made to the Institute for Japanese-European Technology Studies; and over what period contributions will continue to be made.

Mr. Forth: Neither the Department of Trade and Industry nor the Department of Education and Science has given specific financial support to the Institute for Japanese-European Technology Studies, but my Department welcomes this initiative and is represented on the institute's external advisory committee.

Inward Investment

Mr. Greg Knight: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the current level of inward investment in the United Kingdom; and what was the comparable figure for 1978.

Mr. Alan Clark: The latest available information on the level of inward investment in the United Kingdom is given in table 9.1 of "The United Kingdom Balance of Payments —1988" (the CSO pink book). A copy of this publication is available in the Library.

Advertising

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much has been spent by his Department on advertisements on commercial television in each of the last five years, listed by each television company.

Mr. Forth: I am advised by the Central Office of Information, through which the Department buys such advertising, that the detailed information requested is commercially confidental. The Department's total expenditure on television advertising in the last five years was as follows:

1984-85	32,000
1985-86	nil
1986-87	nil
1987-88	4·6 million
1988-89	[1]13·2 million

[1] Provisional.

Iraq

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list, in real terms, the size of United Kingdom exports to Iraq for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Alan Clark: The value of exports to Iraq for each of the last 10 years is given in the following table. The information is not available in real terms.

United Kingdom exports to Iraq 1979-88

Value in £ millions

Year	Value
1979	201·2
1980	322·1
1981	623·9
1982	873·7
1983	399·9
1984	343·1
1985	444·7
1986	443·8
1987	271·7
1988	412·1

Overseas Trade Statistics.
Note:
1988 figures are provisional.

British Shipbuilders

Mr. Ward: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he has received the annual report and accounts of British Shipbuilders for 1987-88.

Mr. Newton: In accordance with sections 17(9) and 18(6) of the Aircraft and Shipbuilding Industries Act 1977, I am today laying before each House copies of British Shipbuilders' annual report and accounts for 1987-88.

British Overseas Trade Board

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what criteria govern how the members of the British Overseas Trade Board, listed in the 1987-88 report from pages 32 to 38, treat their commercial interests when taking decisions as members of the British Overseas Trade Board; and whether a register of members interests is compiled and a financial declaration made where relevant.

Mr. Alan Clark: [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The British Overseas Trade Board advises on overseas trade and the official export promotion programme. The board itself does not take decisions on the provision of services or other forms of assistance to individual businesses and conflicts of interest do not therefore arise. Of the bodies listed in pages 32-38 of the annual report, only the Overseas Project Board considers matters involving official assistance to individual businesses, and members are specifically excluded from advising on cases in which they have an interest. A full register of members' directorships and financial interests is maintained by the Department.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensioners

Mr. McCrindle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the percentage of total pensioners' income in 1988 represented by the state retirement pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. The 1986 family expenditure survey shows that 59 per cent. of pensioners' average gross income was derived from all social security benefits.

HEALTH

NHS Reform

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish (a) details of the monitoring he intends to instigate on his reform programmes for the National Health Service, (b) which organisations will be carrying out which pieces of monitoring and (c) the criteria used for measuring success.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Health authorities will be expected to monitor progress on the review locally, and the NHS management executive will monitor progress over the country as a whole. The test of success will be the extent to which reforms help the NHS to provide better quality services for patients.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the extent to which places in refuges for victims of domestic violence are below the level of one family place, namely for a woman and her children, per 10,000 of population.

Mr. Mellor: We do not have any central records of the numbers of family places available in refuges. However, the national voluntary organisation, Women's Aid Federation (England), estimates that there are approximately 1,755 family places in women's refuges in the United Kingdom.

This represents one family place per 25,844 of the population aged 16 and over.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental hospitals have been closed in the past year.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply 22 March 1989 c. 671]: The information requested is now available and is in the table. It comprises the mental illness hospitals/units which we are aware were approved for total closure in 1988.

Hospital	District
Clifton	York
High Wick	Southern Derbyshire
Whitecroft	Isle of Wight
Hungerford	West Berkshire
Crossley	Halton

ENVIRONMENT

Water Industry (Employment)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for (a) the Yorkshire water authority and (b) the Severn Trent water authority, how many people were employed in the water industry in 1979, 1985 and each subsequent year to date.

Mr. Moynihan: The information is published in "Waterfacts 1988," a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Figures for 1989 are not yet available.

Stack Emission Tests

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the results of stack emission tests carried out by HMIP on industrial plants.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The results of tests carried out by HMIP on emissions to the atmosphere are not generally published because many of them are of an investigative nature rather than routine tests for compliance with emission limit values. Test results are often summarised for individual premises in the district annual reports that are made available locally.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will discuss with local authorities ways of increasing the number of refuges for the victims of domestic violence and of providing them with more adequate and secure funding.

Mr. Trippier: It is for individual authorities to assess the local need for refuges and to make, or encourage others to make, appropriate provision. We give support to refuges through the urban programme and housing investment programmes, and the Housing Corporation also funds refuges provided by housing associations.

Peak District National Park

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of whether the Peak District national park can remain in satisfactory condition within the financial provision currently available; and what further moneys will be made available in the current and succeeding financial years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In determining the amount of national parks supplementary grant in respect of each national park authority's expenditure, my right hon. Friend takes account of the authorities' detailed functional strategies and the recommendations of the Country-side Commission. NPSG for the Peak District national park for 1989-90 is £2,461,900, an increase of 10·3 per cent. over 1988-89 and 25 per cent. higher in real terms than the park's settlement in 1979. I cannot anticipate future years' settlements.

Nuclear Plants (Sites)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications of the European Court decision of September 1988 over implementation of the Euratom treaty article 37 in regard to the Electricité de France nuclear plant at Cattenom for future United Kingdom nuclear plant siting.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no implications for the United Kingdom.

Land Register

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for South Hams of 26 April, Official Report, column 937, if he will breakdown the 37,805 acres by ownership and region and if he will give details in each case as to how the land came to be placed on the register.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 11 May 1989]: I have placed tables in the Library giving a breakdown by owner and region of land added to the register in 1984-88. There are separate tables for land subsequently removed from the register before the end for 1988 and for land still on the register at the end of 1988.

The land was entered on the register because information supplied by the owners indicated that it satisfied the conditions set out in section 95(2) of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980.

NORTHERN IRELAND

School Expenditure

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing the latest figure for expenditure per pupil on (a) books and (b) equipment and comparable figures for each year since 1978-79 in (i) primary schools, (ii) secondary schools and (iii) special schools in cash and real terms using an index of 100 for 1978-79.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Books and equipment (separate figures for books and equipment not available)

Year	Primary schools			Secondary schools			Special schools
	Cash £	Real terms £	Index	Cash £	Real terms £	Index	Cash £	Real terms £	Index

Queen's University

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the total number of applications for post-graduate certificate of education courses received by Queens' university, Belfast for courses commencing 1986, 1987 and 1988 were for physics, chemistry and mathematics; and what level of qualifications they had already obtained.

Dr. Mawhinney: Numbers of applications were as follows:

	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89
Physics	38	40	34
Chemistry	50	59	62
Mathematics	56	63	59

Information about the level of qualifications of applicants is not available.

Youth Training Programme

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the 1989-90 financial allocations to Northern Ireland's education and library boards for YTP schemes; and how much of this has been allocated by each board for special needs provision.

Dr. Mawhinney: The board's estimates of YTP expenditure for 1989-90 have only recently been received by the Department of Education and are now under consideration. I hope to be able to advise the hon. Gentleman of the allocations approved and the amounts included for special needs provision later this month.

PRIME MINISTER

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Prime Minister if she will co-ordinate ministerial action to ensure that victims of domestic violence receive full information regarding the legal, counselling and housing help that is available for them.

The Prime Minister: Information about the help available to victims of domestic violence is best provided locally. Some statutory and voluntary organisations already issue leaflets. The ministerial group on women's issues is co-ordinating Government action and will consider outstanding needs when it meets on 15 June to discuss the recently published Home Office research on this subject.

British Intelligence (History)

Mr. Wheeler: To ask the Prime Minister when publication of the official history of British intelligence in the second world war will be completed.

The Prime Minister: Volumes I, II and III of the official history of British intelligence in the second world war by Professor Sir Harry Hinsley and others have been published; part 2 of volume III was published in February 1988. Volume IV (security and counter-intelligence) by Sir Harry Hinsley and Mr. C. A. G. Simkins and Volume V (strategic deception) by Professor Sir Michael Howard are being prepared for publication towards the end of this year or early next year.

Efficiency Unit (Scrutiny)

Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister what topics have been covered in the efficiency unit's scrutiny programme in the last financial year.

The Prime Minister: The 1988-89 programme of scrutinies carried out in association with the efficiency adviser and the efficiency unit are:

Cabinet Office
- Government economic statistics

Her Majesty's Customs and Excise
- Administration of the integrated tariff
- Running cost implications of information technology

British Council
- Inward visits

Ministry of Defence
- MOD support for military associated functions at schools and universities
- Defence accommodation stores

Department of Employment
- Inspection rating system (HSE)
- Fraud investigation (with DSS)

Department of the Environment
- Control of administrative expenditure in non-Departmental public bodies

Home Office
- Grants made under Section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966
- Magistrates' courts

Inland Revenue
- Schedule D procedures
- Internal post

Northern Ireland Office
- Land Registry

Overseas Development Administration
- Administration of aid-tying rules (with DTI)

Scottish Office
- Prison buildings

Department of Social Security
- Fraud investigation (with DE)
- (Under Franchise Programme) Overseas branch (Newcastle central office)

Department of Trade and Industry
- Administration of aid-tying rules (with ODA)
- DTI economic statistics

Further topics for scrutinies are being discussed with Departments.

A number of other scrutinies are also being conducted according to full scrutiny disciplines and with guidance from the efficiency unit:

Metropolitan Police
- Civil staff recruitment and retention
- Police abstractions from duty

Provincial Police Forces
- Scenes of crime function
- Driver training
- Communications
- Sick absence
- Transport management
- Community relations
- Attendance at court
- Stores and printing

DEFENCE

Japanese Companies (Collaboration)

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide details of any projects worked in collaboration with Japanese companies.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Ministry of Defence is involved in no such projects.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation and National Insurance

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will specify the distribution of gains in the Budget from each item where (a) tax or (b) national insurance changes were made other than normal indexation, according to income bands as follows: less than £5,000 per year, £5,000 to £7,500, £7,500 to £10,000, £10,000 to £12,500, £12,500 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £30,000, £30,000 to £50,000 and above £50,000; and if he will indicate the percentage of total (a) tax and (b) national insurance changes accruing to each group and the percentage of the total numbers of (a) taxpayers and (b) national insurance that each group comprises.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 2 May 1989]: The changes in income tax rates and allowances other than those for indexation are the changes to age allowances and withdrawal rate. They will cost about £15 million in 1989-90. About 15 per cent. of this cost will go to taxpayers with income less than £5,000; about half to those with incomes between £5,000 and £10,000 and the rest to those with incomes between £10,000 and £14,000. The total number of taxpayers who will benefit is about half a million; about 2 per cent. of all taxpayers. Further information is not available.

The required information for national insurance contribution in the year 1990-91 (the first full year of the proposed NICs structure) is estimated to be as follows:

Distribution of NICs gains and gainers in 1990-91

Earnings[1] £000s	Gains £ billion	Gains per cent.	Numbers[2] per cent.
<5·0	0·15	5	13

[1] Earners with weekly earners below the weekly lower earnings limit assumed for 1990–91 are ignored. Insufficient information is available on those earning £50,000 and above and so the table shows figures for £40,000 and above.

[2] Numbers are of national insurance class 1 standard rate contributors earning in excess of the lower earnings limit.

Government Debt

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer further to his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North, of 25 April, Official Report, column 470, if he will list any rules relating to the holding of Government debt by insurance companies and pension funds.

Mr. Lilley: I still do not know which rules the hon. Gentleman has in mind. If he would care to write to me about this matter, I would be happy to respond.

Tax Returns

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the numbers of Inland Revenue tax returns issued and received in each year from 1979 to the latest year available.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The approximate numbers of personal tax returns issued at the start of every tax year from 1979-80 onwards are as follows:

	(millions)
1979-80	9·79
1980-81	9·11
1981-82	8·35
1982-83	7·88
1983-84	8·00
1984-85	7·92
1985-86	7·64
1986-87	7·35
1987-88	7·30
1988-89	7·31
1989-90	7·97

No central record is available of the number of returns received.

Tax Fraud

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for 1979 and 1987-88 the number of cases of tax fraud detected for which the amount recovered exceeded (a) £100,000, (b) £500,000 and (c) £1,000,000.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The numbers of settlements in cases of tax fraud, categorised by the amounts recovered, including appropriate interest and penalties, were:

	1988-89
100,000 - 500,000	517
500,001 - 1,000,000	32
over 1,000,000	18

Figures for earlier years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the total number of Inland Revenue staff currently employed in investigating tax fraud, and the number employed in 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: Inland Revenue resources, expressed as units of full-time staff, employed in investigating tax fraud are:

	Number
Year to 31 October 1980[1]	1,265
Year to 31 March 1989	2,752

[1] The earliest year for which figures are available.

Tax Investigations

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of Inland Revenue tax investigations settled (a) with and (b) without prosecution for tax recovered between (i) £0·1 million and £0·5 million, (ii) £0·5 million and £1·0 million and (c) over £1·0 million from 1979 to the most recent year available.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: (a). No records are kept of the total amounts of tax recovered from investigations which result in prosecution. However, the numbers of prosecutions categorised by the amounts of tax in respect of the matters brought before the court, were:

	1979	1988-89
100,000-500,000	3	6
500,001-1,000,000	—	1
over 1,000,000	—	—

Figures for intervening years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

(b). The Inland Revenue keeps records of total settlements only (that is, tax plus interest penalties where appropriate). Details of settlements categorised by amounts of tax alone could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the numbers of staff currently in post in the Inland Revenue division dealing with schedule D evasion.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The number of Inland Revenue staff, expressed as full-time units, employed in dealing with Schedule D evasion for the year ended 31 March 1989 is 2,135.

Tax Statistics

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will give the number of tax units (a) not liable to income tax, (b) liable to income tax at the basic rate and (c) liable to tax at rates higher than the basic rate in (i) 1978-79, (ii) 1988-89 and 1989-90;

(2) if he will give the number of tax units over pensionable age (a) not liable to income tax, (b) liable to income tax at the basic rate and (c) liable to tax at rates higher than the basic rate in 1978-79, 1988-89 and 1989-90.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answers 8 May 1989]: Estimates are given in the tables.

[2] Single people aged 65 and over and married couples in which one or both members are aged 65 or over.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the amount and share of pre-tax income accruing to (a) the top one per cent., (b) the top five per cent., (c) the top ten per cent., (d) the top 25 per cent., (e) the bottom 70 per cent., (f) the bottom five per cent. and (g) all taxpayers in each year 1978-79 to 1988-89 and the amount and share of tax liability for each of these groups.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: Estimates are given in the tables for 1978-79 and 1983-84 to 1988-89. Information for other years could be provided only at disproportionate cost. All estimates of income are based on information reported to tax offices and collected through the annual surveys of personal incomes. For years before 1985-86, estimates exclude employees' contributions to occupational pension schemes and some investment income on which tax is deducted at source. Estimates are based on the surveys of personal incomes for years up to 1986-87 and projections of the 1986-87 survey for subsequent years; the latter are, therefore, provisional.

I regret that information on the bottom five per cent. of taxpayers is not available.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the total amount of tax recovered from tax investigations in each of the individual cases where the recovered amount exceeded £1 million.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The total amount of tax recovered from the 43 investigation cases settled in 1988-89 where in each case the amount recovered exceeded £1 million was £132 million.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of gross income paid in income tax, national insurance contributions and value added tax by (a) a married man with a non-earning wife and two children and (b) a married man with an earning wife and two children at one half one and half, two, three, five and 10 times national average earnings in 1989-90; and what were the comparable figures in 1978-79.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The information requested is in the table.

VAT	—	5·9	6·0	—	—	—	—

Notes:

(1) Average male earnings in 1989-90 are assumed to be £273·10 per week, 7½ per cent. higher than in 1988-89. This represents a real increase of over 30 per cent. since 1978-79.

(2) Child benefit is treated as a negative income tax.

(3) Earners, including working wives, are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted in rate. The figures for NI contributions are financial year averages.

(4) The two earner couple is assumed to have joint earnings equal to the various multiples of average earnings, split between husband and wife in the ratio 60:40.

(5) The estimates of VAT are derived from the 1985 Family Expenditure Survey and are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved. Estimates cannot reliably be made outside the range of 75 per cent. to 150 per cent. of average male earnings.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing tax and national insurance contributions less child benefit, where appropriate, for 1989-90, and comparable figures for 1988-89 and 1978-79, with the multiples of average earnings as half, two-thirds, one, five and 10 times for (a) a married couple with part-time working spouse, (b) a married couple plus two children with part-time working spouse and (c) a single person.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The information requested for a single person is given in the table. Figures for married couples with part-time working spouse have not been given, as they will depend on how much the part-time worker earns.

Tax Allowances

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer at the 1989-90 tax rates announced in the Budget of the married man's tax allowance in excess of the corresponding single person's allowance; how much of this cost is attributable to taxpayers aged below 65 years; and what is the weekly value of this extra relief to the married man paying income tax at the standard rate.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 8 May 1989]: The direct revenue cost, at 1989-90 levels of income, of the married man's allowance in excess of the single person's allowance is estimated at £4.9 billion, of which £4.1 billion is attributable to those aged under 65. The extra relief is worth £7.64 per week to a basic rate taxpayer not entitled to aged allowance.

Budget Gainers

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gain per individual arising from each relevant component of the 1989 Budget, both at current prices and net of indexation for those at one half and three-quarters of average earnings, average earnings, and one and a half, two, five and 10 times average earnings; and if he will provide comparable figures for each budget since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: [holding answer 8 May 1989]: Individuals will benefit directly or indirectly from many Budget measures. These gains will vary according to their specific circumstances, as well as their level of earnings, and it would be impracticable to attempt to estimate the effects of all the measures listed in table 4.1 of the 1989 Financial Statement and Budget Report, let alone for each Budget since 1979. Information on the effects of specific measures may be found in the press notices issued each Budget day by Inland Revenue and Customs and Excise.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Medical Officers

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that any officers who have applied for medical officer training and are subject to disciplinary action are released as a matter of urgency.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The existence of disciplinary charges against prison officers awaiting transfer to hospital duties does not in itself preclude their posting. If the hon. Member has a specific case in mind, perhaps he could let me know.

Police Arrests

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were arrested by the police in the United Kingdom in 1988; how many of those arrested were cautioned and how many were charged, and if he will provide a breakdown by police force area.

Mr. John Patten: The available information on arrests is given in the table. Numbers of persons who were cautioned and numbers prosecuted in each police force area for indictable offences are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", supplementary tables: latest figures are for 1987 (table S3.7(a) for cautions and table S3.3(a) for prosecutions). The coverage of figures on arrests is wider than that of indictable offences, so arrests are not directly related to cautions or prosecutions. An arrest may not result in the arrested person being cautioned or prosecuted.

Prison Officers Association

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he last met the chairman of the Prison Officers Association; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend last invited the chairman of the Prison Officers Association (POA) to meet him on 29 September 1988. Discussion centred on the urgent need for prison officers to end industrial action which was contributing significantly to the unacceptably high number of prisoners—around 1,700—then being held in police cells. A number of more general points were also discussed.

Prisons (Disturbances)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the prisons in England and Wales where inmates have gone on to the prison roof during a disturbance within the prison during the last three years;

(2) if he will list each prison in England and Wales where there has been a disturbance among inmates for each of the last three years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the three years up to 9 May, incidents involving a substantial number of inmates acting in concert and leading to significant damage occurred at the following prisons and remand centres:

10 May 1986 to 9 May 1987
Her Majesty's Prison, Wymott.

10 May 1987 to 9 May 1988
Her Majesty's Prison, Bedford.

10 May 1988 to 9 May 1989
Her Majesty's Prison, Ashwell.
Her Majesty's Prison, Canterbury.
Her Majesty's Prison, Haverigg.
Her Majesty's Youth Custody Centre and Remand Centre, Hindley.
Her Majesty's Prison, Lindholme.
Her Majesty's Prison, Northeye.
Her Majesty's Remand Centre, Risley.
Her Majesty's Prison, Rollestone.
Her Majesty's Prison, Swansea.

Inmates climbed on to the roof during two of these incidents—at Risley and at Canterbury (where one inmate climbed on to the roof).

Domestic Violence

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will consult police chief constables about the value of appointing domestic violence liaison officers in every division;

(2) if he will request police forces to have available an information leaflet on sources of help for victims of domestic violence and to offer it when appropriate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We shall be exploring with chief officers the scope for fresh guidance to the police about these and other issues identified in the recent Home Office research study on domestic violence.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what protection is available to victims of domestic violence if the case goes to court and the assailant is released before the court hearing; and if he has any plans to increase protection.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A defendant may be released on bail subject to any conditions which are considered necessary to prevent his interfering with witnesses or committing offences. If he breaches the conditions of bail, he may be re-arrested. The police also have discretion to provide suitable protection to the victims or witnesses of alleged offences where they consider it necessary. We have no plans to increase the existing protection provided by the police and courts.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many areas the police are involved in a multi-agency approach to the problem of domestic violence; and if he will take steps to encourage such development.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Comprehensive information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost, but I understand that the majority of police forces have arrangements which include helping victims of domestic violence to contact other agencies which can provide help and support. We shall be considering with the police whether anything more needs to be done.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will request police chief constables to record domestic violence incidents separately and to ensure that a note is taken of whether violence is used or threatened;

(2) if he will take steps to improve the police system of recording statistics on domestic disputes and domestic violence; and if he will ensure that a record is kept of the number and nature of calls for assistance coming from individual households where there have been allegations of domestic violence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We shall include the collection and use of records of domestic violence in discussions with chief officers.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up a comprehensive national survey, backed up by local surveys, of domestic violence so as to provide improved information on its prevalence, nature, causes, handling by the authorities, and effect on the victim and enable the identification of more effective preventative measures.

Mr. John Patten: The ministerial group on women's issues will consider the need for further research when it meets next month.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he has given to the police to use when assessing which cases of domestic violence are passed to the Crown prosecution service for its decision on prosecution.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The criteria to be applied when considering whether charges should be brought in cases involving domestic violence are the same as for any other offence.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up a research study to investigate whether there is any difference in the likelihood of a police arrest when violence is domestic rather than non-domestic.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend will consider the possibility of research in the context of discussions with chief officers about domestic violence.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any information on the proportion of requests for assistance from the police that are due to a domestic dispute.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No. Home Office records relate only to recorded crime, and not to all incidents to which the police are called.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is planning to reduce the escalation of domestic violence in the light of the finding in his Department's research study, "Domestic Violence", that domestic violence escalates over time.

Mr. John Patten: I would refer the right hon. Member to the reply given yesterday to a question from the hon. Member for Huddersfield (Mr. Sheerman).

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has regarding the percentage of cases of spousal homicide in which there had been earlier requests to the police for assistance.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The information routinely collected on homicide cases does not enable us to establish whether the homicide was preceded by previous calls for police help.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of the police force has received training in the handling of domestic violence; who has the responsibility for providing the training; who advises on its content; and who monitors how successful it is.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: All new entrants to the police service in England and Wales receive a basic training in dealing with offences of domestic violence as part of their initial training at district training centres. For more senior ranks, there is a session on domestic violence in the inspectors' management development course. These courses will be monitored by the central planning and training unit and the forces themselves.

The provision of further training in forces is a matter for chief officers to decide. They will devise and update any training on the basis of their analysis of operational and training needs in their force area. Chief officers may invite other agencies—such as victim support schemes—to participate in in-force training if they consider that this would make a constructive contribution to the quality of training provided.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will seek information from the Tottenham police force regarding the effectiveness of its multi-agency approach to tackling domestic violence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Evaluating the effectiveness of the Tottenham unit is primarily a matter for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. We shall, however, be seeking further information about the specialist units set up by the Metropolitan police, and about initiatives in other force areas, as part of our review of procedures to deal with domestic violence.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the Metropolitan police for a report on the effects of their 1987 guidelines which called for domestic violence to be treated as seriously as assaults occurring in the street.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Implementation of force orders within the Metropolitan police district is the responsibility of the Commissioner. I understand from the Commissioner that the force order relating to domestic violence is currently the subject of a full evaluation which is due to be completed by the autumn. My right hon. Friend is asking to be advised of the outcome.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there have been any police deaths when police have been called to assist with alleged domestic violence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Records for the years 1977 to 1987 show that 24 police officers were victims of homicide and that none of them died as a result of being called to incidents of alleged domestic violence. Records for 1988 and 1989 are not yet available.

Information about earlier homicides could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the last year for which figures are available, what percentage of incidents involving non-domestic violence are eventually recorded as (a) crime reports and (b) incident reports; and what are the corresponding figures for domestic violence.

Mr. John Patten: I regret the information requested is not available. Some information about the incidence, reporting and recording of domestic violence is published in Home Office research study 107, "Domestic Violence: an overview of the literature".

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the last period for which figures are available, in how many homicides was there (a) a female victim and (b) a male victim; and in what proportion, in each case, the murderer was a spouse, co-habitee or lover of the victim.

Mr. John Patten: Information on victims of homicide and their relationship to the subject is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales" (Chapter 4 of the latest issue, Cm. 498), a copy of which is in the Library. The table gives the figures requested for the years 1982-87.

Homicides currently recorded[1] in England and Wales in which the victim was the partner[2] of the principal suspect

Year	Male victims			Female victims
	Total (=100 per cent.)	Killed by partner[2] Number	Killed by partner[2] Percentage	Total (=100 per cent.)	Killed by partner[2] Number	Killed by partner[2] Percentage
1982	299	15	5	258	120	47
1983	255	18	7	227	96	42
1984	296	17	6	241	102	42
1985	281	16	6	256	116	45
1986	322	17	5	254	123	49
1987	395	23	6	240	92	38

[1] As at 1 June 1988; figures are subject to revision as cases are dealt with by the police and by the courts, or as further information becomes available.
[2] Spouse, former spouse, cohabitant, former cohabitant, lover, or former lover.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in the last year for which figures are available, how many court orders were made under the Domestic Proceedings and Magistrates' Courts Act 1978 to protect wives and children from violence; in what proportion of the cases a power of arrest was granted; and how many arrests were subsequently made.

Mr. John Patten: The available information relates to the number of orders made under sections 16(2), 16(3), 16(6) and 18 of the Domestic Proceedings and Magistrates' Courts Act 1978 in England and Wales. The latest figures are for 1987 and can be found in "Home Office Statistical Bulletin 20/88", a copy of which is in the Library. Information is not collected centrally on the number of subsequent arrests.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his estimate of the prevalence of assault arising from domestic dispute;

(2) what is his estimate, for the last year for which figures are available, of the proportion of the four types of assault, namely common assault, actual bodily harm, malicious wounding and grievous bodily harm, which arose from domestic disputes;

(3) if he will seek to improve the statistics about the prevalence of domestic violence by requesting a sample of chief constables to provide information on the total of all reports of domestic violence in a set period using all forms of police records;

(4) if he will take steps to enable the amount of violence that is domestic to be separately identified in the publication "Criminal Statistics".

Mr John Patten: An estimate of the national prevalence of domestic violence is not available. An ad hoc survey of offences of violence recorded by the police, identifying those offences which were domestic, was carried out in 1988 and it is hoped to publish estimates based on it later in the year.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statistics he has on the number and percentage of times that allegedly assaulted women subsequently withdrew their complaints.

Mr John Patten: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of domestic violence have been pursued by the Crown prosecution service since the service started operating; and what were the comparable figures of prosecutions by the police over the period immediately before the Crown prosecution service came into operation.

Mr. John Patten: It is not possible from the information held centrally by the Director of Public Prosecutions and the Home Office to identify prosecutions in this category.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will recommend to chief constables that unless there are exceptional circumstances there should be an arrest in all cases of life-threatening domestic violence.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend is confident that the police make full use of their powers of arrest where people's lives are at stake. It will, however, be one of the issues covered in discussions with chief officers about domestic violence.

War Crimes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the Hetherington/Chalmers report on war crimes; when he expects to publish the report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. and learned Member to the replies given to questions from the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) on 11 May 1989 and my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, North (Mr. Gorst) on 18 April 1989 at column 92.

Antanas Geicas

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that Antanas Geicas does not leave the juridiction of United Kingdom courts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. Friend has no powers to do so.

Hillsborough Disaster

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Selly Oak (Mr. Beaumont Dark) of 28 April, Official Report, column 702, what steps he is taking to reimburse the South Yorkshire police authority for the costs arising from the public inquiry into the Hillsborough disaster.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A meeting is to be held between Home Office officials and officers of the South Yorkshire police authority shortly to discuss the representations made by the authority over the costs of the inquiries being undertaken by the West Midlands police.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Aujeszky's Disease

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are his reasons for retaining Aujeszky's disease in category 3 rather than moving it to category 1.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 2 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr) at column 81.

London Food Commission (Research)

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food by how much the European Commission has subsidised the London Food Commission's research into European consumers' demand for quality food; whether the questionnaire on 1992, "Consumers and Food Policy" is part of that research; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The Commission of the European Communities has awarded the London Food Commission a contract to study and report on product differentiation in the European Community which involves issues of food standards, food quality and consumer choice. Although the EC Commission has also awarded a grant to meet the costs of this project, I have no precise information regarding its value. The 1992 questionnaire to which my hon. Friend refers is not part of this study and was circulated independently by the London Food Commission before the contract was awarded.

Pollution (Advice)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by year, how many farms in the three counties of Yorkshire were visited by his staff and advised about methods of controlling agricultural pollution in each of the last five years; and what percentage of farms this represents for these counties.

Mr. Ryder: Information is not available in the form requested. ADAS advisers have provided farmers with advice on control of agricultural pollution in response to specific requests, and in the course of advising on other matters.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action has been taken by his Department to give farmers information about bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle; and how many animals on average per week are being identified as having it.

Mr. Donald Thompson: Information about BSE is available from the Ministry's animal health offices and is also provided by the veterinary officers who inspect each suspected case. In addition, information is disseminated through the farming and general press and media and to the farming unions and other farming organisations. On average, 140 to 150 cases are confirmed by post mortem examination each week.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what are the procedures for determining whether cattle submitted for compensation under the bovine spongiform encephalopathy notification scheme are genuine suspected cases;

(2) what information he has concerning the number of cattle submitted as bovine spongiform encephalopathy suspect by their owners but not subsequently accepted as suspect for compensation purposes by ante-mortem veterinary inspection;

(3) what is the total number of bovine spongiform encephalopathy compensation claims submitted to his Department to date; what proportion of claims submitted have been met at (a) 100 per cent. and (b) 50 per cent. of the value of the animal; and what veterinary ante-mortem inspection takes place of cattle that are submitted under the notification procedure for bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Donald Thompson: It is a legal requirement for any owner or person in charge of an animal he suspects may have bovine spongiform encephalopathy to notify the divisional veterinary officer. The case is investigated and if BSE is suspected a restriction notice served confining the animal to the farm. A number of inspections may be necessary before the Ministry veterinary officer is able to decide whether the cause is BSE. If he is able to eliminate BSE as the cause restrictions are lifted. However if he is convinced that the animal is affected with BSE it is compulsorily slaughtered, the head removed so that the brain can be examined for definitive diagnosis and the carcase either incinerated or buried. Once slaughtered an automatic payment of 50 per cent. (up to a ceiling) of the valuation, undertaken when the animal was first put under restriction, is made. If BSE is not confirmed following examination of the brain the remaining 50 per cent. is paid.

The numbers of cattle put under restriction in the period 8 August 1988 (when the slaughter policy was introduced) to 5 May 1989 are as follows:

	Number
Restrictions imposed on suspect cases	4,794
Restrictions lifted because of alternative diagnosis	214
Suspect cases slaughtered	4,101
Suspect cases still under restriction	479
Of suspect cases slaughtered:
positive cases	3,351
negative cases	329
Results pending	421

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) pursuant to his answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 748, on what dates and in respect of which period of time these cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle were reported to him;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 748, what information his Department presented concerning the incidence and location of confirmation of bovine spongiform encephalopathy infection in cattle at slaughterhouses or fatstock markets.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The period of time concerned was provided in the answer given to the hon. Member on 14 April, at column 748. The additional information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is now taking and whether he intends in the near future to take any steps to monitor cattle at non-EEC export approved slaughterhouses for bovine spongiform encephalopathy infection.

Mr. Donald Thompson: The law requires any person who suspects bovine spongiform encephalopathy in an animal under his charge to notify the Ministry. This includes suspect BSE cases identified at slaughterhouses, details of which are being monitored.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all species of animals known by his Department to have been infected by transmittable spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Donald Thompson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 9 March at column 621. BSE has also been transmitted into mice experimentally.

Publicity

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library details of each major publicity campaign mounted by his Department in 1985-86 and each successive year, including in each case the objectives of the campaign, the intended audience and the outcome of the monitoring of the achievement of the intended objectives, and national research conducted for him by the Central Office of Information together with a note of the intended objectives in the campaigns in 1989-90.

Mr. Donald Thompson [holding answer 2 May 1989]: I have today placed the detailed information requested by the hon. Member in the Library. The information supplied covers all MAFF inspired publicity campaigns not just those which may be considered as "major".

SCOTLAND

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, how many projects in Scotland have been in receipt of European regional development fund aid in the period May 1979 to May 1989; and if he will list these in the Official Report.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 9 May 1989]: Over 2,100 projects in Scotland have received European regional development fund assistance since May 1979. Awards in the same period have totalled over £736 million.

While it would not be practical to list every project in the Official Report, examples of major projects which have received funding are the awards of £18·6 million for the Western Isles Cable; £11·2 million for the Scottish exhibition centre in Glasgow; £6·4 million for the Edinburgh city bypass; £5·2 million for the Lochmaddy/Tarbert/Uig ferry and terminals; £2 million for the Carron valley reservoir, Stirling; and £1·7 million for the Windygates bypass, Kirkcaldy.

Also included in the overall project total are projects under the national programmes of community interest for Glasgow (£68·2 million award), Tayside (£20·7 million) and West Lothian (£26·7 million). In addition the 'non-quota' steel, shipbuilding and textile programmes attracted a total of £20 million in assistance.

Assessment of Achievement Programme (Report)

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he intends to publish the 1984 assessment of achievement programme English report.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The report will be published in May 1989, along with the reports on home economics and technical education.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the 1983 P4 sample used by Northern college researchers in the assessment of achievement programme —second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988, was numerically representative of all the divisions in Strathclyde and the remaining 11 regions and island education authority areas.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The sample was not a simple random sample of all Scottish P4 pupils in state supported schools. The sampling proceeded in two stages: first, a sample of primary schools was drawn; and second, from within these schools, samples of P4 pupils were drawn. The numbers of pupils, on which the statistical results of the survey have been reported, were properly representative of Scottish education authorities.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for both the 1983 and 1988 sample used in the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988, the proportions of schools in each of the 11 regions and islands education authority areas and for each education division of Strathclyde.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The assessment of achievement programme is not designed to provide comparisons between education authorities or between schools. The sample sizes used give reliable feedback on performance at national level only. Information relating to identified schools or education authorities is not released under the terms of an agreement with the Association of Directors of Education of Scotland (ADES).

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether similar numbers of children with special needs were included in both the 1983 and 1988 samples used by Northern college in the research work carried out on the assesment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The sampling procedures used in 1983 and 1988 were designed to provide a nationally representative sample of pupils in mainstream state-supported schools.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the total amount of money being spent annually on the assessment of achievement programme through which the Scottish Education Department monitors standards in Scottish schools.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: Planned expenditure in 1989-90 is £170,000.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish details of the 1988 sampling used by Northern college in the research on assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988;

(2) if information on the social background of pupils was collected in 1988 as part of the research carried out by Northern college on the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Forstyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: Details of the sampling procedures will be included in the final report of the 1988 assessment of achievement programme second round mathematics project.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give details of the brief given to Northern college for the preparation of the interim report on changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988;

(2) if he will give the date when the steering committee responsible for the research programme carried out by the Northern college on the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988, agreed to ask for an interim report;

(3) if he will give the date on which the Northern college was asked to prepare the interim report on the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics —changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: [holding answer 11 May 1989]: Preliminary analysis to provide a comparison of performance on common items used in 1983 and 1988 was carried out by the assessment of achievement programme central support unit, Scottish Council for Research in Education. This analysis was discussed at the assessment of achievement programme mathematics project steering committee meeting on 24 October 1988. The committee agreed to give this matter priority and the researchers were asked to prepare a paper which subsequently formed the basis of the interim report.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if Northern college was asked to prepare an interim report on the internal research brief given to them on the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—change in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: An interim report was produced as a result of concerns arising from a preliminary analysis of the survey results.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any discussions took place between the Scottish Office and Northern college regarding the contents of the interim report changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988 before the report was published.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: Yes.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the names of the steering committee responsible for the research programme carried out by the Northern college on the assessment of achievement programme—second round mathematics—changes in performance at P4 and P7 between 1983 and 1988.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 11 May 1989]: The members of the 1988 assessment of achievement Programme mathematics project steering committee are:

	Position held
Mr. D. Dunn	Assistant Headteacher, Banff Academy, Grampian Regional Council
Mr. N. Henderson	Principal Adviser Primary Education, Lothian Regional Council
Mrs. S. Livingstone	Principal Teacher of Learning Support, Wallace High School, Central Regional Council
Mr. D. Macdonald	Mathematics Adviser, Highland Regional Council
Mrs. C. McWhirter	Headteacher, Gilburn Primary School, Tayside Regional Council
Mr. W. Mein	Her Majesty's Inspector of Schools (Chairman)
Mr. G. Thorpe	Scottish Council for Research in Education
Mr. B. Semple	Principal Research Officer, SED.

Local Authority Services

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide capital allocations to regional authorities in order for them to improve services in areas which do not benefit from the full range of local authority services at present.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 May 1989]: Yes. On 27 February my right hon. and learned Friend announced capital allocations to regional councils for the year 1989-90 which were 16 per cent. above those for the previous financial year. This generous level of increase will enable regional councils to carry out capital works of well over £400 million in 1989-90. It is for authorities to distribute these resources in their areas, in the light of the needs of each region.

Community Charge

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will seek to amend the law so that a lower rate of community charge is paid by residents of areas which do not benefit from a full range of local authority services.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 11 May 1989]: No. Local authorities that set the personal community charge payable in their areas at too high a level in relation to the level of services they provide will be accountable to their electorates. That is one of the main advantages of the community charge over the old domestic rating system.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 152

SESSION 1988–89

2nd May–12th May 1989

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
